The Lady and the Cobra.

An Englishwoman residing in India one evening found to her horror that a huge cobra had coiled itself about her veranda rails, near which she sat playing the violin. She was too near the snake to run with safety, so she continued playing while she gradually edged away. At first her only idea was to keep the creature thus engaged while she escaped, but when she had gained a safer distance and perhaps fascinated by the unwonted sight a strange inspiration seized her. She played air after air of different characters.

The effect was magical. That snake behaved like an ardent, hot blooded disciple of Paganini. Every variation in the music, whether of volume or of tone, produced instantly a corresponding change in the attitude of the cobra. If she played a lively dance it swayed its body sideways in quick time and yet in graceful curves. Once she struck a number of false notes in rapid succession on purpose. The cobra winced and writhed in pain, as if suddenly struck with a whip.

Thus the creature behaved like a mad musician till the lady, getting tired of the sport, gradually moved herself farther and farther and then made a sudden bolt into her room and banged the door, leaving the cobra to wander disconsolate to its lair in the fields.—London Chronicle.

His Unlucky Day.

"I tell you what it is," said an old cynic—"I am firmly convinced that every man has his particular days for good and bad luck. Monday is my unlucky day. I have been watching it for twenty years, and nothing can shake me in this belief. I never begin any enterprise, no matter how trivial, or start on any journey on that day. Therefore I make Monday an off day and do nothing but potter round the house. Even in these little affairs everything goes wrong.

"Take the record of last Monday, a fair average, and be convinced: Smashed finger while nailing board on fence. Fell down cellar stairs with coal scuttle. Fell over wheelbarrow while carrying stepladder. Sat down on chair where children had been sucking toffee. Got swindled by peddler. Got thumb pinched in gate. Dropped smoothing iron on foot. Baby got out in yard and was butted by strange goat. Tax man called. While eating supper square yard of ceiling fell on dining table. Went to bed to escape further disaster. Had nightmare. Thought I was falling from top of Eiffel tower. Fell out of bed and broke arm. Looked at clock and saw it lacked fifteen minutes of midnight. Lay still till clock struck 12. Was afraid if I moved before Tuesday was ushered in would have broken neck. Yes, indeed," concluded the man, "Monday is my unlucky day, and I approach it with feelings akin to terror."—London Tit-Bits.

His Saturday Night.

The pretty, broad faced, blue eyed woman was telling how it happened that her husband came home so late of a Saturday night.

"When he goes to get shaved for Sunday," she said, "he waits so long for the line that gets there before him that he goes to sleep in the chair while he is being shaved. Then the barber, who is a friend of his, lets him sleep as long as he likes after he has finished with him. But I don't see how he can fall asleep with a dangerous razor scraping all over his face. couldn't. Could you?"

"It isn't the most plausible excuse I ever heard," said one to whom the question was put, "but it ought to pass on account of its originality."—New York Press.

THEIR NEW JUNE.

It Came With the Reunion After Both Had Suffered.

By MARIE SYLVESTRE.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Katherine Denton was a not unusual product of a workaday great city, yet was she an exception to her sisters. In years she was twenty-two when Dwight Sanborn first knew her, and, added to physical attractiveness, was an indefinable something that reminded you of Dresden china or dainty, delicate silks—something alien to a strident, jostling world of dollars and duns.

Miss Denton was a stenographer in the law office where young Sanborn worked after graduation from the law school and where he subsequently earned a junior partnership. In the first days of apprenticeship to the law he remembered more of Browning than of Blackstone and quoted the philosopher Kant to the neglect of the legal Kent.

It was similarity in tastes that first brought the young people closer than stenographer and employer. Sanborn was dictating a petition to be filed in an action for breach of promise, and his levity evidenced his distaste of the task.

Flippantly he quoted from Mrs. Browning's immortal sonnet, which the incautious defendant had incorporated in a letter destined to be an exhibit in the case:

"I love thee with a love I seemed to lose
With my lost saints. I love thee with the breath.
Smiles"—

The rest escaped him.

"Smiles!" he repeated, in an effort to remember, when Miss Denton interrupted:

"Smiles, tears of all my life, and if God choose
I shall but love thee better after death."

The repetition was impersonal, of course, and the young lawyer let escape him the repressed tenseness of the tones which told of sympathy with the heart that gave the sentiment of the world and more than that for a man who could inspire it.

Sanborn laughed, thanked her for completing the quotation and finished outlining the petition. Afterward he remembered, and a day or two later a daintily bound volume of the Portuguese sonnets reached Miss Denton's desk with Sanborn's card. That was the beginning.

Love came quickly to both of them, and scarcely a year elapsed until Katherine Denton was Katherine Sanborn. Courtship days were dreams of accomplishment and development of higher ideals they believed they wanted to realize.

But, while the woman loved and lived and dreamed, the man deteriorated to the typically masculine. He became brilliant in manipulation of the law's intricacies and was made a regularly retained counsel to a number of imminent and important corporations. His days at the office were filled with the law, and the evenings at home felt the dominating influence of ambition's passion.

Instead of the dreams of sweetheart days everything was subordinated to the quest for legal success. And to Katherine came the thought that even in his profession ideals had been dethroned and new gods set up for adoration and devotion, for Sanborn was at his best when piloting a corporation craft through mazes that baffled the intent of the statutes.

"I'm losing the man I married," she cried to herself in the solitude of neglected wifehood. "He's slipping, slipping, and I cannot prevent it, cannot hold him."

With disillusionment came unrest, with unrest rebellion. To the woman it seemed that all that life held worth while was being taken from her. She was envied as the wife of a brilliant man, one destined to acquire great wealth, but these were not desirable to her.

"Sometimes—I'm not quite happy," she told him falteringly one night when he remarked her apparent illness.

"Nonsense, little girl! We're getting along famously," he told her.

"You are," she answered dully.

"Well, it's for us both," was his reply, but it did not satisfy.

For three years she endured it, and because there were only the two of them life grew lonelier and lonelier until in a moment of desperate aberration she fled his house and left a note bidding him not to seek her.

At first she was in doubt where to turn. She had a little money and felt sure she could secure a position as stenographer and that a few weeks would enable her to regain her old time cleverness in the calling. Then she reflected that Sanborn would naturally seek her in the field of her former employment.

She thought of nursing, and it seemed a haven. To forget one's own griefs in comforting others in distress appealed to her. A fortnight after her flight she was a student nurse in a private sanitarium under the direction of a kindly old physician who had known and loved the girl since her earliest days in New York. Wisdom had come to him with years, and he knew that a few months of the seclusion she sought would bring clearer vision.

At the first shock Sanborn was nigh to insanity. That his Katherine was discontented he had not believed. Yet in her note he saw what they had missed because of his money madness. Right—she was a million times right, he told himself bitterly, and could he find her again they would begin together at the start and, please God, go this time aright. But search was unavailing.

Then came the breakdown, complete, miserable, and the physician prescribed the sanitarium where his wife was learning the rudiments of nursing. Sanborn was put in a room in a part of the building where only the graduate nurses were usually allowed; consequently it was some days before Katherine knew the roof that sheltered her housed Dwight.

The physician installed her in a room adjoining Sanborn's and exhibited enough of the situation to the nurse in charge to secure her as ally in what he hoped to accomplish.

"Hang your medicines! I want Katherine. Do you hear? Get her!" she heard one morning in commanding tones. She started, listened again to his voice in delirium, then peeked cautiously through a half opened door.

He was hardly recognizable, this sallow faced patient with sunken cheeks and bulging eyes. With a quick little cry of pity and love she ran to him.

"Dwight, Dwight," she sobbed, "here is Katherine! Here, dear! Don't you know me?"

"Go away! You're not Katherine. She left me. I've lost her, and I want her. God, I want her!" And tears came to his eyes, as they did to hers.

The wise old doctor permitted her to assist in the nursing, but there were times when she was rigidly excluded. The exclusion hurt her, but the doctor was inexorable, and obedience is the first requirement in a resort of the kind, so she had to obey.

It was the morning of the 1st of June. Katherine was in the room adjoining her husband when she heard him call:

"Oh, Katherine!" And there was a naturalness in the tones that indicated returned reason. She dropped the book she had to rush to him, and in his eyes were remembrance and clear understanding.

"Katherine, it was you, then. I—I thought I dreamed it."

"I'm sorry, Dwight, sorrier than I can tell you. It was all wrong, my going away. I—I want forgiveness," she whispered.

"Forgiveness? You? Rather I should ask it. It has been hard. It seemed cruel, but perhaps it was for our good sweetheart. The boy you used to love is coming back—coming back—coming back, sweetheart."

For a moment he lay silent, his eyes closed. Then he started.

"The birds, dearest, the birds?" he asked.

"It's the first day of June," she whispered.

"June, Katherine, June for us for always," he murmured sleepily as he lifted the hand that lay in his to his lips and kissed it. And like a tired child he slipped into sleep, sweet sleep, with an awakening to happiness and love.

Coloring an Abyssinian Bride.

Western brides have an easier time than their Abyssinian sisters. On the occasion of her marriage an Abyssinian bride has to change her skin. From ebony she has to become the color of cafe au lait. To accomplish this the expectant bride is shut up in a room for three months. She is covered with woolen stuff, with the exception of her head. Then they burn certain green and fragrant branches. The fumes which they produce destroy the original skin, and in its place comes the new skin, soft and clear as a baby's. The elders of the family feed the young woman with nutritive forcemeat balls.

PINEAPPLE BAVARIAN.

Select a ripe, richly flavored pineapple. Cut a circle from the blossom end, reserving the leaves for garnishing. With an apple corer and a small knife scoop out the inside leaving the hollow shell in which to chill and serve the cream. Chop or shred the pulp finely and to one pint of pulp and juice add enough sugar to make it very sweet. Soak one-half box of gelatine in one-half cup of cold water for one-half hour and then dissolve by adding one-half cup of boiling water. Add the dissolved gelatine to the pulp and juice and set the bowl in a pan of ice or in the ice chest stirring the mixture occasionally until it begins to harden in order to keep the fruit well mixed throughout the jelly. When it has become slightly firm fold in one pint of whipped cream and fill the pineapple. Set away to harden. When ready to serve place the pineapple on a glass plate and garnish with the leaves in a circle from the base of the pine. There will probably be more than enough cream to fill the pine; mold the remainder in small tapering cups to give a cone shape. Serve sponge or angel cake with this cream, but do not destroy its delicacy by a rich or highly spiced cake.

The Antalgica
Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Coughs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do yon good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle by The Quimby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

LAND COURT.

To Daniel Brosnan Jr., Catherine Daley, Carrie B Talmadge and Lucy A. Talmadge of Palmer, in the County of Hampden, and said Commonwealth; John J. Sugrue of Northampton, in the County of Hampshire, and said Commonwealth; Patrick W. Sugrue of Warren, in the County of Worcester, and said Commonwealth; Jeremiah F. Sugrue of Waterbury, in the State of Connecticut; Charles L. Gardner, Administrator with the will annexed of the estate of William A. Hastings, late of said Palmer, deceased; any heirs, devisees or legal representatives of Bridget Brosnan, formerly Bridget McCarthy, late of said Palmer, deceased, and not above named; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Antoni Tyburski and Anna Tyburski of Thorndike, in said County of Hampden, to register and confirm their title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Palmer, bounded and described as follows: Beginning on the northerly side of Main street in the village of Thorndike, in said Palmer at a corner of land of Catherine Daley, sometimes called Catherine Dailey, thence easterly on said street to land of Patrick W. Sugrue, John J. Sugrue and Jeremiah F. Sugrue, thence northerly on said land of Patrick W. Sugrue, John J. Sugrue and Jeremiah F. Sugrue to land of Lucy A. Talmage, sometimes called Lucy A. Talmadge and Carrie B. Talmage, sometimes called Carrie B. Talmadge, thence westerly on said land of Lucy A. Talmage and Carrie B. Talmage, to land of said Catherine Daley, thence southerly on said land of Catherine Daley to the northerly side of said Main street at the place of beginning; containing about one half acre.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court, to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the twenty-sixth day of July, A. D., 1909, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Your appearance and answer, as provided in Section 33 of Chapter 128 of the Revised Laws, may be filed with James R. Wells, Assistant Recorder of said Court, at the Registry of Deeds at Springfield, in said County of Hampden, with whom a copy of the plan filed with said petition is deposited.

Witness, CHARLES THORNTON DAVIS, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-eighth day of June, in the year nineteen hundred and nine.

Attest with Seal of said Court. 14-3

TO BUILD NEW CHURCH.

Congregational People to Have Wooden Structure.

THE COST WILL BE ABOUT $20,000.

Building Committee Appointed; Will Go Ahead at Once With the Work; Bids Are In.

The members of the Congregational church held a business meeting Wednesday evening in the parlors of the Universalist church, which they have been using since their church was burned Feb. 1, accepted plans for a new church edifice, appointed a building committee and gave them full authority, and instructions to proceed at once with the erection of the building.

The plans are by Alfred L. Darrow of Boston, and the building committee is Luther H. Gager, Charles F. Smith, Henry G. Loomis, Fred M. Webber and Mrs. Abbie S. Wing. The estimated cost, including grading and some other items not included in the original specifications, is about $20,000.

The new building will be in marked contrast to the former "White" church which stood at the head of Church street for 62 years, its plain square front blocking the view in that direction. It will be about 100 by 56 feet, placed broad side to Pleasant street and about 50 feet back from the sidewalk line. It will not come quite as near the parsonage as did the old building, but will occupy most of the space formerly devoted to a driveway to the horsesheds in the rear. It is to be but one story, with basement, and will be built wholly of wood above the foundations, which will be of brick or granite ashlar. The walls are to be shingled and the roof covered with black slate. The windows will be of white ribbed glass, which diffuses light much better than plain glass. In the center of the front will be a tower 16 feet square and 67 feet high, which will contain, besides the main entrance, a room on the second story, and still farther up a place for the bell.

The auditorium on the first floor will be 40 by 56 feet, at the east end of the building, the pulpit being at the east end of the room with the organ at the left and a place for the choir at the rear of the pulpit; a pastor's room will be located on the right. The pews will be of the kind most in use now, with curved backs and seats; there will be no upholstering, and no carpets on the floor. The pews will be arranged in a semi-circle and the room will seat 280. At the rear of the auditorium and connected with it by sliding doors will be a lecture room 25 by 40 feet, with a seating capacity of 175; these two can be thrown together at will, giving a total seating capacity of 455. On one side of the lectnre room will be the women's parlor, 13½ by 26 feet, and on the other side a primary room of the same dimensions. The main entrance will be through the tower, from which one may pass either into the audience room or the lectnre room. At the rear of the church will be another entrance exactly similar. In the basement will be a kitchen 14 by 24 feet, with complete furnishings, a dining room 39 by 38 feet, and two toilet rooms. The rest of the basement will be occupied by a cellar, in which will be located the heater, coal bins and storage room.

The interior finish will be of cypress, with uncovered trusses; ceiling and side walls are to be finished plaster on wire lath. In addition to the rooms already mentioned there are numerous toilet rooms, closets, etc. The building will be heated by steam and lighted by electricity, and there will also be a modern system of ventilation. The choir loft will be lighted from overhead through prism glass by an indirect system. The location of the new building will close up the former driveway to the horsesheds in the rear, and a new carriage entrance will be constructed from School street, passing to the rear of both the parsonage and the church.

The committee has been soliciting bids for the construction of the building and had received several previous to the meeting, but were not ready to give out the exact figures.

How to Kill Ants.

Numerous lawns in this vicinity have suffered severely during the past two years especially from the depradations of ants. The insects make their nests under the lawn and defy all efforts to oust them, ruining the lawns in a short time. Many methods of getting rid of them have been ineffectually tried, but the following, given by an authority, is said to do the work:

"Thrust a crowbar or a sharp stick to a depth of 8 or 10 inches into the ant hill. Pour in one full ounce of carbon bisulphide and quickly close the opening with dirt. As soon as this is done, throw a wet blanket over the hill to keep down the carbon bisulphide fumes, so as to increase their efficiency in suffocating the ants. Do not remove the blanket for at least an hour. If the hill is large, it will be advisable to make two of these holes, 10 inches or a foot apart. If the ants are under the sidewalk, raise the flagging, if possible, and apply to the earth beneath, as in case of the ant hill, except that the flagging is laid back in place instead of using the wet blanket. If ants are troublesome in the pantry, a free use of insect powder (also sold as 'Pyrethrum' and 'Persian insect powder') upon the shelves and in the run-aways of the ants will usually be effectual in cleaning them out."

WARREN.

The funeral of Mrs. Rebecca Shaw, 73, who died in Westboro Sunday, was held Wednesday afternoon in the chapel of the First Congregational church, of which she was a member. The services were conducted by Rev. T. C. Richards. Burial was in Pine Grove cemetery.

A. L. Converse was painfully burned Tuesday evening while using an alcohol lamp to heat a small soldering iron in the cellar of his home on East Main street. He was working when the lamp suddenly blazed up and as he grasped it to throw it through the bulkhead door it exploded in his hands. Both hands and forearms were badly scorched and the right side of his face blistered and hair singed.

Frank R. Bishop, son of William H. Bishop of Warren, died in Worcester yesterday of paresis. Mr. Bishop was born in Warren March 31, 1853, but for the past 15 years he had not lived here. He was a pattern maker, and was foreman of the George F. Blake Manufactnring company in Warren and East Cambridge for some years. He was a member of Quaboag lodge of Masons since 1876. The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 at the home of his father, and burial will be in Pine Grove cemetery.

OLD COINS FOUND.

Valuable Specimens Dug Up by Laborer in Field in Palmer.

While many have sought for hidden treasure and found reward only in the fascination of the quest, others have had the undreamed treasure thrust upon them in a moment of glad surprise. This last condition was illustrated a few days ago when a workman in the employ of M. E. Goetze of Fentonville in Brimfield, while at work in a cornfield near the foot of Fenton Mountain, struck his hoe into a nest of coins which at first looked like disks of iron, so encrusted were they with the accumulated oxidization of unknown years.

The find consisted of fourteen pieces, which after long washing and scouring were found to be of the following denominations:

5 pennies (copper) of the time of George 11; dates 1719, 1737, 1740, 1744; in fairly good order.

1 half-penny (copper) time of George 11; date, 1743; somewhat worn.

1 half-Batzen (alloy of silver and copper); date, 1724; somewhat worn; a coin of one of the Cantons of Switzerland; face value one and one-half cents, originally.

2 Spanish dollars (silver) of the time of Ferdinand VI; dates, 1751, 1754. These are what are called in Spain the peso, also the pillar dollar, because they bear on the reverse the Pillars of Hercules. These pieces are finely preserved and seem to have been little used.

1 Bay or Pine-tree shilling (silver) date, 1652 This piece has on the obverse a well-defined pine tree in the center of a beaded ring, surrounded originally by the legend MASATHVSETS: : In: The reverse has in the center of a headed ring the date 1652, underneath which are the Roman numerals XII (i. e. : 12 pence) This was originally surrounded by the NEW ENGLAND: AN: DO. This is one of the first coined in Massachusetts, if we may possibly except the Oak Tree Shilling of the same date, and is rare and valuable.

As the two Spanish dollars bear evidence of little usage it is quite probable that these coins were lost by some unlucky wight nearly 150 years ago while passing through that vicinity. Micah Tousley settled in this vicinity as early as 1723, and the southern fork of the Bay Path also passed north of the place where the coins were found. They have been purchased by M. J. Hopkins of Palmer. O. P. ALLEN.

SUICIDE AT MONSON.

Mrs. Norman P. Dempsey Dies By Her Own Hand.

TOOK MORPHINE WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

Leaves Husband and Four Children. Born in Scotland, But Lived Here Most of Life.

One of the saddest deaths of the year was that of Mrs. Norman P. Dempsey at her home on Oak street in Monson early yesterday morning. She was taken violently ill about 6 p. m. Wednesday and died at 3 30 Thursday morning. Medical Examiner Schneider of Palmer pronounced death due to morphine taken with intent to kill. Mrs. Dempsey was born in Scotland in 1879, coming to this country early in life and was educated here. She had been a resident of Monson for the past nine years, an attendant of the Universalist church, and was well known and highly respected by her many friends. She leaves a husband and four children, Norman, Ruth, Winifred and Raymond. The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 30, Rev. Abram Conklin officiating, followed by burial in No. 1 cemetery.

Man Gets Broken Jaw.

Charles Kipp, an employe of the Walsh-Kahl Construction Company at North Wilbraham, was painfully injured Tuesday. The company is at work excavating large quantities of gravel for the West Springfield railroad yards, and a large crane, which in use there, suddenly broke. Kipp was struck on the lower jaw by a small section of the casting, and received a compound fracture. He was removed to the Springfield hospital, and will probably be disabled for some time.

HAMPDEN.

Mrs. Albert Ballard is the guest of her parents in Monson.

Rev. D. H. Stoddard will preach in the Baptist church next Sunday.

John Edward Adams and family of Ohio are guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Adams.

Edward Warren and family of North Dakota are spending their vacation with their father, M. H. Warren.

Rev. C. B. Bliss and Miss Seraph Bliss attended the summer meeting of the Hampden Association on Mt. Tom Tuesday.

The Baptist churches of Hampden and East Longmeadow have both given Rev. George Williams a unanimous call to be their pastor.

The first quarterly conference was held in the Methodist church Sunday afternoon, District Superintendent Dr. J. P. Kennedy presiding. The pastor, Rev. T. C. Martin, reported nearly enough money pledged to repair the auditorium with a metal ceiling, wall paper, paint, varnish, etc. He hopes to raise enough also to repair the vestry. The Ladies' Aid Society appropriated $75 toward the repairs. A committee, composed of the pastor, E. A. Day, Nelson Pease, Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln, Mr. McCray and Mrs. Thomas H. Ingham, was appointed to make repairs on the church, which work will begin as soon as all the money is provided that there may be no debt.

BRIMFIELD.

Walter I. Eaton is home for the summer, having recently graduated from Dartmouth college.

Munroe Tarbell fell from a load of hay Wednesday and broke his arm. He was attended by Dr. R. V. Sawin.

Miss M. A. Tarbell has been attending the summer schools of the Connecticut Agricultural college this week, where she gave a talk Tuesday evening on "The Town Library as a Social Center."

Louis S. Brown, formerly of Brimfield, who is laboratory assistant of the pathological laboratory of the Massachusetts General hospital, spent Saturday and Sunday at the home of C. S. Tarbell.

William T. Eaton, formerly of Indian Orchard, gave a talk in the Congregational church Sunday evening. Mr. Eaton has begun ministerial work in Aroostock county in Maine, under the auspices of the Maine missionary association, and has moved his family this week to Sherman Mills, Me., where they will reside.

Edward S. Butterfield of New York spent Saturday and Sunday at the Sherman summer home and attended to his new enterprise in fruit-growing. Mr. Butterfield has associated with him Mr. Cuyler of New York, the son of the late Rev. Dr. Cuyler, in an extensive undertaking in the growing of fruit, especially apples, on the hill west of Sherman pond and further west on the Fenton farm of 800 acres, which these men have purchased. Mr. Butterfield's foreman is Oscar Stanton of Brimfield, who has employed a number of others in preparing the ground, setting out trees and spraying.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, July 14, 1909.

Ample justification is easy for making this letter a presentation of the visit of the New York legislative committee to investigate the advisability of direct nominations. This issue is foremost in New York politics because Gov. Hughes is making strong efforts to promote direct nominations. Considering his position, it becomes a possible national issue. Further, the matter, on its merits, is of large national importance. By the appointment of this special committee to visit other states, even going to the Pacific coast, to investigate the matter, the attention of the nation is focused upon the act of the Empire state. Still further, this committee is under the suspicion of being packed against Gov. Hughes, both the Republican and Democratic members. Three Hughes senators, in turn, have refused to be made parties to the farce of a nominal investigation, when their minds were made up beforehand, and to-day there is a vacancy on the Senate end of the committee which has not been filled since the third man declined to stand. In a sense, direct nominations are on trial before the country. No other effort has ever been made like this to bring the issue to a definite conclusion. For some reason which may be found in the psychological status of the times, the powers of wealth and legal ability which control the United States and the several states have recently turned against direct nominations. It has been conspicuously so in this state, although, as a Republican witness told the committee to-day doubtless a majority of the people of Massachusetts would vote to-day for direct nominations in preference to the system of delegate conventions, if they had the opportunity. So much for general view. Now come nearer and see what the investigators did and how they did it.

The sessions began Monday afternoon. They ended with this forenoon's session. First was called Deputy Secretary of State, Herbert H. Boynton, the official who has charge of the election machinery in behalf of the state and is better posted upon the election laws than any other man in the state. He was a supposedly impartial witness. Next, occupying the remainder of Monday afternoon and part of yesterday forenoon, was Representative William F. Garcelon of Newton, the ablest partisan leader in the House, a member for three years and the man who led the fight which defeated all direct nomination propositions this year. Then came ex-Representative William F. Murray of Boston, a young Democrat in the Houses of 1907 and 1908, who was strongly for direct nominations. Then came Nathan Matthews and John A. Sullivan, the former the chairman of the first Boston finance commission, the latter a member of that commission and chairman of the present one, both signing the report of the first commission which denounced the system of direct nominations in strong terms, a system which they have abolished utterly for Boston by their new charter, giving, in its place an alternative between the old delegate system of a system of nominating by getting 5000 signatures to a nomination paper, in case of mayor. Of course these men, with all the prestige of their official position and prominent careers in politics, being against direct nominations, gave the committee all the basis they wanted for an adverse report. Representative Shaw followed for direct nominations strongly.

But, in order that there be a pretense of fairness, this forenoon James H. Vahey was called, strongly supporting direct nominations. He was followed by ex-Senator Arthur Harrington, making points to show advantages and disadvantages of the direct system. He is a Democrat. Richard L. Gay, Republican, gave testimony for direct nominations, and Senator Thorndike Spalding said ditto to Mr. Garcelon.

The committee had an outfit of counsel, to conduct the hearings and ask questions of the witnesses, instead of the chairman's conducting the hearings and leading with questions, other members following as they pleased, as is the practice in this state. Judge William H. Knapp was this official. They had a sergeant-at-arms, a stenographer and assistant, and a secretary. Knapp did most of the questioning, but Senator Patrick H. McCarren, Democrat, of Brooklyn, was also a lively questioner. It was evident, almost from the beginning, that Republicans and Democrats on the committee were equally opposed to direct nominations. Taking the testimony they got from Messrs. Garcelon, Matthews, Sullivan and Spalding, it is evident that they have given a very black eye to the system, and that the estimony will be very forcible and quotable. Robert Luce, as the best expert in the state for direct nominations, was requested by the committee to be present and speak, but he is on his vacation in Maine and sent, instead of coming, a long letter strongly for the system, but the committee got everything they wanted for their purposes. They were very skilful in developing points against direct nominations, and they worked the witnesses when they thought it prudent. Mr. Murray was made to appear rather discreditably. He is a clean and able young Democrat. He set forth how direct nominations had improved the politics of Boston by making it possible for young men to enter politics and not leave the offices in the hands of the old politicans. "Then you think that the man should seek the office and not the office the man?" put in one of the New York Assembly men, as if to throw discredit upon Murray's political principles. Again, Murray was showing how there had been an improvement under direct nominations in the quality of the officeholders, and another Assembly man made the point: "Then you think that politicians make better office holders than business men, than bankers and merchants?" Still again, Murray told how, under direct nominations the Democratic party had gained strength and he added that the Republicans had grown weaker in Boston in recent years. Then the critic committee man put this poser to him: "It is a part of our system of government that it shall be a government of parties. It is regarded as sound public policy to have the parties as nearly equal as possible, to have a strong minority party, so that the majority party may be kept in check. Now, by your testimony, the majority party in Boston has gained strength and the minority has become weaker. Is that not so?" Of course Murray had to say that it was and so his testimony for direct nominations was turned to an argument against them.

That point, by the way, of the effect of weakening minority parties was brought out over and over again by the New Yorkers. They missed no chance to bring it in. But their strong card was the report of the Boston finance commission, with its denunciation of direct nominations. Over

PALMER NEWS.

BURGLARY LAST NIGHT.

North Main Street House Entered, Though But Little Taken.

The residence of F. C. Gamwell on North Main street was entered by burglars some time between dark last night and daylight this morning. When the family arose this morning they found that a window of the kitchen in the rear of the house had been pried open and the lower rooms of the house ransacked. The intruders appropriated unto themselves a quantity of silverware and about $2 in money, but did not go to the upper part of the house. It is not known what time the break was made, although Mrs. Gamwell says she heard a noise about 4 o'clock this morning as though a door down stairs was being shut.

It was discovered this noon that an attempt was also made to enter the house of A. W. Holbrook, further west on the same street. An effort had been made to pry up a kitchen window at the rear, but after raising it about an inch the fastening held tight and the attempt was given up. Mr. Holbrook was sleeping on the front piazza and about 3 30 heard a noise in the house; he rose and made a tour of the lower floor, turning on the electric lights, and it is probable that this frightened the thieves away. Three suspicious looking personages were seen on North Main street in that vicinity a little later in the morning.

Forest Lake.

The open-air theatre at Forest Lake has an exceptionally strong vaudeville program to offer for the coming week. The headline feature will be Maude Scott's company of players in the bright, snappy comedietta, "A Newspaper Ad." The scene of the sketch is laid in an exclusive boarding house, New York, and is founded on the mis-directing of a reply to a newspaper advertisement. Miss Scott, a very clever and attractive young lady, as artist in search of a model, (in error) replies to an advertisement of a Bohemian, who is in search of a wife, played by Dick Watts, a capital comedian. The meeting of these two characters causes, through their cross purposes, many ludicrous situations. Thibault will be heard in his unique specialty of picture ballads. Johnny Hoey and Jeanette Mozar will be seen in their twenty minutes of comedy, singing and dancing under the title of "Leggette and Walker." The children will be specially pleased with their great favorite, Don, the talking pony. He is the best educated equine on the stage to-day. Scottie Proven will be on hand with his inimitable Scotch imitations and his famous violin specialty.

Car Collides With Carriage.

A narrow escape from a serious accident occurred on South Main street last Saturday afternoon, when the work car on the electric road collided with a team, the occupants of which were thrown out, but fortunately were not hurt. The carriage was occupied by J. F. Miller and Misses Hazel and Maud Miller of Monson, and was going in that direction. The car was in charge of Motorman F. R. Tryon, who saw the carriage in front of the car. Just as he approached it, the carriage was driven upon the track directly in front of the car, which was going slowly, and Mr. Tryon stopped nearly in time to prevent a collision, but not quite. There was little motion to the car when it struck the carriage however. Two wheels of the carriage were broken, but the occupants were not injured, though considerably frightened. Mr. Miller gave no reason for driving in front of the car, but it is thought that he did not see it or did not realize it was so near.

Death of Mrs. Julia Dwyer.

Mrs. Julia Dwyer, 80, widow of Daniel Dwyer, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. J. Dillon, on Central street early Tuesday morning. Mrs. Dwyer was a native of County Kerry, Ireland, coming to this country in 1847, settling in Bondsville. She lived there until 1886, moving to Palmer soon after the death of her husband. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. M. J. Dilion and Miss Bridget A. Dwyer, both of Palmer, and a son, Patrick of Worcester; also 12 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. The funeral was held yesterday morning at 9.30 in St. Thomas's church, Rev. F. A. Lane officiating at a requiem high mass. Burial was in St. Thomas's cemetery. The bearers were Jeremiah Sullivan, Patrick Fitzgerald, Thomas Dwyer, Dr. D. W. O'Connor, Daniel Clifford and Morris Moriarty.

Monson License Holders in Court.

Fiske G. Rogers, John F. O'Neil, Karl Kretschmar and Edward J. Hughes of Monson appeared in the district court this morning charged with illegal liquor selling on the fifth day of this month, that being a legal holiday when all liquor sales, even by license holders, are prohibited. The cases were set for a hearing the 27th. The complaints were made by Rev. J. M. Gage of the Monson Methodist church, who, it is understood, is acting for the State Law and Order League

Tockwotton tribe of Red Men has voted to have its chiefs raised on the evening of the 27th.

The contract for the pews for the new Baptist church has been given to Theodore Kundtz of Cleveland, O.

Benjamin Johnson has returned from the Springfield hospital, where he has been for the past six weeks.

M. J. Dillon Jr. has been in Boston this week, taking the examinations before the state board of registry in medicine.

William Arecotte has resigned his position at Forest Lake and taken one with the Fisk Rubber Co. in Chicopee Falls.

A letter box has been located at the passenger station, from which collections will be made regularly by the carriers.

The Woman's Relief Corps have discontinued their meetings for the present. The next regular meeting will be held August 20th.

R. H. Paine has resigned as superintendent of the Universalist Sunday school, and A. H. Parker has been appointed in his place.

The special town meeting to legalize the $18,000 of bonds voted for the high school addition will be held at the town house to-morrow afternoon.

David J. Brown, Deputy Grand Sachem, and suite will pay an official visit to Nenameseck tribe of Red Men at Ware next Monday evening.

Undenominational services will be held every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs O. C. Marcy on the corner of Walnut and Pleasant streets.

Carl Linnehan has resigned his position as operator at the Central Vermont freight office and has gone to Northampton, where he has taken a similar position.

L. L. Merrick post, G. A. R., at a meeting Wednesday evening, voted to accept the invitation of Rev. F. S. Brewer to attend service Memorial Sunday next year.

It is announced that the fast express electric passenger cars between Springfield and Worcester, which are to make the run in three hours, will be put on about the last of this month.

Statement is made that the electric express business, which is serving the people of the towns between Springfield and Worcester, has increased 2 ½ times in volume in the past year.

Rev. F. S. Brewer of the Congregational church attended the meeting of the Hampden Association of Ministers at Mt. Tom Tuesday, where he delivered a paper on "The minister in pulpit and parish."

The selectmen have appointed Fred R. Tryon a special police officer for service at Forest Lake. He is in the employ of the street railway company, and will render service about the property of the company at the Lake.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational church will hold a picnic at Minnechaug Farm near North Wilbraham to-morrow afternoon. It is planned to take the 12 15 electric, and all friends of the society will be welcome.

E. T. Wilson of Natick, who is building the addition to the high school building, has been awarded the contract for building the children's group at the epileptic hospital. The price is close to $85,000, without the heating or plumbing.

Judge T. W. Kenefick has been appointed auditor to hear the account of expenses incurred in the separation of the grades between the railroad and the highway in Russell, under a decree in equity between the town and the railroad.

There will be two cooking demonstrations at the office of the Worcester County Gas Company on Church street next week on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons, when Miss Emma Winslow of Boston will demonstrate the possibilities of gas as an ecoumical fuel.

The services of the Congregational church will be held in St. Paul's church building next Sunday as usual. Church service at 3 15, with preaching by the pastor. Sunday school at 2, song service and Christian Endeavor prayer meeting at 7; subject, "The Palace Beautiful.

At a meeting of the Congregational church Wednesday evening it was voted to continue church services during August, Rev. F. S. Brewer, the pastor, announcing that he would forego his usual vacation and supply the pulpit, for which the church passed a vote of thanks and appreciation.

Court Palmer, F. of A., will hold an installation of officers next Tuesday evening, followed by a smoke talk, and refreshments will be served. Deputy Grand Chief Ranger James R. Feehan of Ware will install the officers, the exercises taking place in their newly-furnished hall on Main street.

The big balloon which ascended from Springfield Tuesday afternoon passed directly over the center of the village and was watched as long as it was in sight by many interested spectators. Although at a pretty good height, the sky was clear and the big bag could be plainly seen. It landed in Warren a little later in the day.

Mrs. Margaret J. Stevens, wife of Josiah P. Stevens of Springfield, died in the Springfield hospital Monday, and the body was brought to Palmer Wednesday afternoon for burial in the Palmer cemetery, they having been former residents of the town, Mr. Stevens being for a number of years night watchman at the carpet mill.

The regular Sunday services of the Baptist church in the chapel on Park street, as follows: Men's prayer meeting at 10.15, worship and sermon on "The Unexpected Result" at 10 45; Bible school at 12; Y. P. S. C. E. meeting combined with the praise service at 7; short sermon on "The Misuse of the Scriptures." All are welcome. Service lasts 60 minutes.

Fred L. Peltier, who has been assistant superintendent of the Worcester County Gas Company, has resigned that position to accept one with the Bigelow Carpet Company in Clinton. He is succeeded by Charles H. Durrell of Boston, who has had an experience of 16 years in the gas business. Mr. Durrell will make his headquarters in Spencer.

A water gauge has been installed by the Palmer Water Company, at the request of the prudential committee of the fire district, in the window of Thompson's market. This is so that the pressure of water in the company's mains may be noted at any time and possibly breaks in the mains detected through the diminished pressure. The pressure is about 65 pounds.

These officers of Palmer lodge of Odd Fellows were installed Wednesday evening by District Deputy St. Clair of Springfield: N. G., H. F. Greene; V. G., H. Haley; warden, J. Wilson; conductor, G. W. Adams; inside guard, W. S. Taylor; outside guard, A. T. Howe; R. S. N. G, E. A. Maxwell; L. S. N. G., R. H. Hanscom; R. S. V. G., A. J. Adams; R. S. S., W. H. Morse; L. S. S, P. Butterfield; chaplain, C. R. Russell.

A concrete walk has been laid this week along the Church street side of the property owned by Dr. H. C. Cheney, the old flagstones which had done duty for so many years being removed. Another improvement is the walk on the west side of Walnut street between Main and Pleasant streets and a portion of the way from Pleasant to Park, the work of installation being in progress. This is a much-traveled way and the walk has long been needed.

The firemen, at a meeting held Monday evening, voted to send Foreman Roche and Chief Summers as delegates to the convention of the State Firemen's Relief Association in Plymouth in September. It was also voted to have the entire company enrolled in the state association, the money to be taken from the earnings of the pool table. After this is done, should any member be hurt at a fire, he will receive aid from the state association. F. J. Roche and F. L. Gunn were appointed a committee to make arrangements for music and a place for holding the annual ball of the department.

J. Lewis, proprietor of the Palmer Automobile Garage, was in court last Saturday morning charged with violation of the law which provides that every registered manufacturer or dealer shall keep in a book a record of every automobile owned or under the control of the manufacturer or dealer which leaves his place of business, giving number and letter, number of operator's license, date and time of leaving, date and time of returning and signature of person returning the machine. The case was continued until this morning, when he pleaded nolo and paid a fine of $3. This was the first case in Palmer under the new law.

An alarm from box 42, near the Point of Rocks, gave the firemen—some of them—a run last Saturday afternoon about 1 30. A grass fire along the railroad track was crawling up into a field of grass, but directly away from any building, when some of the women folks got alarmed and requested a passing man to pull the box, which he did, without investigating. Chief Summers, on arriving at the fire, called up the engine house by phone and stopped the teams with the balance of the apparatus, so that only the jumper went to the fire. A couple of lengths of hose were laid and the field wet down to prevent any possible spread of the blaze in the dry undergrowth.

The ball game of the season was played on the driving park yesterday afternoon between teams of—employers and clerks—on either side of Walnut street. The east side won, 21 to 15 There were features in every inning on both sides, and brilliant plays were numerous. Some of the players had not tossed a ball for half a score of years, and the greater portion were strangers to the game in recent years. The east side was captained by Dr. B. E. Loring, and the other players were Chamberlain, Foley, Drexler, Tufts, Holden, Cheney, Thompson and Fortier H. W. Holbrook captained the other team, and his players were Kelliher, St. John, Fogarty, Carrick, J. Foley, Harrington, Connelley, O'Connor and Wilder. The score by innings:

East Side,	3	2	7	3	1	3	2	0	0	—21
West Side,	2	4	0	0	0	6	2	0	1	—15

District Court.

Last Saturday the cases against George Steinson of Brimfield for failure to provide proper shelter and sustenance for his cattle, were again continued for one week.

Monday morning Joseph Cronin was sent up for 60 days for drunkenness. Two other "drunks" were fined $6 each and sent up in default of funds; two paid $6 each and one was released on probation until Sept. 7.

Wednesday John Dorsey of Worcester was given 30 days in the house of correction for drunkenness. John F. Smith of Palmer, for non-support, was placed under bonds of $150 for one year.

Yesterday morning one "drunk" was continued until Sept. 7 for sentence.

BELCHERTOWN.

Robert W. Blake is suffering with ptomaine poisoning in New Britain, Ct.

Miss Dearborn of Brockton has been the guest of Superintendent and Mrs. A. R Lewis.

The selectmen have placed the dog tax in the hands of the constable for collection.

Miss Jean Forrest is spending part of her vacation in Duxbury, as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Buchanan.

Miss Florence Johnson has taken the position as matron at one of the Northfield houses during the summer conference.

Mrs. S. W. Forrest received word last Friday morning of the death of her brother-in-law, T. C. Wilson, of Birkenhead, Eng.

The young men of the Methodist church have organized a baseball nine with Clarence Rogers as captain and Rev. W T. Hall as manager.

Miss Dorothy Holland has returned from a visit in Boston and vicinity and will spend the remainder of her vacation at the home of her mother, Mrs Harriette Holland

The ordinance of baptism by immersing was administered to 11 candidates, four young men and seven young women, in the Baptist church Sunday morning. Rev. Mr. Eno performed the ceremony.

Lorraine Thompson, the two-years-old granddaughter of Dr. Thompson, was badly burned on the left hand last Friday evening, by so-called "sparklers." But for the presence of mind of Olive LaPolice, the result would have been more serious.

F. A. Uphman, superintendent of the Palmer Mill in Three Rivers, has purchased 30 acres of land on the top of Chestnut Hill from Hurlburt & Shumway of Belchertown. Mr. Upham, who is a brother of Mrs. Merrick A. Morse, will build a summer home there.

Judson A. Barrett, 81, died at his home on Pond hill last Friday after a long illness with troubles incident to old age Mr Barrett was born in the house now occupied by his brother, Nelson Barrett, in the south part of Belchertown, and was much respected. He leaves a widow and one son, George N. of Williamsport, Pa The funeral was held Sunday afternoon, Rev. Mr. Eno officiating. Burial was in the old South Belchertown cemetery.

BOSTON LETTER.

and over again did Judge Knapp get it upon the record that this commission had condemned the system. When he had Matthews and Sullivan on the stand, he had plenty of further opportunity, which he improved to the full, of getting into the record furious blows against the system. Both of these men held that direct nominations had resulted in sending inferior men to the Legislature and to the Boston city council, that they destroyed party responsibility and party discipline and that there was a general going to the demnition bowwows under the system. The exception of the Boston school committee and the adoption of the new Boston charter were also repeatedly entered upon the record for the information of the New York people. Such has been this conspicuous hearing.

To-day's action of the new state board of education seems to make it clear that they do not intend to retain Secretary George H. Martin by making him the new commissioner of education. This is much to be regretted. Most of the new board are of less experience in educational matters than Mr. Martin, and though they are made, by the action of the governor in appointing them, his nominal superiors and they can throw him down at their pleasure, yet it is doubtless true that as a practical and progressive educator no one of them can compare with him and he would be of unspeakable service to the board in the new start which the educational system of the state is supposed to make. For the present and until experience has been gained, there is much amateur ability on the board and there is peril to the state in such a situation.

Representative William H. O'Brien of Boston has the great satisfaction to-day of knowing the news that the Western Union Telegraph Company has sent out a notice that hereafter no further charges are to be made for the filing time of telegrams Thus they succumb to the imperative voice of the law just long enough to give him this satisfaction in view of the bill which he introduced.

If the Democratic state committee has friends they will be sure to notice the denials of malicious or careless statements that the committee is in financial straits. The headquarters functionary is much disgusted with the spreading of such rumors and he threatens to withdraw the courtesy of the profession from newspaper men who aid in the circulation of such reports. Some mention has been made again of Gaston as gubernatorial candidate. But Vahey seems to have the pole this year. Good words are said for Charles S. Hamlin as the best candidate on the tariff issue. LANDON.

PALMER TOWN LEAGUE.

Palmer 7, Three Rivers 3.

Three Rivers failed to make good on its own grounds last Saturday, and Palmer won, 7 to 3. There was some good battery work, and the batting of Connor, Shearer, O'Leary and Provo was noticeable. The score:

Passed balls, Mayforth. Time, 1h. 35m. Umpire, Metzdorf. Attendance, 450.

Notes.

Last Saturday's game finished half the league schedule, and the standing of the team is:

	Won.	Lost.	P. C.
Thorndike,	5	1	.833
Bondsville,	4	2	.666
Palmer,	2	4	.333
Three Rivers,	1	5	.166

Palmer now has an opportunity to win first place? Will she?

The Palmer Town League games for to-morrow are: Palmer and Thorndike at Palmer, battery for Palmer, Connor and O'Leary, for Thorndike, Wells and Mayforth; Three Rivers at Bondsville, battery for Bondsville, Clifford and Clifford.

A loyal supporter of the Thorndike team asks the Journal to print the following:

Is it not lawful to give praise when it is deserved? In our recent Thorndike-Bondsville game Bosk, the latest recruit of Thorndike, struck out 12 batsmen, allowed three hits and accepted eight out of the nine chances offered him. He made himself the man of the hour. Having duplicated in retiring 20 of the 27 to be retired, is he not deserving of praise? The Bondsville fans seem to question the heading in last Sunday's Union because the reporter of the game headed his account "Bank Support." We are open to discussion if any of the fans from the town can show us that the heading was not becoming when the Thorndike team fielded with seven errors to their credit. Two of these seven were responsible for four of Bondsville's runs. They claim they reported the game on the Fourth with giving Thorndike the credit of playing rings around Bondsville, but the report of the game did not arouse our ire; and furthermore, we did not consult or steal the knowledge of reporting baseball from our brothers of Bondsville.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
COUNTY OF HAMPDEN, ss.

To either of the Constables of the Town of Palmer, in said County, Greeting:

In the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts you are hereby directed to notify and warn all the inhabitants of said Town of Palmer, qualified to vote in town affairs to meet at the Town House at Four Corners in said Town on Saturday, the 17th day of July, A. D., 1909, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, then and there to act on the following articles, viz:—

ARTICLE 1. To choose a Moderator to preside at said meeting.

ART. 2. To hear and act on reports of Committees.

ART. 3. To appoint Committees and give them instructions.

ART. 4. To see if the town will vote to amend the votes adopted under article 46 of the warrant for the town meeting held 22d March, 1909, so as to provide that the sums raised, appropriated and borrowed under the said votes shall be raised, appropriated and borrowed for enlarging and altering the present high school building and not for furnishing the same.

ART. 5. To see if the town will authorize the Selectmen to stipulate in writing in behalf of the town to indemnify and save harmless the Commonwealth against all claims and demands for damages which may be sustained by any person whose property is taken for, or is injured by, the construction of a state highway westerly of Shearer's Corner, in accordance with the plan and profile in the possession of Selectmen, dated April 11, 1909.

ART. 6. To see what action the town will take in regard to furnishing the high school building.

And you are hereby directed to serve this warrant by posting up attested copies thereof at the different public places designated by the vote of the town, seven days at least before the holding of said meeting, and cause this warrant to be printed in the Palmer Journal at least two issues before holding of said meeting.

Hereof fail not and make due return of this warrant, with your doings thereon, to the Town Clerk, on or before the holding of said meeting.

Given under our hands this 8th day of July, A. D., 1909.

If Your House Needs Painting Use S. W. P.

If your house, or barn, or buildings of any sort, need painting, don't put it off. Now—this spring—is the time to paint. A building that is kept protected from the weather, damp, sun and so on, will outlast by years a building that is allowed to go unpainted or poorly painted. It is much better business to save the building you have than buy a new one. And besides this, well painted buildings are much pleasanter to live in, and bring a much higher price if you should want to sell, than dingy, unpainted buildings.

To arrive at the cost of painting, figure the number of square feet a gallon will cover, and how long it will last, not what the paint costs a gallon. Don't simply figure what it costs to paint your house or barn, but what it costs to keep it painted year in and year out. S. W. P. is honestly made of the best raw materials obtainable, and will prove more economical and satisfactory to the man who pays the bill than either hand mixed lead and oil or the so-called "ready-mixed paint." We are agents for Sherwin-Williams Paint, Prepared (S.W.P.) Come in and we will be glad to discuss the paint and varnish question with you.

License Holders Summoned.

The holders of liquor licenses in Monson—Fiske G. Rogers and Edward J. Hughes, with John F. O'Neil, who until recently held a license at the Monson House, and Karl Kretschmar, his bartender—were summoned into the district court at Palmer this morning to answer to charges of illegal selling on the fifth of this month, a legal holiday when all liquor sales are forbidden. The cases were continued for a hearing until the 27th. The complaints were made by Rev. J. M. Gage of the Methodist church, who is understood to be acting for the State Law and Order League.

Seventeen young ladies from Mouson, Springfield and Providence are camping in Wales with Mrs. R. F. Bradway and Mrs. F. S. Chapman as chaperons.

Mr. and Mrs. George Entwistle and daughter, Mildred, of Brockton have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Entwistle on Oak street during the past week.

Thaddeus L. Cushman and a party of 10 local young men have returned from a week's visit in the White Mountains.

Eugene Manchester of Boston is spending a vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Manchester on Main street.

There will be a basket lunch at the Quaboag country clubhouse to-morrow at 6 p. m., in charge of Mrs L. C. Flynt, Mrs. S. F. Cushman and Mrs. Rufus Fay.

Joseph Fozzy is now clerking for F. S. Chapman previous to his entering his new position as head clerk in a new drug store to be opened in Springfield August 1st.

Word has been received from Worcester of the death of Mrs. Samuel Morris, formerly of this town. She was a resident of Park street and was well known locally.

Rev. O. I. Darling of Warren occupied the pulpit in the Universalist church Sunday in place of Rev. A. Conklin, who was confined to the house by illness.

Mrs. Edward P. Hynes, accompanied by her brother, T. Grady, left Tuesday for Tolley, North Dakota, for a two-months' visit with her son, William E. Hynes, formerly of this town.

Dennis Murphy will be unable to attend to his duties at the Ellis No. 1 mill for some time on account of having the index finger of his left hand badly crushed in the picker yesterday morning.

The Methodist Sunday school picnic was held at Lane's grove, North Wilbraham, Tuesday and it was a success. Everyone had a fine time, games, boating and bathing keeping all busy.

Dr. G. E. Fuller and daughter, Mrs. H. A. Merchant, and grandchildren, Hattie and George Merchant, are spending a vacation at Swampscott, where the doctor hopes to regain his health.

The prizes at the whist party held at the Quaboag Country club house Wednesday afternoon were awarded to Mrs. C. L. Peck and Mrs. M. C. Howe. The affair was in charge of Mrs. Harold Brainerd and the Misses Smith of Palmer.

E. J. Hughes has started the foundation for his new block on the corner of Main and Cushman streets. He is putting in a stone foundation under Bradway's newsroom and Chapman's drug store to give ample support for the hall that is to extend over them.

The Academy bridge over the Central Vermont railroad caught fire about 9 o'clock last Saturday night being set by a spark from a passing freight. Chief Engineer D. B. Needham was called and the fire was easily extinguished by tearing up a few of the planks.

The electric railway company have been given the privilege to build the spur track from Main street to the O. C. McCray property, south of Gage's store, formerly belonging to L. Hutchinson, where the electric express office will be located. The selectmen signed the franchise granting them the privilege last Monday.

Miss Fanny Simpson of New York city, who is well known in Monson as an evangelistic worker, will have charge of the work at the Methodist Episcopal church during Rev. J. M. Gage's vacation which will commence Sunday. Mr. Gage will be in town for the present. Miss Simpson was in Monson last winter and also about 10 years ago and was much enjoyed.

The New England Construction Company of Worcester have begun operations on the new bridge over the C. V. railroad near R. F. Bradway's furniture store. The old buttresses will be used and the new bridge will be reinforced concrete costing about $900 when completed. The contractors for the Borgeson Bridge on Toby avenue will begin their work in a few weeks.

Several of the farmers along the Cedar Swamp road were annoyed the latter part of last week by the depredations of a strangely acting man who invaded their gardens and hen-coops. Whenever he was seen he disappeared rapidly into the woods and no description could be given of the stranger. The proper authorities were notified but were unable to locate him. The man was evidently a tramp who lived on the countryside and has now passed on.

The men employed to fight the elm-tree beetle have become thoroughly acquainted with the work and have proved the efficiency of the machine which will easily spray the largest elms. The ravages of the beetle are very noticeable along the streets and there is some fear that this year's spraying will not amount to much as it was not done early enough; however, the beetle will be greatly hindered in his career for the rest of the season.

District Deputy Grand Master Ernest J. Kittell and suite of Springfield installed the following officers of Monson lodge of Odd Fellows last Monday evening: Noble grand, F. G. Maguire; vice grand, C. G., H. W. Heck; L. S. V. G., L. S. Brigham; I. G., D. B. Needham; O. G., D. F. Pease. After the installation there was a social time and refreshments.

WILBRAHAM.

Painter Has Bad Fall.

Eli Harper fell from a painters' staging Tuesday morning while working at the home of Amedee Vigeant on Walnut street, and landed on the ground, a distance of about 25 feet. He was rendered unconscious, but received no broken bones, being badly bruised. He was taken to his home, where he was attended by Dr. L. E. Dionne.

Oasis Rebekah lodge will not meet during the summer months.

The annual picnic of the Methodist church Sunday school will be held at Lakeside Park in West Brookfield tomorrow afternoon. The members of the Methodist Sunday school in Warren will join them.

A stone wall, 35 feet high, collapsed Monday afternoon about 1 o'clock, carrying an immense amount of dirt with it. It was fortunate there were no children under the wall, as the foot of the high wall is a favorite place for them to play.

H. F. Darby of West Ware fell from a hay rake Monday afternoon and was dragged some distance until others working in the field stopped the horse attached to the rake. One tooth of the rake had penetrated his shoulder to a depth of two inches and he was otherwise cut and bruised.

Town Clerk E. P. Morse states that there are between 30 and 40 dogs in town, according to the returns of the assessors, that are not licensed, and he has been instructed to give the names of their owners to Chief of Police Maurice Fitzgerald with instructions to collect the tax and all costs in connection with it or bring the parties into court.

The body of James Ryan, 90, who died in Everett, was taken to Ware Tuesday morning, for burial in St. William's cemetery. Mr. Ryan formerly lived in Ware and was employed as a gate tender by the George H. Gilbert Manufacturing company. He leaves a son, James, in Everett, another son, John of Ware, and two daughters in Everett.

Joseph Bonchard, 36, died at his home Sunday after a long illness with chronic gastritis. He leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Bonchard of Vigeant street, two brothers, Ulric and Peter of Ware, and three sisters, two in Canada and Mrs. Mary White in Oakham; also two children. The funeral was held Tuesday morning in Mt. Carmel church.

Roch Marchand, 77, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Arthur Giard on Vigeant street Monday night after a long illness. He leaves three other daughters, Mrs. Jean Giard and Mrs. Joseph Dumas Jr., also of Ware, Mrs. Ringuette of Webster, and a son, Rev. Joseph Marchand of Holyoke. The funeral was held yesterday morning in Mt. Carmel church.

Albert Sweeney has bought the barge of William Rohan of the Hampshire House, and is now the sole owner of the barge business. He will continue to run the Hampshire House barge with two horses and another barge with one horse to and from the railroad station, but hereafter patrons of the Mansion and Hampshire House will have to pay the same as all others for riding to and from the depot.

Joseph Quenk, 18, was fined $5 in the district court Tuesday morning for disturbing the peace on Water street Sunday morning. The evidence showed a use of language, to which the complainant, Victoria Milos, and her companion, Mary Bill, took exception as they passed Quenk and some other fellows of his age on their way to church. Associate Justice H. M. Coney presided. Mr. Coney is also chairman of the board of selectmen, and he warned Quenk and all present against similar offenses in the future, quoting a town by-law which permits of imposing a fine of $20 for the use of improper language in a public place.

The case with which Williams' Root Beer is made is only equalled by its economy and goodness.

Any barn or out building can be made water tight by applying Carpenter-Morton Roofing. This Roofing can be applied over the old shingles, if desired, and will make a good tight job that will last for years. This Roofing is cheaper and more satisfactory than shingles or other materials. T. D. Potter, Bondsville, will furnish booklet and samples upon request.

"I bet I'd get married before the year was out and she bet I wouldn't." Who lost?" "Both of us."—Houston Post.

MY LADY'S BRACELET

By GRACE ETHEL WEEKS.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Zeke Jenks, a native of Missouri, at twenty years of age lost his father and gained thereby a farm. Not finding the state big enough for him, he sold his farm and went to Texas, where he invested the proceeds in oil territory, of which the Octopus Oil company kindly relieved him for a consideration. Zeke took the consideration to New York, where he became a great stock and cotton speculator and by the time he was thirty was worth so many millions that he didn't know what to do with them.

Meanwhile Zeke, having determined to see something beside his own country, went to London, where he kept house in fine style. Having made the acquaintance of several impecunious noblemen who gave him introductions (for consideration), it was not long before he found himself a member of the celebrated smart set headed by the king of England. Certain professional beauties of the British capital, without stopping to consider the origin of his accumulations, proceeded to lay plans to transfer as much of them as possible to themselves. A few preliminary efforts in the way of moderate amounts were so successful as to encourage them to strike for something higher.

Among the reigning belles of that season—married belles, not young ladies; the belles of London usually are encumbered with husbands—was Lady Arabella Richmond. Twenty years before her mother had been so favorably noticed by the king as to be unfavorably noticed by some of the puritanical families of England. Lady Arabella had inherited a number of splendid jewels and when she wished to crush a rising rival would put them all on at some aristocratic function.

But unfortunately, the beauty's expenditures being greater than her income, she was obliged now and again to sacrifice a gem, and at the time Zeke Jenks appeared on the London social stage she had reached a point where her stock of jewels needed replenishing. Indeed, without certain additions her supremacy was in danger. She was among the first to take up "that unique American, Mr. Jenks," who by this time was the talk of the town. Furthermore, a rival had appeared from the American colony in the person of Miss Lillian Lee, a native of Maryland, whose beauty, delightful manners and naturally amiable disposition was slowly making her a favorite. Notwithstanding these advantages Miss Lee could not have rivaled the highborn Lady Richmond had not the latter reached an age where even cosmetics failed to preserve her beauty. The charm of the whole matter was that Miss Lee did not seek to rival any one and was unconscious that certain prophets were whispering that she would be at the head of the reigning belles at no distant date.

It was at this time that Lady Arabella was winding her tentacles about Zeke Jenks. He had been growing more and more devoted and gave every evidence that he was not only enraptured with the position he occupied before the London social world, but with Lady Richmond herself. One day he called upon her at the hour for afternoon tea to ask a favor.

Desiring, he said, to make some acknowledgment to a lady of high social standing who had graciously accepted his attentions, he asked Lady Richmond to name a gift that would be acceptable. It being obvious that Lady Richmond herself was to be the recipient, she eagerly consented. She was however, a trifle surprised at Mr. Jenks giving her a limit of £5,000. At the end of a week's inspection the lady gave a jeweler an order to send a bracelet set with a single diamond to the American with the bill, which amounted to the limit he had given her. Then she waited to receive the gift from Mr. Jenks, hoping it would come in time for a function to take place at Buckingham palace, where she expected to meet the "chit from America," as she called Miss Lee, and to blind her with the sparkle of the new gem.

But the gift came not, and the queen of the belles was obliged to go to the palace without it. What was her chagrin to see it on the wrist of Miss Lee! Lady Richmond, after saluting the king and queen, retired and never again appeared as the reigning beauty. The next day she read in a society paper the announcement of the engagement of the two Americans, Mr. Ezekiel Jenks and Miss Lillian Lee.

Zeke Jenks married Miss Lee in the early springtime and instead of seeking further social preferment at the British capital went off to Egypt without even saying goodby to a number of persons to whom the husband at least owed his elevation. But, having paid well for what he had received, he did not consider any farewell necessary.

Before the next London season came on Lord and Lady Richmond appeared in the divorce courts. One of the charges against the wife was that she had sunk £1,000 in a bracelet which she had never received. It came out that when Zeke Jenks had asked her to select a gift, supposing it was for her, being limited to £5,000 and coveting a bracelet worth £6,000, she had directed the jeweler to send it to Mr. Jenks with a bill for £5,000, charging her with the remaining £1,000. The Londoners found this item more delicious than certain scandalous features connected with the trial.

Meanwhile Mr. and Mrs. Jenks were on the ocean returning to America.

Nurse and Nursery Combined.

A recent visitor to Brittany describes in the New Orleans Times-Democrat the two story closed bed of the Breton peasant, in many cases a richly carved and ornamented heirloom and always highly prized.

One day the visitor was expressing her admiration of a certain "lit-clos," when madam pulled the sliding panels apart and revealed the figure of her husband sleepily rubbing his eyes and wanting to know what was the matter. She calmly explained to him that the visitor wanted to see the inside of the bed and then explained to the visitor that her good man had been out fishing since dawn and was very tired. The visitor begged him to close the panels and go to sleep again, which he immediately did, but not before she noticed that he was fully dressed. It seems that the Breton peasant always disappears into the "lit-clos" fully dressed and always emerges therefrom in the same condition. While her husband slept madam enlarged on the advantages of a "lit-clos" in bringing up a family.

"I have had six children," she said, "and when they were little I used to put three in the top story and three in the bottom, then close the panels and leave them with an easy mind."

The Englishman and His "Bawth."

"I had a bachelor apartment at one time with an Englishman, who was always talking about his 'bawth, you know,'" said a New York banker. "The first thing of a morning he said: 'I must take my bawth, you know. Really, now, I must take my bawth—haw, haw!"

"He did so much talking about his 'bawth' that I stayed one morning to see him take it—to see if it was different from the bath of the American.

"It was. This is what he did: First he spread a soft towel at the bottom of the bathtub, then turned on the water until it was about two inches high.

"'So as not to chill my feet, you know—haw, haw!' he explained to me.

"Then he stood on the soft towel in the two inches of water, turned on the spray, sprang through it, leaped out and rushed for a towel.

"He had taken his 'bawth, you know—haw, haw!'"—Washington Post.

Doors in China.

In China doors are often round, leaf shaped or semicircular. In placing them the builder usually avoids having one opposite another lest evil spirits find their way from the street into the recesses of the building. The doorways separating the courts of a garden are usually of an elaborate kind, and the octagonal form is one of the most popular. Religious superstition asserts itself in Chinese architecture, and the universal sacredness of the numerals 3 and 9 is shown in the arrangement of temple doors. There is a triple gateway to each of the halls of the imperial palace, and the same order prevails at the Ming tombs. The Temple of Heaven has a triple roof, a triple marble staircase, and all its mystic symbolism points either to 3 or its multiples.

The Color of Lakes.

Some lakes are distinctly blue, others are of various shades of green, so that in some cases they are scarcely distinguishable from their level, grass surrounded banks. A few, too, are almost black. The Lake of Geneva is azure hued, the Lake of Constance and the Lake of Lucerne are green, while the color of the Mediterranean has been called indigo. The Lake of Brienz is greenish yellow, and its neighbor, Lake Thun, is blue.

Too rich food and not enough exercise is responsible for many bloodshot eyes, while too little sleep often has the same effect.

Motorcycle Races.

By the greatest exertion the Springfield Motorcycle Stadium on Bay Road has been completed and over a score of prominent motorcycle champions are training on it for the grand opening on Saturday afternoon, July 24th. The track is built of 2 inch boards and is ¼ mile in circumference, and 28 feet wide. The banking is at an angle of 40 degrees and the height from the top of the track to the ground is 35 feet. The track, unlike any other ever built, has no straightaways or compound curves and is exactly circular so that the riders, no matter how fast they may ride, are continually going on in a straightaway course. The new surface is so scientifically laid that miles below 40 seconds are confidently expected. The structure contains 257,000 linear feet or over ½ of a million feet of boards, which if placed end to end would reach from Springfield to Worcester. Over 3 million 12, 16-and 20-penny nails have been used, weighing three tons. Every nail in Springfield, Hartford, New Haven and Boston was levied upon to complete the track. The grandstand on the southern side of the track is 100 feet in length and rises five tiers in height and seats 5000 people. The Stadium will accommodate 15,000 people. Entrance for carriages and automobiles is by a subway under the track. On the opening day, July 24th, Jake DeRosier, Fred Huyck, Oscar Hedstrom, Fred Hoyt, A. G. Chapple, Walter Goerke, B. A. Swenson and a host of others will compete. Wednesday in a trial practice spin DePosier rode mile after mile in 47 seconds easily on the new track, while local Springfield and Hartford riders on the stock machines had no difficulty in negotiating the three laps in 55 seconds. New York, Boston, Hartford, Worcester, Brockton, Waltham and New Haven motorcycle clubs are arranging to send delegations to the opening meet July 24th.

MAKES WORK EASIER.

Palmer People are Pleased to Learn How It Can Be Done.

It's pretty hard to attend to duties
With a constantly aching back;
With annoying urinary disorders.
Doan's Kidney Pills make work easier.
They cure backache.
They cure every kidney ill.

Mrs. Frank Root, living on Pine St., Palmer, Mass., says: "About two years ago my husband suffered severely from kidney trouble. He was often in such a miserable condition as to be almost helpless and could not work. His back ached constantly and the kidney secretions were irregular in action. He began using Doan's Kidney Pills and the first box gave him so much relief that he continued taking them until all signs of the trouble disappeared. Doan's Kidney Pills cured him completely. Plenty more evidence of the efficiency of this remedy can be had by calling at Lynde and Gould's drug store."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Lawn Party Next Week.

The second annual lawn party of St. Mary's church parishioners will be held next week Thursday and Friday evenings on the grounds adjoining the church. A committee of about 50 have charge of the affair and a good time is in store for those who attend. Last year's affair was most successful and it is predicted that this year's gathering will equal if not surpass all previous ones. All kinds of amusements will form part of the program, including tug-of-war between the strong men representing Three Rivers and Thorndike; also one between representatives of Div. 17, A. O. H., and St. Mary's Total Abstinence Society. There will be potato, sack, three-legged and living wheelbarrow races for boys and girls. The Columbian band will furnish music. Booths for the sale of candy, ice cream, cake, soda, etc., will be erected, and there will be punch and fancy articles on sale. A lady's gold watch, box of cigars and cut glass bottle will be given away. The advance sale of tickets has been large and is every indication that a large number will be in attendance. A meeting was held last night of the general committee to further the arrangements, and all that is wanted to make the affair a success is good weather. The cars of the Springfield and Eastern street railway pass the grounds, which will be illuminated by electric lights, being wired for the occasion by the Parker-Hamer Co. of Palmer.

BONDSVILLE.

Exciting Ball Game.

A game of baseball was played on the regular ball field in this village yesterday afternoon between a picked nine captained by Rev. E. E. Lupien and a nine from Belchertown, under the management of Rev. W. T. Hale. The game was interesting from beginning to end, the score being nearly a tie throughout the game. The work of Frank Whitdyka, pitcher for the Bondsvilles, was a feature, most of the runs being made through the non-support of his helpers, although there was some good plays made by his support. The best work of the Belchertowns was in their in-field work. The score was as follows, with Eugene Fenton and John Bryan Moriarty as umpires:

Bondsville.	Runs	Belchertown.	Runs
Lemon, c,	3	Canterbury, c,	1
Collins, 1,	0	Pierce, 1	2
Bannister, s,	1	Aldrich, 2,	1
Holden, 2,	1	G. Clough, 3,	4
Keyes, 3,	0	Blackmer, s,	3
Albro, l,	0	Witt, r,	0
Lupien, c,	0	F. Clough, r,	0
Fitzpatrick, r,	0	Hamilton, c,	0
Total,	9	Total,	12

Double plays, Aldrich and Pierce 12, Lemon and Holden, Holden and Keyes; bases on balls, Whitdyka 2, Rogers 2; struckouts, Whitdyka 11, Rogers 9; three-base hit, Whitdyka; two-base hit, Holden.

THE MAN WHO INTRODUCED PEOPLE

By HORACE GAYLORD.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

George Atherton, an American, visited London, and, being without letters of introduction and the English people not being prone to make friends of strangers, he had a lonely time of it. One spring morning he was sitting on a bench in Hyde park looking at some budding plants when a well dressed man sat down on the other end of the bench. Atherton had failed so often at scraping an acquaintance with Englishmen that he determined not to speak to the man, who sat idly tapping his boot with his cane. But good fellowship or the natural animal trait of segregation or whatever it might be called was too strong in him, and he at last remarked:

"Fine morning, sir."

"Very; just the morning for the flowers," replied the stranger genially.

"I have a garden at home across the big pond. I wonder whether my man is giving it the proper attention."

"Our tastes agree. I'm devoted to my garden."

"All Englishmen love gardens. They all love England. And what is England but one big garden?"

"That's what makes America look unfinished to us here. We're used to seeing every bit of ground made beautiful."

"Have you been in America, sir?"

"Never, but I have met several Englishmen who have, and I once knew an American quite well. Introduced him to a life entirely new to him."

"Indeed! He doubtless found you more obliging than I have found your countrymen. I've now been in England a month and have found no one inclined to know me, much less introduce me."

"Have you been presented at court?"

"I have not."

"Then I am sorry to say I can do nothing for you."

"You Englishmen are wedded to your precedents."

"Why should we not be? Our constitution is made up of them. Formerly there was the all powerful king and a subservient people. A man in my position then could introduce the lowest subject into a life entirely strange to him simply at a word from the king. Today the king has only to perform his part of a form. The man is presented at court and may then be at once launched into a social circle from which the sovereign has no power to recall him."

"But what entitles him to be presented?"

"Oh, there are various things. He must be known—in fact, well known—that is, if I have anything to do with his case. He must have done something to warrant my taking him up."

"Does wealth have anything to do with one's securing your good offices?"

"Nothing whatever. I make no inquiries as to the size of one's pocketbook. But there is a feeling among Englishmen that rich people are less liable to be turned over to me to be introduced than those who are poor."

"How would you advise me to proceed in order to be presented at court and then turned over to you to be introduced into society?"

"You must become notable for something. But I must bid you good morning, sir. I have an engagement to make an introduction within a couple of hours. I must leave you."

"Hope I may meet you again," said Atherton.

The man raised his hat politely as he walked away, but made no further reply.

"That's an Englishman all over," muttered Atherton. "He'll take no responsibility in vouching for a stranger. All must go through the proper form."

At that moment who should come sailing down the way but Tredegar, an American resident of London whom Atherton had known years agone.

"Hello, Atherton!" said Tredegar after looking at the departing stranger with apparent interest. "You over here?"

"Yes, I've been here some time. Note that man who has just left me. I wish to ask you about him. He says that a stranger here, after having been presented at court, is turned over to him for introduction into society."

"Oh, he did, did he? To what kind of society did he say he introduced people?"

"The highest circles."

"What else did he say?"

"He said, for one thing, that to be presented at court one must be notable—at least he never takes up any but notable people. He says one doesn't need to be wealthy to secure his good offices."

"He told you all this, did he? Now, hear what I have to say about him. To secure his attention you would have to be presented at court, but it would be the criminal court, and to do this you would need to become notable by committing a murder. The higher circles to which he would introduce you would be the angels. You would more likely fall into his hand being poor than rich, for the expenses of defense are large, and the poor can't afford them. True enough, the sovereign who once condemned a subject to the block by a word now has no power of life and death. This man who occupies such an important position is none other than Calcraft, the haugman."

"And I said I hoped I'd meet him again!"

"If you did he'd introduce you to a life from which even the king couldn't recall you. But I'll take care of you. I know some nice people here."

A Sensible Person.

An old Scottish lady during her last illness was assiduously attended by a physician, to whom she invariably gave a guinea when he came to see her. He told the friends with whom she lived that her death would probably be very sudden, and one day when she seemed to have become unconscious the doctor was hastily sent for. On his arrival he found that his patient had ceased to exist, and, taking hold of her right hand, which was closed, but not rigid, he calmly extracted from it the customary fee, remarking as he did so to the attendant friends, "Sensible to the last!"

Eyes Only For Her.

Martha—You don't mean to say you have accepted that Mr. Spooner? Why, he is so awkward, you know! I saw him holding an umbrella over you the other day, and all the water it caught he allowed to drain right on to you. Nancy—What better proof could I have that he is in love with me? He hadn't the least idea that it was raining, the dear maul—Boston Transcript.

She—Frankly, if you had to choose between me and a million, what would you do? He—I'd take the million. Then you'd be easy.—Life.

Household Hints.

AN INDIAN MELON.

An effort was made at the Paris exposition to introduce corn meal to European cooks, and commendable as this may have been there is room for much extension work of this kind in this country. Too many people think that the whitest of bolted flour is the only medium for their batters and doughs and they leave the toothsome corn meal entirely out of their cookery. On a cold winter day there is no more appetizing or satisfying family dessert than a steamed pudding made from two kinds of meal and dried fruit. Sift together two cups of corn meal, two cups of rye meal, one cup of flour, one level teaspoon of salt and a rounding teaspoon of soda; add two-thirds cup of molasses and three cups of sweet milk. Beat thoroughly and stir in one cup of raisins or dates cut in pieces, then turn into a buttered melon mould and steam three hours. Serve the pudding hot with a molasses sauce. Make the sauce by boiling together, for twenty minutes, one cup of molasses, one-half cup of water, one rounding tablespoon of butter, three tablespoons of vinegar, a pinch of cinnamon and a saltspoon of salt. Lemon juice may be used instead of vinegar, but some acid is needed to give the sauce its best flavor.

WITH THE LATEST IMPROVEMENT,

And a Pair of Loving Hearts to Enjoy Them All.

By NELLE B. RANSOM.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Dorothy Allen sat on the broad, white pillared porch watching the road that wound between the trees to the village. She had watched the road a great deal during the last few days, at first with happy anticipation, but now with helpless longing.

It was bad enough in the daytime, but it was worse when it grew too dark to see who was coming along the road, for then the footsteps grew louder and louder until she was certain that they were going to turn toward the white pillared porch, only to die away again, leaving her sick with fresh disappointment.

On the previous Sunday evening the vague, beautiful something which had enveloped the whole summer, making it different from any other summer of Dorothy's life, had suddenly taken definite form. A look, a touch, a word or two, and she had found herself without a doubt that John Porter loved her and that she loved him, but he had gone away without any open declaration, and, though Dorothy had watched the road till her eyes ached he had not returned.

"I might have known it," she said to herself disconsolately. "He is too proud and independent to ask the daughter of a rich man to marry him. Now that his work on the new electric road is finished he will go away, and I shall never see him again."

Dorothy's neighbor, twelve-year-old Gladys, came skipping across the lawn, a very perky pink bow topping her yellow tresses. She perched herself on the broad arm of Dorothy's chair.

"I've been reading such a lovely story!" she exclaimed.

"What was it about?" queried Dorothy, with languid interest.

"Oh, it was about a brave knight in shining armor," said Gladys, "and he loved a fair and noble lady who loved him in return. But she had gold and jewels and all that sort of thing, you know, and he hadn't a thing but his charger and his good sword, and so he could never, never ask her to marry him."

"Well," asked Dorothy as Gladys paused for breath, "what happened then?"

"Oh," replied Gladys, "there was nothing for the knight to do but to ride away to the wars, and the princess just sat in her tower and pined and pined till at last she died. Oh, it was perfectly lovely—so sad and sweet."

"It seems to me," said Dorothy, almost crossly, "that it would have been much more sensible for the knight to stay and marry the lady instead of leaving her to pine and die."

"Why," cried Gladys in disgust, "that would have spoiled the whole story."

She jumped from her perch and was dancing down the steps, but turned to call back:

"Oh, say, that Mr. Porter has gone away, hasn't he? I saw him at the station Monday with a suit case in his hand. Aren't his eyes just too handsome for anything? I'm sorry he has left, aren't you?"

Then, having unwittingly destroyed Dorothy's last vestige of hope, Gladys cheerfully departed.

A gray haired man with a keen but kindly face came and stood in the doorway behind Dorothy, noting with anxious look her drooping figure. He moved uneasily once or twice and then came out to where she was sitting.

"You ought to be playing golf this fine weather," he suggested.

"I'm rather tired of golf, father," replied Dorothy.

Mr. Allen took a turn up and down the porch.

"Has that young Porter left? I haven't seen him for several days," he asked, with a carefully careless air.

"I really don't know. Probably he has," replied the girl, sitting very straight and assuming an air even more carefully careless than that of her father.

Mr. Allen after a few more turns and anxious sidelong glances betook himself again to the house. Since the death of Dorothy's mother ten years before the bond of sympathy and understanding between him and his only child had grown unusually strong, but here was a situation which he felt in nowise competent to handle.

Left to herself, Dorothy's sprightly indifference suddenly vanished. Her hands fell listlessly into her lap, and she leaned her head wearily against the back of her chair. So he had gone without even coming to say goodby! Well, there was no use watching the road any longer.

"It's just like Gladys' story," she sighed. "The knight has gone to fight his battles, leaving the poor princess in the castle to pine alone, only, being a twentieth century princess instead of a mediaeval one, I'm afraid I can't die of love. Girls never do nowadays. I suppose that's one of the modern improvements," she continued whimsically.

An endless procession of dreary years seemed to stretch out before her. She shut her eyes, and two large tears glistened on the long dark lashes.

Some one was coming across the lawn, but the footsteps made no sound on the thick turf. When they began to ascend the steps Dorothy opened her eyes with a start, and John Porter stood before her.

There was a wonderfully tender light in his eyes and a determined expression about his mouth. How handsome he looked! How tall and strong he was! Dorothy caught her breath.

"I thought you had gone away," she managed to say.

"Only down to the junction to meet the chief engineer. He wanted to talk over my next job with me. It's a little bigger than anything I've ever undertaken before. But you didn't think I'd go without seeing you again, did you, Dorothy, after Sunday night?"

"I didn't know," murmured Dorothy, her eyes on the big buckles of her colonial slippers.

John Porter seated himself on the porch rail and looked straight at Dorothy's knee.

"Dorothy," he said, "I know it's the general opinion that a man has no right to ask a girl with a rich father to marry him until he can provide for her the things she has been accustomed to having, but it seems to me that if a girl really cared for a man she could be happy with him even if she had to do without some of the things she'd been used to."

"I wonder," thought Dorothy, "if it can be possible that the hero has modern improvements too."

But she kept her eyes on the big silver buckles, and John Porter continued speaking with deliberate conviction. "And that is why I dare to tell you that you can afford to give up some of the things that money can buy and come and share with me the things that can't be bought. Will you come, Dorothy?"

"Yes," said Dorothy, meeting his look squarely at last, "I will come."

Half an hour later they remembered Dorothy's father.

"He will never allow you to marry me," cried John Porter, "a common builder of roads!"

"A rising young engineer," corrected Dorothy. "Come on. I'll manage papa."

"Papa," she announced, pushing aside the portiere with one hand and drawing her lover after her with the other, "I'm going to marry Mr Porter."

Mr. Allen roused himself from the depth of a leather chair where he had been taking an afternoon nap, started a little at the sight of the young man and looked quizzically at his daughter.

"Your prospects for doing so certainly look a little brighter than they have for the past few days," he remarked.

"Where have you been keeping yourself, Mr. Porter? Dorothy and I had about concluded that you were too busy 'doing things' to give us any attention. But, if Dorothy has made up her mind to marry you, you may as well submit first as last. Do you think you can support her?"

"Not in the style to which she has been accustomed," said John Porter. "But she is willing to dispense with luxuries."

"When I married Dorothy's mother," said Mr. Allen, "she had a little money, which I invested, and after her death I put the investment in Dorothy's name without saying anything to her about it. It's really surprising how that little sum has grown. The income from it is now quite considerable." He named a sum more than twice John Porter's salary. "I should think this, added to your present income, might provide for love in a cottage."—

"With all the modern improvements!" said Dorothy softly, with shining eyes.

The Bride's Introduction.

They had been married only two weeks and were going to spend the evening with friends. They were to meet friends of their friends there. It was expected that there would necessarily be a show of dignity when the bridegroom and the bride arrived. All of the company were there and sitting around looking their sweetest when the bridegroom and the bride arrived. A bride always makes dignity essential.

It happened that the bridegroom was the particular friend of the host. The latter had never met the bride. She was coming into an entirely new circle. It was expected when the Newlyweds arrived that Mr. Newlywed would stammer and blush when he introduced Mrs. Newlywed as his wife. Not so for this boy. He sauntered in preceded by the dignified bride. Everybody in the parlor bristled up. But it wasn't to be a bristling affair at all. Mr. Newlywed simply swept around, caught the host by the arm and led him before the bride.

"Dave, meet the old lady," he said.

Dignity exit. Everybody laughed and got acquainted in a hurry. The good natured introduction of the host to the bride loosened up the strings of social stress. The "old lady" found herself among friends.—Indianapolis News.

Juliet Got the Light.

At a small seaport town a star actress of the third magnitude appeared as Juliet.

"I cannot do justice to myself," she said to the manager, "if I do not have a limelight thrown on me when I appear at the balcony."

"We ain't got no limelight, miss, but I think we could get you a ship's blue light," replied the obliging manager, and to this the lady agreed.

The lad who went to the shop to buy the blue light brought back a signal rocket, which was given to him by mistake. The prompter took the rocket in good faith.

Romeo—He jests at scars who never felt a wound.

(Juliet appears. Prompter lights a match.)

"But, soft! What light through yonder windows breaks?"

(This was the match lighting the fuse.)

"Arise, fair sun!"

The sun, or, rather, the rocket, did rise with a terrific hiss. Juliet was knocked off the balcony, the fly borders were set on fire, and the theater was filled with a sulphurous smoke, while the audience, which was fortunately a small one, made a stampede to the doors.

Since then "Romeo and Juliet" has always been looked upon in that town as a dramatic work that could not be witnessed without personal danger.—London Express.

The Foiler Foiled.

Recently one young man bet another that he could not break an egg placed on the floor of their room by hitting it with a barrel. The second young man promptly took the bet.

Thereupon the first young man carefully placed an egg in a corner of the room, just where the walls made a right angle, so that it was impossible for the other to hit the egg with an ordinary barrel.

Then the first young man proceeded to gloat.

But the other suddenly produced a revolver and broke the egg by tapping it smartly with the barrel of the weapon. Then he demanded the money.

There was quite a dispute naturally. Finally the two agreed to submit the question to the editor of a sporting paper. In due time the answer came. The sporting authority decided that the second young man was the winner of the bet, since the other had not specified in any way what kind of barrel should be used for the destruction of the egg.—New York Times.

It Ignited.

Little Rollis, four years old, came to the table, where we had tomato soup, of which he is very fond. Being very hungry, he could not wait for it to cool, but hastily ate two or three spoonfuls; then, laying down his spoon, he exclaimed, "My goodness, that soup is so hot it makes sparks all down me."—Delineator.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Camden, N.J.— "It is with pleasure that I add my testimonial to your already long list—hoping that it may induce others to avail themselves of this valuable medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered from terrible headaches, pain in my back and right side, was tired and nervous, and so weak I could hardly stand. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored me to health and made me feel like a new person, and it shall always have my praise." —Mrs. W. P. Valentine, 902 Lincoln Avenue, Camden, N. J.

Gardiner, Me.— "I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—Mrs. S. A. Williams, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner Me.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

A Rattlesnake Trap.

Rattlesnakes were the most dangerous wild animals with which the early settlers of New Jersey had to contend. They were very numerous, and their bite, if not treated properly at once, was generally fatal. In "Stories From American History" F. R. Stockton cites an incident which gives an idea of the abundance of the rattlers in the new colony:

In a quarry from which the workmen were engaged in getting out stone for the foundations of Princeton college a wide crack in the rocks was discovered which led downward to a large cavity, and in this cave were found about twenty bushels of rattlesnake bones.

There was no reason to believe that this was a snake cemetery, to which the creatures retired when they supposed they were approaching the end of their days, but it was without doubt a great rattlesnake trap.

The narrow, winding passage leading to it must have been very attractive to a snake seeking retired quarters in which to take its long winter nap. Although the cave at the bottom of the great crack was easy enough to get into, it was so arranged that it was difficult if not impossible for a snake to get out, especially in the spring, when snakes are very thin and weak, having been nourished all winter by their own fat.

Thus year after year the rattlesnakes must have gone down into that cavity without knowing that they could never get out again.

The Romance of Other Years.

"One of the most beautiful smiles ever seen upon the face of mortal suffused itself on the countenance of Lord St. Orville as he fell at the feet of Julia in a deathlike swoon." You probably suppose that this sentence is an extract from some schoolgirl's novelette; but, in fact, it comes from a novel which eighty years ago was seen on the tables of most people of taste and culture. That is the style which was delectable in the brave days of old.—London Telegraph.

MONSON LIQUOR CASES.

Long Hearing in District Court On Tuesday.

DECISION RESERVED UNTIL MONDAY.

Anti-Saloon Agents Tell of Purchases at All Three Licensed Places on July 4th and 5th.

The continued cases of the landlords of the three hotels in Monson for illegal selling of liquor on Sunday, July 4, and Monday, July 5, the latter a legal holiday, were heard in the district court on Monday. The complaints were against Fiske G Rogers of the Century Hotel, John F. O'Neil and Karl Kretschmar of the Monson House, and Edward J. Hughes of the Gilmore Hotel, and were made by Rev. J. M. Gage of the Methodist church of Monson Guy C. Ham of Boston, of the Massachusetts No-License League, appeared for the prosecution; D. F. Dillon of Palmer appeared for Rogers and Hughes, E E Hobson of Palmer representing O'Neil and Kretschmar. After a hearing lasting from 11 until after 6, Judge Keneflck announced that a decision would be rendered next Monday, after he had had time to go over the evidence. The testimony was taken in full by a stenographer for the prosecution.

The first witness was Fred J. Weyand, 22, of Boston. He stated that he is an agent of the Anti-Saloon League, and has during the past two years worked in similar capacities for the police departments of Lynn, Natick, Somerville, and other places. He went to Monson on the morning of Sunday, July 4, in company with Fred B. Perkins. Went to the Monson House and after remaining a few minutes returned to Palmer on the electric Went there again on the morning of the 5th about 10 30; he had a bottle of beer to drink and Perkins bought a bottle of rum to take away. There were 10 or 12 others there (in a little back room, not the regular barroom) drinking and ordering drinks. Was there about 20 minutes, during which time no food was served or ordered by anyone. He looked about the court room and picked out Kretschmar as the man who had sold them the liquor. About 11 45 the same day they went to the Gilmore Hotel, where he had a bottle of lager and Perkins had whisky, which they drank; picked John Purcell out of the crowd as the man making the sales. At the Century House on the 4th he had a bottle of ale and Perkins a bottle of beer. At the same place on the 5th he had a bottle of ale and Perkins a glass of whiskey; Perkins also had a half-pint bottle of whisky to take away. When he went to the office he told the man behind the desk he wanted a drink and was told to ring the bell; couldn't find the bell and the man rang it for him; in response another man came from somewhere; he said "Come this way," they followed and he served them. Picked out Timothy O'Keefe as the man who rang the bell and Charles J. St. Lawrence as the man who sold the liquor.

On cross-examination stated that he went to Monson to investigate the conditions on instructions from Mr. Ham. His pay was to be $4 per day and expenses, without regard to whether he secured evidence or not. Asked for no food at any of the hotels, just went up with the crowd and drank with them. Every place was wide open, except that the rooms in which they were served were small rooms at the rear of the regular barrooms but connected with them. Didn't see O'Neil or Kretschmar about the Monson House on the 4th and noted nothing illegal there that day.

It was agreed that Perkins's testimony would be the same as Weyand's, so his cross-examination was started without delay. This failed to shake the original story except that he and Weyand varied 10 minutes in the time they arrived at the Monson House on the 5th. He also identified the men who served them. Neither Weyand or Perkins could remember having seen the proprietors of the hotels—Rogers, Hughes or O'Neil—about the hotels the days they were there.

Rev. J. M. Gage testified that he met both men in Ellis's woods on the morning of the 5th, and after making a thorough search of their persons and finding no liquor, in company with Myron E. Wright, kept them in sight until they entered the Monson House; kept the entrance of the hotel in sight until the men came out and followed them to his barn, where the bottle of rum was turned over to him. The same method was employed when the bottle of whisky was secured at the Century House, the search and delivery being in other places. The bottles were submitted in evidence. On cross-examination Mr. Gage couldn't remember having publicly said, in effect, soon after the first of last May, that "the town has voted license and licenses have been issued; I promise that before a year they will be revoked," but had said, to individuals, that if illegal selling began there would be prosecutions. He had started proceedings because he believed that illegal selling was being carried on. It was agreed that Mr. Wright's testimony would be the same as that of Mr. Gage and he was not called to the stand.

The prosecution rested at this point, and Judge Keneflck refused to rule that there was no evidence that the sales were made with the knowledge of the proprietors of the hotels. Here was a business, he said, involving a large investment, and it was unreasonable to suppose that the proprietors were ignorant of what was going on.

After a conference between the defendants it was stated to the court that evidence would be produced to show that each and every defendant had given his employes strict orders not to sell on Sundays and holidays to others than bona fide guests of the houses; that the persons authorized to make sales of liquors to guests at such times would testify as to the receipt of such instructions and would testify that they had never been disobeyed. This was done. Messrs. Rogers and Hughes testified that they had given their bartenders strict instructions not to sell on Sundays and holidays except to guests of the houses, and then only as permitted by law. O'Neil had given Kretschmar the same instructions, the latter having no interest in the hotel, although his name appeared on the license. Hughes and Rogers, on cross-examination, stated that they were not accustomed to supervise the Sunday sales to guests; O'Neil said he kept a personal watch at his place.

George T. Haggerty, John J. Purcell and Frank C. Hunter, employed by Hughes, Charles J. St. Lawrence and Timothy H. O'Keefe at the Century, all testified to having received the strictest orders re-

WOULD BE A SENATOR.

Brookfield Man After Nomination in Worcester-Hampden District.

The Republican town committee of the town of Brookfield has issued to the voters of the Worcester-Hampden Senatorial district the following appeal for the nomination of Walter B. Mellen of that town this fall. Mr. Mellen called on Palmer and Monson voters last week.

"The Republican Town Committee of the Town of Brookfield respectfully present Mr. Walter B. Mellen as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Senator for the Worcester-Hampden district.

"Mr. Mellen was born in Brookfield, Sept. 24, 1860, where he has always lived and where, since his early manhood, he has been successfully engaged in farming. While highly successful as a farmer his activities have taken a broader scope and he has been deeply interested in the affairs of his town and has been called by his townspeople to serve them in the offices of overseer of the poor, road commissioner and selectman, and also on many important committees, some of which were entrusted with the expenditure of large sums of money, in all of which positions he was an able and efficient public servant In 1902 he represented the Fifth Worcester Representative District in the General Court of the Commonwealth.

"Mr. Mellen was for three years President of the Worcester South Agricultural Society; and he is also a Past Master of the Brookfield Grange. He was for several years chairman of the Republican Town Committee of Brookfield and has always been an earnest and active Republican and a generous supporter of the party.

"We therefore heartily commend his candidacy to the Republicans of the district, believing him especially well fitted by ability and experience to represent this district in the Senate of the Commonwealth."

DROWNED AT BONDSVILLE.

Body of Dennis Shea Found in Canal Monday Morning.

The body of Dennis Shea, about 30 years old, was found in the canal near the gatehouse of the Boston Duck Company in Bondsville Monday evening. It is not known how long it had been in the water, but no one had seen him since Saturday. From the condition of the body it is thought it may have been in the water most of the time since then. As there were no marks of violence death was apparently due to drowning, whether intentional or accidental, Dr. Schneider, the medical examiner, was unable to determine, but probably accidental. Very little is known of Mr. Shea. It was thought he had friends in Holyoke and they were notified. As they did not claim the body it was buried Wednesday morning, from Sullivan's undertaking rooms, in the cemetery at Four Corners.

WARE.

Death of Mrs. George H. Coney.

Mrs. Alice A., 57, wife of George H. Coney, died in Woodstock, Ont., Saturday afternoon. She had been in poor health the past few years, and her death was not unexpected. Mr. and Mrs. Coney were married in Vermont in 1874, and went to Ware at once. They lived in that town from that time until last April, when they went to Woodstock to be with their daughter and only child, Mrs. J. Alfred G. Webb The latter was formerly Miss Ethel H. Coney, and was well known as a soprano singer in Monson, Westfield and other towns. Mr. Webb was formerly of Westfield. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon in the East Congregational chapel, Mrs. Coney being a member of that church for many years. The bearers were Sidney McHenry, Arthur Smith, Allan Burke, Ferdinand Leclerc, Thomas Emerson and Thomas J. Lester, all former members of Mrs. Coney's Sunday school class.

Bousquet—Brodeur.

Miss Hermina Bousquet, daughter of Mrs. Aurelia Bousquet of Parker street, and Alfred Brodeur of West Warren were married in Mt. Carmel church Tuesday morning by Rev. John T. Sheehan, who celebrated the nuptial mass after the ceremony. The witnesses were Alfred Brodeur of Hartford, Ct., and Henry E. Bousquet of Ware. A reception was given the newly-married couple at the home of the bride after the church service. Mr. and Mrs. Brodeur left Ware at noon for Cohoes, N. Y., where they will pass their honeymoon. On their return they will live in West Warren.

Dr. and Mrs. Parisseau of Pleasant street are visiting relatives in New York.

Miss Annie Riley and Miss May O'Brien are spending two weeks at Hampton Beach.

Rev. O. J. Fairfield has decided that he will not go to San Diego, where he preached during June, but will remain in his pastorate at the Unitarian church.

The derailment of a freight car on the Boston and Maine railroad just east of the station yesterday morning delayed the train for Northampton, which leaves Ware at 11 07, about three hours. The accident was caused by a drawbar which fell from one of the cars.

AFTER 150 YEARS.

Ancient Landmark Will Remain In History Only.

NEW BRIDGE TO REPLACE OLD ONE.

Some Interesting History Concerning the "Hastings" or "Scott" Structure Near Wire Mill.

The assured construction of a fine concrete bridge by the towns of Palmer and Monson and the State Highway Commission, to take the place of the old "Hastings" bridge near the Wire mill on the road to Springfield, doing away with a sharp and dangerous curve and a steep hill, as well as a crossing of the electric track, has inspired the following article on the situation and the history of the present structure, which is owned by the towns of Palmer and Monson jointly. The new bridge will be wholly within the town of Palmer but will be maintained by the highway commission.

The recent concert of action between the State Highway Commission and the towns of Palmer and Monson, whereby this long-used bridge will go out of commission to give way for another location wholly in Palmer, a short distance down the stream, when, after its erection by the three contracting parties its future maintenance will be taken by the state, seems to call for a brief sketch of its past history.

Bridges, like other objects which have served a useful purpose for many decades, gather associations about them, which are not soon forgotten, for they become a part of the life of the community, having contributed their full share in its march of progress.

William Scott came from Springfield about 1730 and built his house a few rods this side of the present bridge. At that time there was no bridge but a small footway for the crossing of bridle horses, no carriages then being used in this locality. But it is to be presumed that an energetic man like William Scott did not allow much time to elapse before some provision was made for a simple foot bridge at least by falling a path across the stream. We are left in doubt just when the first bridge was erected here suitable for the passing of ox carts as well as of horsemen, but probably soon after 1740, for in 1747 a similar bridge was built near the present Whipple bridge. We know for a certainty that a bridge was at this point in 1760, when Scott's bridge is given as the northerly boundary of Monson, after a portion of Brimfield had been set off to Palmer. The terms of the General Court in the decision between Monson and Palmer were so indefinite that no agreement could be reached by the two towns, and as a consequence the bridge and the highway towards Springfield suffered from neglect for several years until public complaint was lodged with the General Court, when that body explicitly directed that Palmer should maintain and keep in good repair the bridge near the dwelling of William Scott in Palmer. This was ordered February 7, 1763.

It seems however that Palmer became weary of bearing the burden of maintaining the Scott bridge for, at a town meeting held on March 26, 1781, it was "Voted to petition the General Court to be Eased of Burding of Repairing and Maintaining the Bridge over Checape river near Mr. Scotts and for the futer it may be Repaired and Maintained at the Cost of the Commonwealth or the County and that Mr. William Scott Draught Said Petition and send the same by the next Deputy." Doubtless the petition voiced the sentiment of the meeting if it was a little lame in its orthography and grammar. The petition to the General Court was not granted at once, for in a town meeting October 7, 1784, it was "voted that the Southeast and Southwest Quarters of Palmer, Procure eight Men Each Quarter to Repair the Bridge over the River by Lt. William Scott's and alow them out of their Highway Rats and alow one Galon of New Rum upon the town Cost." How thues have changed, the other fellow pays for his rum now.

The next we hear of the Scott bridge is in this record September 16, 1802: "Voted to rebuild a bridge over the River near the widow Scott's."

I seem to lack the date when the arrangement was entered into between Palmer and Monson to jointly repair and maintain this Scott bridge, which in later years has been known as the Hastings bridge from Alvin Hastings, a prominent farmer who owned the Overlook Farm for many years. The bridge has been often repaired and rebuilt several times since 1802 and once, if my memory serves me correctly, went down under a heavily-loaded team. Its days of usefulness are numbered, and soon a new and beautiful structure will take its place, more enduring if not more useful. O. P. ALLEN.

Deputy Sheriff George A. Bills, who has had the dog warrant, has reported that all the dogs owned in town have been licensed.

Nobody But Father.

Nobody knows the money it takes
To keep the house together;
Nobody knows of the debt it makes—
Nobody knows—but father.

Nobody's told that the boys need shoes
And girls hats with a feather;
Nobody else old clothes must choose—
Nobody—only father.

Nobody hears that the coal and wood
And flour's out together;
Nobody else must make them good—
Nobody—only father.

Nobody's hand in the pocket goes
So often, wondering whether
There's any end to the wants of those Dependent—only father.

Nobody thinks where the money will come
To pay the bills that gather;
Nobody feels so blue and glum—
Nobody—only father.

Nobody tries so hard to lay
Up something for bad weather,
And runs behind, do what he may—
Nobody—only father.

Nobody comes from the world's cruel storm
To meet dear ones who gather
Around with loving welcome warm—
Nobody does—but father.

Nobody knows of the home life pure,
Watched over by a mother,
Where rest and bliss are all secure,
Nobody can—but father.

INTEREST TO FARMERS.

Summer Field Meeting of State Board of Agriculture Next Week.

The State Board of Agriculture will hold its summer field meeting for this year at Whalom Park, near Fitchburg, next Wednesday, uniting with the Massachusetts State Grange for that purpose. The demonstration work which has been a feature of former meetings will be continued at this meeting, and an entirely new programme has been provided, none of the subjects having previously been demonstrated before Massachusetts audiences.

The demonstrations will all be held in the morning, the forenoon from 10 o'clock being devoted to this part of the programme. Beginning at that hour Mr. E. H. Forristall, Farm Superintendent at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, will demonstrate how to produce and put up certified and steamer milk. The College has made a specialty of producing certified milk and Mr. Forristall is thoroughly familiar with the subject. He will have with him samples of milk at least three weeks old.

At 10 45 Prof. F. C. Sears, professor of pomology at the same institution, will give a demonstration of the best methods of selecting apples for exhibition, the proper methods of judging the fruit and of box packing, as practised by Western apple growers. The subject of apple growing is receiving a great deal of attention at this time and this demonstration comes very pat with this interest and that awakened in the coming New England Fruit Show.

The third and last demonstration will be by Prof. J. A. Foord, also of the Agricultural College, where he is head of the Division of Agriculture. He will illustrate the best methods of selecting, breeding and judging corn. This will cover the three subjects of greatest importance to Massachusetts farmers—milk, apples and corn—and round out what should be the most interesting demonstration programme ever arranged by the Board of Agriculture.

At 12.30 the exercises for the morning will close and there will be an hour's intermission for lunch. There will be no regular dinner provided, but there are excellent facilities for the enjoyment of basket lunches at the Park, and a good restaurant, which will amply supply all who prefer to patronize it.

The afternoon programme will be in the hands of the State Grange, State Master Carlton D. Richardson having it in charge. There will be speaking in the dancing pavilion, Hon. N. J. Bachelder of New Hampshire, Master of the National Grange, being the principal speaker.

Whalom Park is easily reached by trolley on the Fitchburg and Leominster Street Railway and connecting lines.

State Grange Field Day Next Week

The State Granges will hold a field day on the grounds of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, next Thursday. An important feature of the program will be the address by Hon. N. J. Bachelder, Master of the National Grange. The local Grange is planning several features to supplement the program of the State Master. The Granges of this and adjacent towns are cordially invited to join in this field day and to inspect the work and equipment of the college and experiment station.

BRIMFIELD.

Former Resident Visits Town and Recalls Interesting History of Previous Times.

Francis M. Angell of Wilbraham and Thomas E. Read of Dummerston, Vt., spent the day in Brimfield Wednesday. Mr. Angell has a special local interest as he was one of the early drivers of the Southbridge and Palmer stage coach. This was from 1855 to 1857, when the line was owned by Capt. Alonzo Dewey and Salem Wells, and by Mr. Wells alone. Mr. Angell's reminiscences of stage coach days and the facts relating to the period of his connection with that life are interesting and valuable. He states that Capt. Dewey, who gave the Southbridge and Palmer line its distinction by its equipment and management, took Mr. Wells into partnership and afterwards sold the line to him. In those days six horses were occasionally used either because of big loads or muddy traveling. The stage "team" was composed oftenest of white horses, which it is said have more endurance.

Mr. Angell says that Salem Wells sold to Elias Turner, whose son, Perlin Turner, drove; that Milton Turner did not own the Southbridge and Palmer line, but the Southbridge and Charlton line, where he suffered the disaster of being burned out, losing 40 horses and all his stage property.

Mr. Read is visiting Mr. Angell at his home in Wilbraham and came with his friend to Brimfield on an errand to which peculiar interest is attached, namely to get a pair of boots which George A. Webster, the local shoemaker, had been making for him. A man who can make men's boots is hard to find, as the wearing of boots has gone out of fashion. Mr. Read used to go to Brattleboro, Vt., to have his boots made but the man who made them for many years had died. He then heard of Frank Eager in Palmer and determined to employ him to make a pair of boots; for having worn that style of footwear till he was 73 years old, Mr. Read did not propose to change. He found that Mr. Eager had gone out of business and was directed by him to Mr. Webster in Brimfield, where he came to be measured for boots a few weeks ago. Mr. Read wore his new boots as he left town, expressing his satisfaction at having attained his purpose and obtained the boots for which he had journeyed over 70 miles.

Mr. Read will now return to Vermont, having enjoyed the interval spent with his friend in Wilbraham during which the boots were being made. The two venerable men had a pleasant day in Brimfield, looking over the scenes with which Mr. Angell used to be so familiar, taking dinner at the hotel and visiting the public library where the guest book was honored with their clearly-written autographs. Mr. Angell was in the Civil War and was a comrade of the late Capt. Lincoln of Brimfield, although not in the same company. An interesting incident of his visit to the library was his meeting with Arthur A. Stoughton, the designer of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument of New York just as Mr. Angell had been looking at a picture of it and a piece of marble of which it is made, as scenes associated with the war have a special interest for an old soldier. Mr. Angell is now in his 75th year and is active and vigorous. He described Brimfield as a town of unusual wealth when he drove the stage, and remarked that fields are not in such a high state of cultivation as of old, but thinks the town a very attractive one.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 30, 1909.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Help the Palmer firemen next week by buying your Forest Lake theatre tickets of them; they get 25 per cent of the proceeds; if you buy them at the theatre ticket office the boys get nothing.

PALMER NEWS.

HELP THE FIREMEN.

Will Have Benefit All Next Week at Forest Lake Theatre.

Next week will be a busy one for the members of the Palmer fire department, for that will be their "benefit" week at the Forest Lake theatre, when, through the courtesy of the manager, J. W. Gorman, a certain percentage of the receipts derived from tickets sold by members of the department will be given to the relief fund. This percentage applies only to tickets sold by members of the department, and not to those sold at the theatre entrance. The members have been given 5000 special tickets, each good for any p rformance next week, and have already begun selling them. Patrons of the theatre who wish to help the boys in this matter will do well to buy their tickets of the firemen, as they get no benefit from tickets not sold by them. The boys get 25 per cent of the sales, and as all tickets next week are to be 10 cents they hope to add the full $125 to their relief fund.

They Own Real Estate Now.

Eighteen of the 24 building lots on Long Island which are go be given away to theatre-goers at Forest Lake have been disposed of. Each visitor to the theatre is given—free—a numbered ticket, on which his name is written and the ticket dropped in a box. There will he four drawings in all, the last one next Monday evening. The persons whose names are on the six tickets drawn each time get a building lot on Long Island free. The first drawing was Thursday night of last week, the lucky ones being Arthur S. Campbell, Mary A. Oliver and Daniel Foley of Palmer, George J. Fauteux of Bondsville, Mrs. Fred Ally of Gilbertville and Paul Godaire of Ware. On Monday evening the lucky ones were George B. Shaw of Palmer, Nellie Lawlor of Thorndike, Eddie Ouimette of Three Rivers, Eileen B. Loy and Ed Fitzgerald of Bondsville, and Sarah A. Leonard of Monson. Last evening the winners were William H. Fenton of Three Rivers, Miss D. Anthier of Palmer, James Sheehy, Dennis McCarthy and George Bracken of Ware, Mrs. H. W. Lancey of Monson.

Fire Scare Last Evening.

There was a small fire at the Hotel Burns abont 8.15 last evening, which was put ont quickly without an alarm being rung or other than a few persons interested knowing anything about the matter. Employes in the composing room of the Journal office, the second building from the hotel, noticed a large quantity of sparks issuing from the big chimney over the rear portion of the hotel, and notified the proprietor, C. H. Burns, who was making himself as comfortable as the weather would permit, with no thought or wish for any hotter time. Investigation showed that the chimney was on fire and going pretty merrily. A small chemical extinguisher was brought into play and the flames extinguished at once. The chimney was pretty hot, bnt no damage was done.

Church Society Buys Land.

St. Mary's Episcopal mission has purchased of Dr. George A. Moore the property on Foster street recently purchased by him of Mrs. Lillian Hills. It consists of two houses and a tract of land, and will make a very pleasing location for a chnrch building. It is not known when the society intends to build.

Will Give Church Organ.

Word has been received by the Baptist church society that Mrs. J. E. Rokenbaugh of New York will give the society $2000 for an organ for their new church. Mrs. Rokenbaugh was formerly Miss Jennie Eager, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Eager of Palmer, who have lived here many years and been long-time members of the church.

Tax Rate $15.

The assessors have so far completed their work that they are able to announce the tax rate, which will be $15 on $1000; last year it was $17.20.

William Weeks has moved his family from South Main street to Maple street.

The selectmen will hold their regular monthly meeting next Monday afternoon.

T. J. Crimmins has bought of J. F. Foley his honse on Central street and will take possession at once.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Slattery of Worcester are gnests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Slattery.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Kempton and son Reginald, who have been at Old Orchard, Me., for a week, are now at Block Island.

Earl Cordner and Miss Helen Reed were married at the Congregational parsonage Monday evening by Rev. F. S. Brewer.

J. L. O'Brien, signal operator for the Boston and Albany railroad, bas moved his family from East Brookfield to South Main street.

A meeting of the directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society will be held at the Converse House to-morrow evening at 7.15.

E. E. Hobson went to Conway this week, where he gave an address before Morning Star lodge of Masons. He is staying at Chesterfield for a few days.

The bids for the North Main street sewer were opened Wednesday evening by the selectmen, but the awarding of the contract was held up until later.

Undenominational services will be beld every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. O. C. Marcy on the corner of Walnut and Pleasant streets.

St. Paul's Universalist church will discontinue Sunday services until the first Sunday in September. The Thursday evening prayer meetings will be held as usual.

Michael Laford of the wire mill district was overcome by the heat Tuesday while in Springfield. He was able to return to his bome on one of the late afternoon cars, and has recovered.

The regular monthly meeting of the firemen, which was to have been held next Monday evening, has been postponed for one week, on acconnt of the firemen's benefit at Forest Lake.

There is a snggestion that the stores of the place close next Thursday, the day of the excurion to Boston, to allow the merchants and their clerks an opportunity to visit the Hnb at the redneed rate of fare.

Francis B. Barton, who has taught in Concord for the past two years, will sail for Enrope in a few weeks, where he will take a special conrse in French at the University of Paris, and later intends to study German at Berlin. Mr. Barton is a graduate of the Palmer bigh schoool and of Williams college.

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company has petitioned the selectmen for a location for underground conduit through Main street, preparatory to putting their wires underground before the paving is begnn, and a hearing will be held at 2 o'clock next Monday afternoon in the selectmen's room.

The Baptist church services in the Advent chapel on Park street next Sunday will be as follows: Morning prayer meeting for men at 10 15; worship and sermon on "The Best Test of Truth" at 10 45; Bible school at 12; evening praise service at 7, sermon subject, "A Worn-out Excuse." All are invited.

The show at Forest Lake next week is announced to be "the banner bill of the season." It will include The Agards, marvelous gymnasts; Inez Lawson, with songs on the cornet; Seymour's family of canines and the Four Musketeers, singing comedians. There will be dancing each evening in the pavilion after the show.

These chiefs of Tockwotton tribe of Red Men were raised Tnesday evening by W. H. Armstrong, Deputy Grand Sachem, of Springfield: Sachem, George H. Gallup Jr.; senior sagamore, George Branford; junior sagamore, Edwin A. Buck; prophet, Frank L. Morway; first sannap, Grover C. Goodes; second sannap, George F. Emmons.

Arrangements have been completed by Chief Summers of the fire department and Manager Colin Oakes of the Wright Wire Company, whereby the wire mill fire company can be called out without calling out the Palmer department. When the wire mill men only are needed the big alarm whistle on the mill will be sounded without the bell on the engine house; the signal will be 123, and the regular men in the fire district will not respond.

The Boston and Albany railroad announces the first excursion of the season from Palmer to Boston for next Thursday. This year a new departure is made in cnting out the previous sail to the beach or visit to the ball game, and the price is reduced to $1, leaving the excursionists to provide such "extras" as they may individually prefer. The special train will leave Palmer at 7.09 in the morning and Boston at 8 10 in the evening.

The services of the Congregational church, which have been held in the afternoon, will be held during the month of August in the forenoon. Next Snnday at 10 45 the pastor will preach on the theme, "Joy as a measure of our power." Snnday school at 12, song service and Christian Endeavor prayer meeting at 7; subject "Life Lessons for me from the book of Acts." All services are held in the Universalist church building and a cordial invitation is extended to all to attend these services.

The fast express cars between Springfield and Worcester on the electric road are to be put on next Snnday. The cars will be the fine ones which ran all winter on the St. James avenue line in Springfield; they have been refitted and eqnipped with fast motors, and the time between terminals is to be redneed from 3½ hours to three. There will be two rond trips daily, the cars to Worcester reaching Palmer at 10.25 a. m. and 3 25 p. m.; from Worcester to Springfield the time at Palmer will be 11 35 a. m. and 4.35 p. m. There will be only ten stops between the two cities, and the runs are put on to cater especially to through travel.

Hannah S. Sawyer, 88, wife of Nicholas K. Rogers, died this morning abont 8 45 at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Horace R Paine on South Main street, after an illness lasting only about twelve days. Mrs. Rogers was born in Maine, and was married there in 1853 to Mr. Rogers, the couple removing to Three Rivers in 1872, where they lived until abont seven years ago, when they came to Palmer and have since lived with their daughter. Besides her husband she leaves two children, L. S. Rogers of New York and Mrs. Horace R. Paine of Palmer. The funeral will be held from the house at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, with burial in the Palmer cemetery.

District Court.

Last Saturday the continued cases of George Steinson of Brimfield, for failing to provide sufficient food and shelter for his cattle, were adjnsted. Fines of $25, $15 and $10 were imposed, and appeals were taken, bail in the sum of $100 in each case being furnished. One "drnnk" was fined $5 and given until to-morrow to pay.

A Saturday-night row at Bondsville bronght Officer Collins and three Poles into court Monday morning. The officer had started to separate two fighters and was assanlted by a friend of the two. Keitan Duda was fined $5 for drnnkenness and $10 for interfering with an officer; Stanlaw Zehka was fined $25 for assanlt on an officer, and the case against him for drunkenness was dismissed. Staney Gnla was fined $5 for drnnkenness and $20 for assanlt on an officer. Joseph Rodak of East Wilbraham was fined $10 for an assault. John Stewart of Monson was fined $6 for drunkenness, and committed for lack of funds. One "drnnk" was released on probation until Sept. 7 for sentence.

Wednesday morning Patrick Crimmins, who had been released on probation Monday, was surrendered, having been "fnll" Monday afternoon, and was sentenced to the house of correction for three months; he appealed and furnished $100 bail.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Celia B. Wheaton of Brimfield was fonnd gnilty of an assault on Mrs. Mary E. Moore, the case being continued nntil Aug. 14 for sentence. One "drnnk" paid a fine of $6 and another was given until Sept. 7 to find a like snm.

WARREN.

Miss Grace D. Gonld is spending the week with her sister, Mrs. Charles Eger, at Indian Neck, Ct.

Walter Clark has retnrned to Boston after spending several days with his father, Botsford R. Clark.

A horse attached to one of John F. Killegrew's delivery wagons ran away Tuesday morning. It had been left standing in front of C. H. Arsenean's house and was frightened by some children backing a handcart so that it hit it. The animal started to rnn and was only stopped by falling at the corner of Sonthbridge and Crescent streets. The horse was badly scratched and the wagon broken.

James D. Norton has been engaged in repairing the dam on the Qnaboag river near his grain mill. There was a bad break in the dam last year dnring high water and it was very expensive to make repairs, so that work had to be stopped while the whole dam was being repaired. The present low water gave a favorable opportunity to repair the rest of the dam, and Mr. Norton intends to plan a large part of it so that it will last for some years to come.

The extension of Washington street, extending from the corner of Burbank avenue to the West Brookfield road, was graded last week by Snperintendent of Streets Fred M. Sylvester. This section is about 1000 feet long, and is over the layont of the original "Bay Path" and was discontinued as a bighway by the town in 1869, but after a lapse of 40 years it has been found that the convenience of the property owners in that section demands that it be restored. When completed it will make Washington street abont three-fourths of a mile long and will connect the West Brookfield road with the road to Stnrbridge and cnt off nearly a mile in distance and a long hill climb. The "Bay Path" has in most cases been discontinned except where it is nsed as a cart road, bnt the selectmen are making the grade and surfacing of this section eqnal to any of the town roads, as they expect it will be mnch used.

Monson Liquor Cases.

garding Snnday and holiday selling, as their employers had stated. They were also sure—every one—that they had never violated the law in this respect. Each admitted that he was on duty as clerk at their respective places on the days claimed by Weyand and Perkins, but denied ever having seen either man or having sold them liquor. Kretschmar testified that he did not get np until 8 15 on the morning of the 5th; had breakfast and then sat in the office nntil 10 15, when he took an electric car to Holyoke, where he remained until the next forenoon. He did not see Weyand or Perkins the 5th and did not sell them anything. He had had the same instrnctions as the others. On a later date—he thought it was the next Satnrday night—he sold Perkins some Medford rum, Perkins insisting on having that particular liquor; shown the bottle submitted in evidence as having been sold by him, he swore that they had never had any of that kind of bottles in the place.

For his clients Mr. Dillon argued that there was nothing in the character or standing of the prosecution's two witnesses which would tend to make their testimony of more value than that of others, and there were numerous witnesses, not defendants, who had testified directly contrary to them. The only places where bottled goods were secured were those where no one was on duty when the men entered, and he believed they got those goods by "reaching" for them It is not for the defendants to prove their innocence, but for the prosecution to prove that, beyond a reasonable douht, they are guilty. If sales were made as testified to they were deliberate acts on the part of agents and directly contrary to the orders of the proprietors, who could not be held unless it could be shown they had knowledge and gave authority for the acts.

For O'Neil and Kretschmar Mr. Hobson said that there had always heen a feeling against "spotter" evidence, which was what the cases depended on. It was natural for the employes of the government to wish to "make good," bnt there were discrepancies in their testimony as to the time of arriving at the Monson Honse, and witnesses for the defense had shown that Kretschmar had left before the alleged sales were made.

For the prosecntion Mr. Ham stated that there were three points at issue: Who were the proprietors of the hotels? whether there had been violations of the law on the 4th and 5th, and whether the sales had been with the knowledge and consent of the proprietors. The first had been settled by admission. On the other two there were flat denials; there was not even an admission that liqnor had been sold, snpposing the men to be guests of the hotels, so it was a square issne between witnesses. The commonwealth's witnesses had worked in similar capacities for the police of other places, and of necessity they mnst be competent and trnstworthy to be so employed. Their material points were all corroborated by the witnesses for the defense, as all bnt Kretsohmar admitted being at the hotels on the dates and honrs olaimed. He ridiculed the suggestion that the bottled goods were stolen by pointing ont that it was claimed the barrooms were all closed tight on the days the liquor was procnred and it would be impossible to steal it. In Kretschmar's case the exact time was not an important matter; the question was whether liqnor was sold, the bottle of rum had been in Mr. Gage's possession since the 5th, and Kretschmar admitted selling Perkins Medford rum; he had ample time to do this dnring the honrs he admitted being in the hotel the 5th. It was reasonable to snppose that the employes of the several hotels were reasonably satisfied their actions were satisfactory to their employers. There was evidence that every defendant knew that the law was being violated on his premises or was wilfnlly neglectful of its enforoement, and in either event, nnder the laws of the Commonwealth, they had violated the terms of their licenses.

PALMER TOWN LEAGUE.

The Metropolitans were scalped by the Indians last Saturday, 3-2, at Thorndike Poor base rnnning in the first inning lost Palmer the game after three clean hits had been made. Wells won the game for Thorndike with his fine base running, scoring one rnn for himself and another while running for an injured player. With any other man in his position it is probable the runs—or at least one of them—would not have been made. Connor pitched an unusually fine game for Palmer, allowing only one hit and that a scratch. Wells also pitched a fine game. The hits and errors colnmns in the score wonld indicate a different reanlt then the one shown. In the seventh inning a two-base hit by O'Leary brought in the two runs scored by Palmer. The score:

SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINTS & VARNISHES

If Your House Needs Painting Use S. W. P.

If your house, or barn, or buildings of any sort, need painting, don't put it off. Now—this spring—is the time to paint. A building that is kept projected from the weather, damp, sun and so on, will outlast by years a building that is allowed to go unpainted or poorly painted. It is much better business to save the building you have than buy a new one. And besides this, well painted buildings are much pleasanter to live in, and bring a much higher price if you should want to sell, than dingy, unpainted buildings.

To arrive at the cost of painting, figure the number of square feet a gallon will cover, and how long it will last, not what the paint costs a gallon. Don't simply figure what it costs to paint your house or barn, but what it costs to keep it painted year in and year out. S. W. P. is honestly made of the best raw materials obtainable, and will prove more economical and satisfactory to the man who pays the hill than either hand mixed lead and oil or the so-called "cheap ready-mixed paint." We are agents for Sherwin-Williams Paint, Prepared (S.W.P.) Come in and we will be glad to discuss the paint and varnish question with you.

Conflicting Reports Concerning Payment Of Bills. Selectmen's Version.

In the trial of the cases against the local hotel proprietors in Palmer Tuesday, D. F. Dillon, one of the attorneys for the defense, intimated that the prosecution was carried on by private individuals only and not the authorities of the town of Monson. In reply, Guy A. Ham for the complainant, stated that he was hired by the selectmen of Monson. It was universally spread abroad in town yesterday that the selectmen had denied having a hand in the affair and had said they would not pay the bills, but such is not the case. The selectmen state that they have not committed themselves to either side as yet and have made no positive statement. They say that if the complainant has a good case which justifies prosecution, then it is their duty to carry out the town's vote and pay the bills from the money appropriated for the prosecution of the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors. These were the views of Mr. McCray and Mr. Stewart; Mr. Stebbins had not been personally consulted in the matter but felt that if unlawful procedure had been going on in the liquor business, the bills for prosecution should be paid from the appropriation. Rev. J. M. Gage said he did not care to discuss any phase of the case until after the decision which will be given out Monday, but he also said that the selectmen have encouraged him to go ahead in the matter by means of the courts rather than a public hearing and that the board had received a bill from him for expenses and at the present time held the same in their safe awaiting action. However, if the proprietors are convicted the town will be obliged to pay for the prosecution anyway as it is a criminal case within their district so that nothing can be done until the decision is stated. It is understood that the whole expense will be about $175. Rev. J. M. Gage will be very glad to discuss any part of the case after the decision and will publish the same if necessary above his signature. The case has created considerable local interest from the fact that the prosecution has been through private parties and the Anti-Saloon league rather than by a committee appointed by the voters as has been the case in previous controversies.

Controversy Over Boundaries.

Building operations on E. J. Hughes, new block were suspended by the town authorities Wednesday morning on a complaint from the Methodist Episcopal Society that Mr. Hughes was encroaching on the town's property with part of his new block. When the Cushman fountain was erected in 1886 the church society agreed to move back the curbing around their property so that teams could pass either side of the fountain. They retained however their ownership of the land then given over for highway purposes and have run the boundaries, as the law requires, at stated intervals. On the south side of the street the line has become equally disregarded and the elm tree, sidewalk and piazza of the Gilmore House are on the town's highway. Mr. Hughes proposed to extend his block to the sidewalk but would be building partly on the highway; wherefore came the complaint. If the church society refuse to give up their holdings it is probable that the commissioners would condemn their land and pay damages for the same, letting the road remain the same and run a new line on the south side; otherwise a radical change in the appearance of the street would result if the true bounds were even and the road straightened.

Partelo—Beckwith.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Partelo on Highland avenue was the scene of a pretty wedding Tuesday evening, when Miss Sara Elizabeth Partelo was united in marriage to Albert G. Beckwith. The single ring service was used and the ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Monroe Gage of the Methodist Episcopal church. Miss Nellie Beckwith was maid of honor and Albert Partelo, the bride's brother, acted as best man. The bride wore a gown of white Persian lawn with tulle veil, while the maid of honor was attired in a gown of pink batiste. The house was prettily decorated with laurel and sweet peas, and the ceremony was performed before a dence background of evergreen. Refreshments were served to about 50 guests from Potter Hill, Westerly, Ashaway, Oakdale, Ellington and Monson. Mr. and Mrs. Beckwith received many beautiful and useful gifts from their large circle of friends. After a short wedding trip they will make their home for the present with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Beckwith on Lincoln street.

The young men of the Congregational church will hold a lawn party and social on the church grounds this evening at 7:30 o'clock. The public is invited.

There will be a whist party at the Quaboag Country Club house next Wednesday afternoon in charge of Mrs. F. W. Ellis, Mrs. C. L. Peck and Miss Alice Morris.

Henry F. C. Dewing of Cumberland Md., newly-chosen principal of Monson Academy, has been spending a few days in town, and will move his family here in the near future.

A. N. Gaonette and Miss Gertrude Gaouette have returned from a weeks' stay at Rochester, N. Y., where they attended the photographers' national convention.

James Nagle, who has been with the Welsh Granite Company of Milford, has left that concern and taken a position as engineer with the Fred T. Ley Company of Springfield.

Merrill Carew, who has been confined in a Holyoke hospital for several weeks with two broken legs as the result of a runaway accident, was removed to his home last Saturday and is recovering.

John Haggerty of Nashua, N. H., state deputy of the Knights of Columbus for New Hampshire, called on friends in town Tuesday. He was on his way to attend the national convention in Mobile, Ala.

Dr. G. E. Fuller, Mrs. H. A. Merchant and children, George and Hattie, have returned from several weeks' stay at Swampscott. Dr. Fuller is much improved in health and will resume his practice.

Miss Julia E. Smith is spending a few days at Westbrook, Ct., as the guest of Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Gifford. Mr. Gifford was pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church here for several years and is now located at Ipswich.

The Universalist Sunday school held their annual picnic at Forest Lake Park yesterday and a pleasant day was enjoyed. The services of the church will be discontinued during Rev. Abram Conklin's vacation.

An unknown dog chased two cows, one belonging to John Granfield and one to S. M. Stebbins, for about two miles last Saturday and one of the animals was so badly lacerated that it was necessary to kill it. The dog has not been identified but if the act is repeated serious measures will be adopted to find the offender.

During Rev. G. A. Andrews' vacation the following preachers will occupy the pulpit at the Congregational church: August 1, Rev. Charles Brooks of Wellesley, who acted as pastor for about 12 months following Rev. N. M. Pratt's resignation; Aug. 8, Rev. Harris Starr of Mt. Carmel, Ct.; Aug 15, Rev. A. J. Hayden, from foreign missionary fields; Aug. 22, Rev. Seeley Bryant of Springfield.

Work against the elm tree beetle is practically completed for this year unless some of the trunks of the badly affected trees are sprayed with a different preparation than that used on the leaves. The trees themselves are badly eaten throughout the village and sadly show the result of delay in spraying. The work to be most effective should begin by June 1st anyway and it is hoped that next year something lasting and efficient may be done earlier.

Considerable local interest is being displayed in the contesting of the will of the late Electa M. Dwight by her brother, Samuel E. Fairfield of New York city. Mr. Fairfield was formerly a well-known lawyer in Stafford Springs, Ct., but is now a promoter of mining securities in New York city. The will is being contested on the ground that Mrs. Dwight was irresponsible at the time it was made. Several local people were summoned to the probate court in Springfield Thursday, where the will was allowed, but it is possible an appeal will be taken.

Your representative has called upon me to secure a statement concerning the relation of the selectmen of Monson to the cases for the alleged illegal sales of intoxicating liquor tried at Palmer on the 27th. I have no statement to make at this time, for the cases have not yet been closed, the judge reserving his decision till Monday next, Aug. 2 When the judge has rendered the verdict in these cases I shall be ready to give the public any information which I may possess that may be their right to know.

Further, let me add that an attempt seems to be on foot to turn the attention of the public away from the real issue to a question with no bearing whatever upon the principle at issue. The issue is a demand that the laws of our Commonwealth be respected and obeyed. Whether there shall be conviction or not does not effect the real issue The result in either case—conviction or acquittal—can only be the same so far as the principle is concerned, viz: The demand that the laws be reported and obeyed. All good citizens must recognize that this principle underlies the very foundation of any government that is permanent and just.

Now the question as to what persons or party or officials make such a demand is wholly irrelevant to the real issue, though it may be a matter to cause prejudices among some biased individuals and might prove embarrassing, because of such prejudice, to some of the persons involved. We admit that such a question may be very useful in some political campaign or for political ends, and would be a question of public interest. But the writer will refrain from discussing such an irrelevant question till after the two cases have been closed. Respectfully yours,

JAMES M. GAGE.

Boston Letter.

Hearing for Better Transportation Facilities — The Tariff Remission — Judge Gaskill's Successor — Hot Weather Politics.

BOSTON, July 28, 1909.

To-morrow will begin in room 240 in the state house the series of hearings by the Big Four which mean so much for the industrial and commercial development and prosperity of Boston, Massachusetts and New England. The Big Four are the railroad commission, the harbor and land commission, the Boston rapid transit commission, and the metropolitan parks commission. The subject of their hearings will be the report of the metropolitan improvements commission, a body which went out of existence, with its secretary, Sylvester Baxter, May 15 last. This commission on metropolitan improvements has just got its report before the public in printed form, though the manuscript was sent to the Legislature last winter. By resolve of the last session the Big Four must make a preliminary report to the Legislature by Jan. 1, 1910, with recommendations and drafts of bills, if they find that legislation is necessary immediately. Their final report must be made to the Legislature by January 1, 1911, with recommendations and bills, if necessary. No extra compensation shall be allowed beyond their present salaries, but they may spend such sums as the governor and council shall approve.

It will be seen at a glance that the task before the Big Four is of the largest public importance. They have to study the problem of transportation of men and freight by steam, electricity, team and foot, the building up of the suburbs in connection with Boston proper, the development of the water front in connection with the land transportation problem, in short, as the resolve of 1907, creating the metropolitan improvements commission, put it: "The advisability of any public works in the metropolitan district which in its opinion will tend to the convenience of the people, the development of local business, the beautifying of the district, or the improvement of the same as a place of residence." The commission has made a report which is a wonder of comprehensiveness and thoroughness. It make a volume of 318 pages of the size of a state document and there is a large collection of maps which accompanies it. It has a thorough study of the transportation question, as far as figures of tonnage by cars and by teams can tell the story, and there is also a thorough study of the financial condition of the district. Mr. Baxter says that the Big Four will be open to suggestions and it is expected that the Boston chamber of commerce will be represented at the hearing by a committee which will thus represent, as nearly officially as any body can do, the real opinion of the Boston business men for the development of the city and suburbs and the terminal facilities in way of stations, depots and docks and wharves so as to promote best the growth of the metropolis as a whole. Hence it is an extremely important enterprise and every city and town in the state and New England which has business relations with Boston has a direct financial interest in the hearings and the reports which will be their outcome.

In view of the reports from Washington about the tariff, it is interesting to note how general the indorsement is here of President Taft's position for downward revision. Of course it is accepted that Col. Clarke and the Home Market Club people, as a rule, are not with the president, but, aside from that circle the Republicans must be few who favor the Senate side of the controversy. I have made it a point to question Republicans of the average sort who are met daily, and they are unanimously for downward revision and against the trusts and aggregations of wealth which they believe control the country. Possibly our managers at Washington understand the tariff situation as it exists in the mind of the people, but it is not probable that they do, because they are surrounded by men who have special favors to ask. To-day I have talked with one of the most active machine young Republicans in the state who is quite close to the inside and knows how a large block of Republicans feel. While he insisted that everything was in a very easy position for the Republicans and there was not the slightest prospect of trouble in consequence of the Democratic dissension and bickering between factions, yet he added that it was possible for a change to occur within 24 hours which would put the Republican party to its utmost exertion to save the state and would at once bring on another Bates campaign. Tariff grabbing, as revealed at Washington, is in part the cause of the situation, but there is a deeper cause, and that is the general antagonism to combinations of wealth which is spreading through all the classes which do not belong to the wealthy class. It was said, with the statement that it could be supported by specifications, that large blocks of the Republicans were almost ready to leave the party. The strongest cause which prevented was that the main reputation of the opposition was that of the Boston city hall crowd, which elected the Curleys to public office while in jail. Voters with a sense of self-respect do not want to ally themselves with a party under such leaders. Again, it is illustrated what a drag upon the entire state the Boston city hall crowd is.

Chairman Henry P. Field of Northampton, of the executive committee of the Republican state committee, was a caller at the state headquarters to-day. It is probable that the meeting of the committee to fix the chairman and committee memberships for the state convention will be held about the middle of August. It seems to be about settled that the chairman of the Republican state convention will be Congressman Charles G. Washburn of Worcester. Nearly every representative in Congress has presided. Congressman Tirrell, though admitted to be an excellent representative, is regarded as hardly having the physical qualities which a chairman should have. Congressman Roberts has not had it, but Washburn seem to have the call.

Gov. Draper, returned yesterday from his vacation in New Hampshire, says, regarding the selection of a successor to Judge Gaskill of Worcester on the superior bench, that he shall take plenty of time and that geographical considerations shall not be considered in choosing a man to fill the place. His outing gave Lieut. Gov. Cottingham opportunity to act as the real Governor for a few days, and he seems to have done the work well. But the Governor makes it a point to know something of his appointees, and there is no doubt that Gaskell's successor will be a strong man, though it is not known yet who the lucky man will be.

Commissioner Frank J. Hordison will make public to-morrow his latest report upon the conditions of fire insurance. During 1908 and 1909, up to the date when the report was sent to the printer, there had been three mutual companies to retire to two admitted. Ten stock companies retired and 11 were admitted, making a gain in capital of nearly $1,000,000 by the change. Commissioner Hardison goes at some length into the question of valued insurance policies, or those which require payment of the insurance policy in full, in case of total loss by fire and there is over-insurance. He believes that valued policies tend to increase incendiary fires, and that the remedies proposed are of little value. He suggests a board of appeal in case the referees in a controversy are too hard in their adjudication and the persons prefers to appeal.

Two political campaigns are already hot, not because of the weather, but because of the work done. They are the race between Representatives Nason and Morse of Haverhill for the Republican nomination for the Senate. They have a joint meeting in public to-night, which is pushing it pretty hard for warm weather, considering that the nomination is about two months off. The other is that of Captain Josiah Stearns Cushing of Norwood and head of the Norwood Press, the largest printing establishment in the country after the United States government's, who is candidate for Councillor Bemis's place to sit beside Gov. Draper and advise him. He has had no experience in House or Senate. He claims that he has got the case settled. His manager says all they want now is to make it unanimous. Most other people are waiting before beginning their political activity in public.

One of the latest business houses to climb to the top of Beacon hill and get a fine situation on Ashburton Place, just opposite the Boston University law school, is the American Baptist Publication society. It is not often that there is a news chance to say anything about the Baptists. They will have an attractive store when it is finished.

A little further east the workmen are putting the additional two stories to the Suffolk court house which were authorized by act of the Legislature. The walls of the original building were of ample thickness to stand two more stories, and the demands for room compelled their construction.

The Arena Magazine, edited by B. O. Flower, a man who is working the best he can for the public welfare against the aggregations of wealth of the country, has suffered by the insolvency of its publisher, and the prospect is that it will continue under Mr. Flower, but with the name of "The Twentieth Century Magazine." He will keep up the high standard of a $2 50 magazine, but offers it at $1 per year as an introductory price. There are many distinguished political and labor leaders among the contributors, and the magazine is for the rights of the many as against the few of wealth and privilege. It is issued from No. 5 Park Square. LANDON

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Death of Marcus M. Bramble.

Marcus M. Bramble, 67, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. Alvin Chilson, last week Thursday night, of a general breaking down of health, after a long illness. Mr. Bramble was formerly a dealer of horses in Springfield and lived for many years in that city and West Springfield. He leaves, besides his widow, in Springfield, one daughter, Minnie, of Springfield; one brother, W. E. Bramble of Greenfield, and four sisters, Mrs. A. L. Lucas of California, Mrs. Mary F. Smith and Mrs. J. L. Ripley of Somerville and Mrs. Alvin Chilson of North Wilbraham. The funeral was held Saturday afternoon at the home of his sister, and burial was in Sixteen Acres cemetery.

Miss Ruth Bates is spending two weeks in Orient, N. Y.

Mrs. C. A. Etherington of New York is the guest of Mrs. H. M. White.

Miss Katherine Ferris has returned to Boston after a two-weeks' visit at the home of Augustus Backus.

Mrs. E. M. Applin of Brattleboro and Miss Edith Applin of Springfield are guests of Mrs. Anna Fuller.

Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Fleming and daughter of New York are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Logan.

Miss Minnie Metcalf has returned from a three-weeks' vacation in St. Paul, Minn., and at her home in Vermont.

Mrs. Imogene Seaver and three children of Cambridge are guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Addison Bennett on Wilbraham Mountain.

A council for dismissal will be held in Grace Union church Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock to act upon the resignation of Rev. Vernon H Deming, who desires that his resignation will go into effect August 31. Mr. Deming will take up a pastorate in Douglas and East Douglas.

WALES.

Francis Drechsler is visiting William Drechsler in Palmer.

Miss Leona Steele has been spending a few days with friends in Southbridge.

Dr. A. H. Fuller has returned from a few days' vacation spent in Boston and vicinity.

The roof of the Hegan mill caught fire one day during the past week but was discovered at once and quickly extinguished.

The Queensboro Woolen Mills company has placed an attachment on the Dell mill. This is the same company who attached the stock in the mill last week.

The Old Home Day committee are planning for one of the best celebrations they have ever had and visitors are coming to town every day in preparation for the event.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Camp of Springfield have rented W. E. Needham's cottage for the rest of the summer. Mr. Camp has been unfortunate in having his canoe stolen from the lake since he came here.

There was an unusually large attendance at the Baptist church on Sunday to hear Rev. Francis H. Davis, who has resigned, preach his farewell sermon. Mr. Davis left yesterday for the eastern part of the state, where he has some engagements to preach during the summer. On Sunday, August 1st, there will be no service at the Baptist church but on the following Sunday services will be resumed as usual.

Minstrels at Springfield Next Week.

Black face fun amid luxurious twentieth century surroundings will be given at the Court Square Theater in Springfield next Tuesday evening by George H. Primrose and his merry band of black-face comedians, singers, dancers and musicians, who for the past number of years has given the merriest and most varied entertainments of the kind ever seen in the city. This year Mr. Primrose promises one of the most gorgeous and amusing affairs he has had the pleasure of presenting to the many thousands of patrons. Intermingled during the magnificent new first-part scene, will be sung many new ballads written expressly for this production, all of which are said to be excellently executed by the best singers ever toured by this organization. There are also many comedy bits for those who prefer that style of song. Eight big acts and novelty features will be seen in the olio "De-Luxe" following the first part. Fifty people in all are employed to interpret the big program of events in the Primrose 1909 vintage.

WEAK, WEARY WOMEN.

Learn the Cause of Daily Woes and End Them.

When the back aches and throbs,
When housework is torture.
When night brings no rest nor sleep.
When urinary disorders set in Women's lot is a weary one.
There is a way to escape these woes.
Doan's Kidney Pills cure such ills.
Have cured women here in Palmer.
This is one Palmer woman's testimony.

Mrs. Wm. Osborn, living on Converse avenue, Palmer, Mass., says: "Both my husband and self have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for a number of years and I do not think there is a remedy to be compared with them. I have had attacks of kidney trouble that would affect my whole system. My back and head would ache all the time. I had chills and often felt all tired out. When I noticed these spells coming on, I would procure a box of Doan's Kidney Pills from Lynde and Gould's drug store and it never took but a few doses of this remedy to drive the trouble away. I am glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to others."

A Singular Meal.

One of the most singular meals ever eaten was that given to a select few by an antiquary named Goebel in Brussels some years ago. The bread was made from wheat grown before the children of Israel passed out of Egypt, and it was spread with butter made when Elizabeth ruled England. For fruit there were apples which ripened before the Christian era, and the wine was older than the white man's knowledge of the new world. The bread was made from wheat taken from a chamber in one of the pyramids, the butter (of which there were several pounds) had been found in an earthen crock on a stone shelf under the icy waters of a well in Scotland. A pantry in the ruins of Pompeii had furnished the jar of apples (which were as sweet and finely flavored as if only a few months old), and the flagon of wine had been recovered from an old vault in Corinth. Six guests enjoyed this amazing meal.—Chicago News.

An Earl's Duel With a Butler.

About the middle of the last century the Lord Rosebery of that time was in Paris, and in paying a call one day he was received so rudely by the butler that he complained to his friend of the servant's conduct. But the butler had been a noncommissioned officer in the French army, and as such he challenged Lord Rosebery to a duel. The earl accepted, and two shots were exchanged without result. But Lord Rosebery was angered at his own condescension and afraid his antagonist might lay aside his military rank and resume his duties as a servant, thus exposing an earl to the reproach of having fought with a butler. So he settled an annuity of £250 on the man on condition he did not return to domestic service. The condition was faithfully observed on both sides.

Lord Russell's Retort.

Lord Russell once presided at a dinner given for Sir Henry Irving on his return from America. While the dinner was in progress Lord Russell suggested to Comyns Carr that he propose Sir Henry's health. "I can't make speeches, you know," he said.

Sir Henry gently replied, "I heard you make a fine speech before the Parnell commission."

To which the pungent Irishman answered, "Oh, yes, but then I had something to talk about!"

Before and After.

"That couple used to be inseparable a year ago," he observed, "and now you hardly ever see them together. Why is it? Do you know?"

"Yes," said she. "They weren't married a year ago."—New York Press.

Their Present Names.

"What are the names of that young couple next door?"

"We won't be able to find out for several weeks. They've just been married, and he calls her Birdie, and she calls him Pettie."

Palmer Firemen's Benefit

Forest Lake Theatre Week of August 2--8.

BY special arrangement with Mr. J. W. Gorman, manager of the Forest Lake Theatre, the Relief Fund of the Palmer Fire Department will be given 25 per cent of the price of all tickets to the theatre during the week August 2--8 sold by members of the department. The members have special tickets for this purpose, good for any performance during the week, and they will be glad to have you purchase as many of them as you desire. The boys do not derive any benefit from tickets sold at the box office, so, if you wish to help swell the relief fund,

Buy your theatre tickets next week of the firemen.

Remember, tickets bought elsewhere do them no good.

Successful Lawn Party.

The lawn party given on Thursday and Friday evenings of last week was, despite the unfavorable weather of Friday evening, a decided success. There was a large attendance Thursday evening. The lawn adjoining the church was prettily decorated with electric lights, and the numerous booths presented an attractive appearance. Music was furnished by the band. The amusements consisted of sack, potato, three-legged and wheelbarrow races, and were participated in by the younger attendants. A pie-eating contest was participated in by Masters Stone, Porter, Andrews and Nevue, their hands being tied behind them. The race was declared a tie. On account of the rain Friday evening the party was held in the church, with a program similar to that of the evening before. A snug sum will be realized after all expenses are paid.

Would Like a Park.

The want of a park or some place for people to sit out of doors these warm evenings is more noticeable than ever, and it seems too bad that something cannot be done along this line. The vacant lot adjoining the grammar school building has been suggested as an ideal spot. A few benches placed here and there about the lot would fill the bill and would be appreciated by those who labor in the mills through the day and who, for want of some place to go, are compelled to sit upon the steps of business places. Here is a chance for some public-spirited person to show his hand and do an act that the public will appreciate.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fountain entertained friends from Springfield over Sunday.

Miss Nellie O'Keefe of Pine avenue is spending a few days at Savin Rock, Ct.

Miss Burke of Ware was a guest of Miss Mildred Loftus for a few days the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davis are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Clark and family have been spending the week at Pleasure Beach, Ct.

Master Allen Davis of Church street spent Sunday with his grandparents at West Warren.

Mrs. James Hughes and children are enjoying a vacation at Providence and Newport, R. I.

Miss May St. Peter of Lawrence visited her aunt, Mrs. John Gebo, of Commercial street this week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Crimmins of Summer street are entertaining relatives from Woonsocket, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. William Sullivan are entertaining relatives from Worcester at their home on High street.

P. W. Fleming and daughter of Elmhurst, L. I., visited his sisters, the Misses Flemiug on Main street, this week.

Miss Kathryn Longtine of Springfield is the guest of her grandmother, Mrs. T. J. Clifford of Commercial street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mooers and Mrs. Mary Murdock have returned from a visit in the eastern part of the state.

William Cross has returned to his home in New Bedford, after a vacation here with his sister, Mrs. Katherine Shaw.

Miss Mildred Loftus, with her cousin, Miss Margaret Moriarty of Holyoke, spent Wednesday with friends in Ware.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Robinson of West Warren visited Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McKenzie on Pine avenue Sunday.

Masters John Crowley and Raymond Hurley of Worcester are guests of their cousin, John Sullivan on High street.

Mrs. Thomas Longtine Jr. and Mrs. Fred Walker of Springfield were guests of Mrs. T. J. Clifford of Commercial street Monday.

Herbert Vick and Frank Mateva have improved their residences on High and School streets by the addition of new verandas.

Mrs. Edward McKelligott and son Edward have returned from a two-weeks' visit with Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Flynn in Pittsfield.

Miss Ella Doyle of Monson and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Driscoll of Springfield visited at the home of P. Ronan and family this week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hicks and son John of Springfield visited Mr. and Mrs. John W. Loftus and family on Commercial street Tuesday.

Mrs. Ellen Hartnett and daughter Maggie returned Saturday from New York and Wallingford, Ct., where they have been visiting relatives.

Misses Mae Miller, Lena, Stella and Evelyn Beugle attended a party at the home of Charles Backus in Wilbraham last week Friday.

The continued dry weather is having its effect on the water supplies. Many families are without water for domestic purposes and have been for weeks.

Some of the departments in the No. 1 mill have been running overtime, until 10 o'clock every night, in order to furnish yarn for the other departments.

The condition of the sidewalk near the Exchange block corner is anything but passible, and it is a wonder that some person has not met with an accident there before now.

The Jorczak property on Church street which has recently been purchased by the Thorndike Co., and which is being converted into a two-tenement block, is fast nearing completion.

A large delegation from this place, members of St. Joseph's Society, went to Chicopee on Sunday to attend the exercises in connection with the laying of the cornerstone of the new Polish church.

The work of raising the roof of the No. 2 mill of the Thorndike Company is well under way. The work is being done so as to permit the addition of another story to the building, which will be composed of brick.

The Thorndike baseball team will meet the West Warren aggregation on the church grounds to-morrow afternoon for the second time this season. Thorndike was victorious in the first game at West Warren, and the visitors will undoubtedly try to even up.

Patrick Nagle has just completed his reservoir, which is situated on his land on the hillside south of High street. The supply of water even now, being the dry spell, seems inexhaustible. The overflow from the reservoir is ample to furnish water for half the houses in the village.

Polish Scrap

There was a hand to hand fight in the Polish boarding house Saturday evening. Stanlaw Zadka and Stanley Gula engaged in a mixup and Officer Michael Collins was called in to separate them. Kertan Duda interfered in the behalf by Gula and Zadka and tried to prevent the officer from arresting the men. Collins succeeded in arresting Gula and Duda, and later Zadka was arrested in Palmer by Officer Crimmins. In the district court Monday Duda was fined $5 for being drunk, and for interfering with an officer while in discharge of his duty $10. Zadka for drunkenness was discharged; for an assault on an officer was fined $25. Gula for drunkenness was fined $5, and for an assault on an officer was fined $20.

HIS LESSON.

It Taught Him Just What the Girl Wanted Him to Know.

By ROBERT A. KNOWLES.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

They sat upon the veranda side by side, gazing silently into the soft May moonlight. The air had the haunting sweetness that comes at evening from growing things in their freshness. It was still and dreamily peaceful, a time to soothe human restlessness and human pain.

But it did not soothe Jane. She had been sitting there so quietly all evening that it seemed to her she must jump from the chair, screaming at the top of her voice, in another minute. Under the light shawl she wore she twisted her hands together in an effort to control herself. Yet she continued to stare out at the moonlight as if to behold it were the one thing worth living for.

Rodney was staring out at the moonlight, too, and enjoying it. He liked the stillness; he liked being able to keep silence; he liked to be sitting there beside Jane.

If Rodney had loved her, Jane thought bitterly, he would at least have held her hand. But he did not love her; he only liked her because he had always known her and because she was the one girl with whom he could be perfectly natural. If he wished to be silent with her he was silent; he did not feel it necessary to make the effort to talk. Yet Jane felt sometimes that his dumbness was unendurable. If only he would speak. Evening after evening he came to sit with her in the same way.

Jane had always had hope until tonight. A man who could sit beside a girl—a fairly pretty girl, too—on such a night and not make love to her was certainly as near being without a heart as man could be.

Jane gave him up. And in giving him up she gave up also many of the dreams and of her longings, her youth. Slowly her eyes filled with tears. Slowly she forced back the tears and swallowed the choking lump in her throat. But she could not keep back one racking sigh, and Rodney heard it. He rose instantly, reminded of the hour and apparently of her.

"I must go," he said, looking for his hat.

Jane rose, too, with apparent calm.

He looked forth at the moonlight again, not at her, wistfully.

"It is wonderful," he said. "Moonlight like that always makes me forget myself. Good night, Jane."

"Good-b-by," Jane answered strangely, but he seemed not to notice.

Her father stood before the lamp reading a letter as she entered the house.

He looked up at her over his glasses.

"Rodney gone?" he asked.

"Yes." Jane's tone was tense.

"Anything the matter?" he inquired anxiously.

She shook her head, with a hard little laugh.

"Nothing at all," she said.

"This letter is from your Aunt Jane," he said. "She wants us to come to see her. It has been nine years since she was here—the same year your mother died. I've never been to see her since she went to Boston to live. But I am going now—we're going, Jane, what's to hinder us from going tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow?" Jane gasped. And to Boston! She turned pale with the suddenness of it all.

By noon next day they had gone, bag and baggage. And that evening when Rodney came walking up in the moonlight he found unlighted windows and a locked door. He sat down upon the steps and waited. How strange it was! Jane had not told him she was going away. He sat there wondering until Mrs. Clancy, who lived next door, came trundling her baby past on her way home.

"That you, Rod?" she called in her sweet Irish voice.

"Yes, Mrs. Clancy. Where are the folks that belong here?"

"Why, don't you know? Hush, Teddy, while unamma talks to the gentleman. They've gone to Boston—left at noon today. I can't tell you how long they intend to be gone."

To Boston! And without saying a word to him! Rodney could not speak, and after Mrs. Clancy had waited a moment for him to do so she went on with her baby, leaving him to figure it out by himself.

Jane did uot write to him from Boston, and he did not write to her because he did not know her address. And he would not ask for it from any one of the girls to whom he knew she was writing But he heard things about her—how she was going about with her fashionable aunt, having new clothes made and enjoying herself generally.

The hot summer dragged on slowly. Rodney grew thin and looked pale. He was working too hard, they said.

"Cut it out, Rod," they told him cheerfully. "You've got money enough and are making more. Why do you want to kill yourself?"

Rodney smiled pathetically and kept on working.

One day Edna Travers told him that she had just received Jaue's picture and she looked "dandy." Jane had also written to say she "had three strings to her bow."

After that Rodney literally drooped. He began to walk past the house and, as he grew more desperate, to sit upon the veranda in the chair where he had spent so many silent hours. Jane's little chair was beside his, and he liked to keep his hand upon it, rocking it gently, while he thought of her. Sometimes he fell asleep sitting there, for it was hot weather, and night always found him tired.

One night in August he came to the house late, as usual. It was still closed, dark, forbidding. But the memory of dear associations haunted it. He stole up on the veranda behind the screening vines and sat down, with his hand on the arm of Jane's little chair. When was she coming home? And would she come home free? It was most unlikely. Even though she had been sweet to him always it was evident that she had not cared for him. But if she had cared for him— Rodney, the practical, the unsentimental, fell a-dreaming. Presently from the day dream he passed into an actual one of restless slumber. He dreamed that Jane sat in her own chair beside him in her white gown. And, waking suddenly, with a mighty start, he found that she did!

For a moment he stared at her as at a ghost. Then her soft laugh and her voice set his senses tingling.

"Still asleep, Rod?" she asked.

"Jane," he said and leaned toward her, trying to find her hand—"Jane, is it really you?"

"Really and truly, Rod! When did you fall into the habit of sleeping on my veranda, sir?"

"Jane!"

"Answer my question, Rodney Holdsworth!"

"Answer my question first, dear. Do you know what has happened to me while you have been away?"

She shook her head, put her face close to his and told him that she did.

"Did you leave anybody in Boston that you like better than you do me?" Rodney asked, very humbly.

"No one, Rod."

"Then"—he dropped her hand, which he had been clinging to in a kind of desperation, and took her in his arms—"you are still mine," he sighed.

"I guess it did you good to sit alone here all these evenings," Jane said presently when she had been kissed to her heart's content.

"It taught me to love and appreciate you, dearest," Rodney said solemnly, holding her fast.

Why Lightning Rods Are Pointed.

The reason a lightning rod has a sharp point is because a line point offers no resistance to the discharge of electricity and in order that a cloud may be emptied of it noiselessly and harmlessly. The degree of resistance is in proportion to the surface of the object. If the rod were surmounted by a knob, for instance, the discharge would be violent. But many a lightning rod has received an electrical discharge when the people in the building below were calmly unconscious of the face. Noncorrosive metal is used for the point of the rod, as corrosion makes resistance. The difference between a point and a ball is shown in discharging a battery. The full charge from a large battery would be received quietly on a metal point, while a moderate charge from a small one would explode violently on a ball. It is said that a full charge may be passed harmlessly through a person's body if received on the point of a needle, whereas the same charge received on a discharger, with a ball or knob on the end, would mean instant death.

Tragic Tale of a Tragedian.

"The awfulest and the funniest stage wait I ever lived through," said a sprightly English actress, "was when a certain well known London actor manager, whose name I daze not divulge, was doing a tremendous curse scene on a darkened stage. He had the audience spellbound with his sonorous declamation, which, of course, they didn't know depended largely upon his ample mouthful of false teeth. At the very climax of his bloodcurdling maledictions the entire dental collection dropped out suddenly in the excitement of the moment and bounded into some obscure hiding place. The tragedian's mighty voice died down to an unintelligible mumble as he groped about frantically in search of the missing masticators. We were all too helpless from laughter to be of much help in this critical situation. At last, after what seemed like half an hour of the most hysterical suspense, the stage manager located the teeth with the aid of a dark lantern and restored them to the frantic star, who clapped them into his mouth and began cursing again with redoubled earnestness. I never knew what the audience thought, and no one ever dared to ask the actor manager."—New York World.

Quicksilver.

The ore from which quicksilver is obtained is a brilliant red rock known as cinnabar. When of high purity it is actually vermillion in color. Cinnabar is the original source of the pigment known commercially as vermillion. It is a compound of sulphur and quicksilver, and in order to separate the latter from the sulphur the rock is roasted. Passing off in the form of a gas, the mercury is afterward condensed and flows out in a fine stream, like a continuous pencil of molten silver. Like gold and silver, mercury is occasionally found in a native or pure state. Sometimes the miner's pick penetrates a cavity that contains a cupful or more of the elusive and beautiful fluid. Miners suffer much from the poisonous effects of the quicksilver fumes. Extreme cleanliness is the best safeguard for workers in this dangerous occupation. Use is also made of a sort of lemonade which serves to a certain extent as an antidote, a strong acid taking the place of lemon juice in the composition of the drink.

Household Hints.

FRUIT LAYER CAKE—CARNATION GARNISH.

Make a batter from one-half cup of butter creamed, two cups of fine granulated sugar, the yolks of four eggs beaten until lemon colored and thick, one cup of milk, three and one-half cups of flour, measured after sifting, and two and one-half slightly rounding teaspoons of baking powder. Fold in the whites of four eggs beaten stiff. Take out one-third of the batter and add one tablespoon of molassess, one level teaspoon of cinnamon, one-third teaspoon of allspice, one tablespoon of finely grated chocolate and two-thirds of a cup of seeded and chopped raisins. Bake two layers of the light and one of the dark batter and put together with apple jelly, placing the dark layer in the centre. Cover with a boiled frosting, or if time is limited, make a frosting with gelatine. Dissolve a level teaspoon of granulated gelatine in three tablespoons of boiling water, add one-half teaspoon of lemon juice and stir in one and one-half cups of powdered sugar. Beat until it is smooth and white and begins to be of a consistency to spread, then pour over the cake and smooth with the back of the spoon. When filling a pan spread the batter even higher around the edge than in the centre in order that the cake may rise evenly. The inexperienced usually have the best success with layer cakes.

A RIVAL'S DOWNFALL

Out of Bitterness the Lovers Snatched Happiness.

By ESTHER AINSLEE.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

If Dalzell's store advertised a sale of silk dress goods in the Monday issue of the Rosemont Banner it was a certainty that the paper's Tuesday night number would contain an ad. from Thompson's store across the street telling of bargains in satins, with a side line of embroideries, at which Rosemont smiled appreciatively and reaped the benefit.

The town was proud of the proprietors of the two leading dry goods stores, for most of the young men left for the adjacent big city when it came time to make their way in the world, but Malcolm Dalzell and Lewis Thompson within a year of each other settled down to make a living in their home town.

Perhaps it were better to say Rosemont was proud of their enterprise, for Lewis Thompson was not the type to inspire affection in the hearts of his townsmen. A man cannot be blamed for lack of magnetism and an attractive nature, but nevertheless he suffers for it, and Thompson possessed besides these drawbacks a hot headed, quarrelsome disposition and a theory that every man had a right to look out for himself to the exclusion of any possible rights of others.

His aggressiveness made him enemies where Malcolm Dalzell won friends by his mere cheerfulness and diplomacy. But each flourished on his own side of the street.

Not only were they rivals in business, but from the days of carrying schoolbooks there had seemingly been but one girl in the world in the eyes of each, Milly Wainwright, with the waves of soft brown hair and eyes that matched, with the sweet voice and appealing little ways.

Shrewd people even said the reason both boys stayed in Rosemont was that each was afraid to leave the other a clear field with Milly, who had never shown any preference between the two.

Lewis Thompson was a different man with her. Her mere presence smoothed and softened the aggressive young business man, and she smiled incredulously when stories of his cold shrewdness and overreaching deals came to her ears.

Yet unknown to herself Malcolm Dalzell occupied a place in her life from which no one could dislodge him. Milly was in the delicious and dreamy state of indecision which a girl always prolongs unwittingly. Life was sweet to her, and even the growing wildness of her younger brother, Dick, which was aging her father and mother, had not power to do more than depress her momentarily.

"It's only because Dick is young," she told her mother half indignantly. "He will see the mistake of his ways before he ever does anything really wrong. Why, Dick wouldn't be really bad. It's absurd!"

She was great chums with the handsome eighteen-year-old brother, and because she did have faith in him the boy turned to her always in his rare spells of repentance. At present he had gone to work in a bank in the next town, six miles distant.

The Rosemont Banner had two columns of description, speculation and denunciation when Thompson's store was robbed. Malefactors were rare in Rosemont, and the night watchman's work was perfunctory, but nevertheless Lewis Thompson discovered a back window pried open and nearly $200 worth of silks and laces missing.

Three weeks later he was reduced to explosive rage by the discovery that again his store had been entered. This time a hundred dollars' worth of goods vanished. In his wrath the owner of the store telegraphed for a city detective and established a night patrol for the block. The city detective looked important, smoked good cigars of the leading citizens, who wanted to tell him their theories as to the robbery, had a very pleasant time and departed with dark hints as to future developments.

"At any rate," Lewis Thompson said vigorously, "with Maloney on hand as a watchman the thief won't get another chance!"

"It's hard luck, Lewis," sympathized Malcolm Dalzell with his business rival. Thompson regarded him coldly. Of late Milly had been in Dalzell's company more than he liked.

"Thanks," he said. "It's funny the thief doesn't attack your premises, Malcolm. I don't understand such faoritism unless it's because he knows where the best goods are!" He smiled somewhat maliciously as he made the fling.

"Superiority has its drawbacks, then," Dalzell said quietly, holding his temper. He understood Thompson's grudge against him and could afford to be magnanimous, for he had begun to cherish a certainty that he had distanced Thompson with Milly. For her he would endure much.

Lewis Thompson did not relax his vigilance as the weeks went by. One Thursday night, as he made one of his personal trips of inspection, about 1 o'clock he started for his store on a run after finding the watchman, Maloney, knocked senseless at the corner. And he was rewarded. The revolver in his hand covered the dark form of the man standing at the rear window with the faint gleam of a dark lantern on the floor beside him.

Yet even Lewis Thompson was speechless when after his trembling fingers had turned on the rear light he saw the man before him was none other than Malcolm Dalzell, who stood white and quiet facing his captor.

"I—I can't comprehend," Thompson almost stammered, still covering the marauder with his revolver. "You—of all people!"

The man before him moistened his lips. "Lewis," he said at last, "will you believe me if I say, in spite of this, I'm not the robber—that it's just unfortunate circumstances that have brought this about? Will you?"

Lewis Thompson recovered his coolness, and he laughed shortly, sarcastically, glancing significantly at the dark lantern, the fallen jimmy, the goods piled at hand for removal.

"I don't see any one but you, Dalzell," he said curtly. "You've got to take your medicine. You can plead kleptomania, you know. Rising young business man, easy circumstances, no need to rob—why, of course, it's kleptomania!"

There was a little triumph edging into his laugh as what this meant to his rival dawned upon him. And it was likewise dawning upon his captive, who shut his jaw when the marshal, hastily summoned, almost refused to obey Thompson's command to take the prisoner to the jail.

"Go ahead, Smith," was all that Malcolm Dalzell would say, and he walked to the lockup with his head in the air.

The whole town shared the sensations of Smith the next morning, and the Rosemont Banner exhausted all its heavy black faced type that evening and paused only for absence of more space. It was paralyzing, horrifying, this downfall of a man like Malcolm Dalzell, one of those queer croppings out of hidden tendencies that sometimes destroy the world's best.

The three days that intervened before his preliminary hearing drew lines in Dalzell's face and gave him a pallor that usually it takes age to bring. Yet he maintained those close shut lips and, further than stating he was not guilty, refused to talk.

When he faced his friends and neighbors at the preliminary hearing there was a trace of proud defiance in his glance that yet was strangely hurt, for on many faces he read a dawning wavering in allegiance to him.

Much talk had bred suspicion, and every one knew of the long rivalry between the two men. What more natural than that Dalzell should attempt to harass, to ruin his opponent? So they waited for the sensational disclosures.

The sensation came. As usual with sensations, it was quite different from what was expected. This white faced girl, with eyes reddened by tears, who suddenly presented herself struck pity from the heart of the hardest. She spoke rapidly, breathlessly.

"Malcolm did not do it!" she protested, with tight clasped hands. "If he won't tell I will, now that I know the truth! It was Dick, my brother, and Malcolm, who also was watching, saw him and entered Thompson's store to save him, to get him away, to help him, and when Lewis Thompson came upon him—he, Malcolm, would not tell because"

Milly Wainwright's voice died away, but the end of the sentence was furnished by Malcolm Dalzell's quick step to her side and hiding her tears on his shoulder. Both had made their sacrifice for each other and out of the bitterness had snatched happiness. And Rosemont, with the fickleness of the human race, said it served Lewis Thompson right and he should have had more common sense.

Steeplejack In Wrong.

Bob and Jim were Jacks of all trades and worked together. One summer's morning Bob came round to Jim's house at the early hour of 3 and managed to wake him.

"Now, then," he cried, "hurry up. There's a big factory chimney wants pulling down about a mile away from here, and I got the tip from the factory foreman that if we could knock twenty feet off it before the authorities were about it would save the factory the expenses of a scaffold and it would mean a five pound note apiece for you and me."

"What, ho!" cried Jim. "Let's go."

Their destination reached, they climbed to the top of the chimney, and soon masses of brickwork were falling to earth. A man who lived near was disturbed by the noise and started to make a fuss. "Here, Bob," cried Jim, "you climb down and quiet that fellow. Keep him talking while I finish this job up here." So Bob climbed down and engaged the indignant man in conversation.

Suddenly Jim heard Bob calling to him and, looking down, saw his friend gesticulating wildly and beckoning him to come down. So down Jim came. "What's the matter?" he asked.

"Let's go home, Jim, thundering quick. We've been pulling down the wrong chimney."—London Answers.

Indignant.

D'Auber is a big, healthy, bearded man who looks as though he could lift half hundredweights in each hand as easily as he picks up his palette.

An elderly rustic, who had been standing watching him painting by the roadside, approached him.

"No offense, sir," he began, "but is there anything the matter w' yer?"

"No," answered D'Auber. "What makes you ask?"

"Yer hain't lame, are yer?"

"Lame! Good gracious, no!"

"Yer hain't 'ad a misfortune in any way—the chitlear or lumbager—that's kind o' laid yer by?"

"No, I'm as well as I have always been."

The rustic drew himself up and gazed scornfully at the artist.

"An' yer call yerself a man an' can sit theer a-doin' o' that?" he said. "Well, I'm blest!"—Exchange.

English Luggage Lifters.

English railway companies suffer severely through the purloining of passengers' baggage and other articles by platform thieves, and in some cases it is a difficult matter to find out the miscreant. One of these luggage lifters was on an occasion some time ago seen keeping vigil over a barrow of luggage, and in his hand he carried apparently a good sized portmanteau. He walked up and down the platform several times and at last stopped opposite the luggage. Placing his bag on the barrow for a moment, he then picked it up and walked off. But the lynx eye of one of the railway officials had also been watching the barrow, and, going up to the man, had him arrested and searched. It was found that his apparent portmanteau was only a skeleton and inside had a set of springs, etc., which, when placed over a smaller bag, held the latter in position. But for the smartness of the official another traveler's bag would have been missing.—London Answers.

The Hollow Bones of Birds.

The hollow bones of birds are frequently cited as beautiful instances of providential mechanics in building the strongest and largest possible limb with the least expenditure of material, and this is largely true, and yet birds, like ducks, which cleave the air with the speed of an express train, have the long bones filled with marrow or saturated with fat, while the lumbering hornbill, that fairly hurtles over the treetops, has one of the most completely pneumatic skeletons imaginable, permeated with air to the very toe tips, and the ungainly pelican is nearly as well off. Still, it is but fair to say that the frigate bird and turkey buzzards, creatures which are most at ease when on the wing, have extremely light and hollow bones; but, comparing one bird with another, the paramount importance of a pneumatic skeleton to a bird is not as evident as that of a pneumatic tire to a bicycle.—Exchange.

WANTS HER LETTER PUBLISHED

For Benefit of Women who Suffer from Female Ills

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. My pains all left me, I grew stronger, and within three months I was a perfectly well woman.

"I want this letter made public to show the benefit women may derive from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOHN G. MOLDAN, 2115 Second St., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

We never publish a testimonial letter without the special permission of the writer, and then only when we are sure it is genuine. Surely such valuable testimony, therefore, should create confidence in the minds of suffering women.

A Girl's Way.

It was a sweltering summer afternoon. Algernon sat in the hammock, and Claire occupied a wicker chair. She was very pretty, and Algernon was hopelessly in love with her. He was almost in despair as he sat looking at her playing with his heart, and he knew it.

"Oh, Claire!" he pleaded. "Why are you so cold?"

"I am not, Algie," she protested.

"You are, Claire," he insisted.

"And I say just as positively that I am not."

"Claire, Claire!" he cried. "How can you say that when you know you have treated me like?"

"Oh," she interrupted, fanning herself lazily meanwhile, "I thought you were talking about the weather, Algie."—Lippincott's.

Servants' Accomplishments.

A Brussels merchant advertised for a servant. One applicant pleased him. The terms and outings were arranged, when the girl asked, "Who washes the dishes?" Taken aback, the merchant asked her to repeat her question. The girl did so without turning a hair.

"Madame washes the dishes, and I dry them," replied the merchant. "Can you play the piano?" he asked.

"No," was the reply.

"Then I am afraid you will not suit," said the merchant. The girl retired with a dignified air. With a politeness which is described as exquisite she turned to the merchant and said, "Tomorrow I shall take lessons at the conservatory, and as soon as I begin to make progress I will call again!" Lawyer (to deaf witness)—Do you know the plaintiff's pigs?

Witness—Eh?

Lawyer (raising his voice)—Do—you—know—plaintiff's pigs?

Witness—Yes.

Lawyer—How long have you known them?

Witness—Eh?

Lawyer (louder still)—How long have you known them?

Witness—Fed 'em all last spring.

Lawyer—Were they all about a size?

Witness—Eh?

Lawyer (rises on his feet petulantly and shakes his forefinger at the conclusion of each word at the witness)—Were—they—all—of—a—size?

Witness—Some ov 'em wor, and some ov 'em worn't.—Exchange.

The Antalgica
Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Congbs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do you good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle by The Quimby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

SILK Linings.

When placing an order with your dressmaker for a new dress or gown, insist that GOETZ SILK be used for lining material. A great advantage in GOETZ SILKS is that they are constructed equally to withstand the strain and friction that a dress lining is necessarily exposed to. Besides, their texture and finish are such as to give smoothness and tone to a finished garment. All our silks are woven on our own looms and are sold at MILL PRICES.

In the fire district the rate is $2 50 on $1000, an increase of 90 cents over last year, the result of an additional appropriation of about $1600, which was found necessary to keep the fire department's equipment up to the necessary degree of efficiency. The valuation of the district shows a net gain of $32,600; the real estate is $1,418,734, a gain of $53,639, while the personal is $469,403, a loss of $20,937. To those who pay a fire district tax the total rate will be $17 20, $1.30 less than last year.

BOY HIT BY TRAIN.

John Fairfield of Ware Seriously Hurt in West Brookfield.

John, the 16-years-old son of Rev. O J. Fairfield, pastor of the Unitarian church in Ware, was seriously injured in West Brookfield Tuesday afternoon by being struck by a train on the Boston and Albany railroad. He was removed to the Springfield hospital, where it was found that he had sustained several broken ribs, and a bad scalp wound, extending from the forehead down to the back of his neck.

Fairfield was spending his vacation working for Bowman S. Beeman on Coy's Hill, and had been sent to town by Mr. Beeman to look for a calf which was expected by express. Not finding the animal at the express office, he was sent down to to the depot to look for it. An east-bound freight train was standing on the second track and Fairfield stood on the first track watching the freight and waiting for an opportunity to cross to the freight office. As the engineer of express train 31, due to stop at Warren at 3.19 neared the depot, he saw Fairfield and blew his whistle continuously until he hit him.

The train had nearly come to a stop when Fairfield was hit, and was stopped in about the length of a car. The boy was thrown 20 feet along the platform. None of the town physicians could be found, and a call was made through the train, where a doctor was found. The boy was taken on the train to the Springfield hospital and his parents notified.

CONDUCTOR'S FAULT.

Was Responsible for Death of Brakeman at Wilbraham in January.

Judge Thomas W. Kenefick of Palmer has filed his report on the inquest into the death of John A. Vanderburgh, a brakeman on the Boston and Albany railroad, who was killed in a wreck at Ludlow Junction near North Wilbraham Jan. 29. The freight on which he was working had backed off the main line to allow a passenger train to pass, and as it pulled upon the main line again a following freight "sideswiped" the caboose and when the wreck was cleared away Vanderburgh was found dead. It is found that the accident was caused by the neglect of the conductor of the wrecked train to see that his train was properly guarded in the rear before it went over the switch to the main track.

ALL FOUND GUILTY.

Monson Hotel Men Convicted Of Illegal Selling.

FINES OF $175 EACH ARE IMPOSED.

Appeals Taken by All and Cases Will be Carried to Superior Court For Jury Trial.

In the district court Monday morning Judge Kenefick rendered decisions in the cases against the Monson hotel keepers for illegal sales of liquor on July 5, and for illegal keeping of liquor with intent to sell. The defendants were Fisk Rogers of the Century Hotel, Edward J. Hughes of the Gilmore Hotel, John F. O'Neil and Karl Kretschmar of the Monson House. They were charged with making sales on the 5th of July to Fred J. Weyand and Fred B Perkins, agents of the Massachusetts No-License League. The cases were tried on Monday of last week. Judge Kenefick found the defendants guilty on all counts, three each, and imposed fines of $50 in each case of selling and $75 in each case for illegal keeping, a total of $175 for each defendant. Appeals were taken in all cases and bonds in the sum of $100 were furnished in each case.

"Three Twins" to open Boston Theatre.

"Three Twins," the most successful musical comedy America has ever known, will be the opening attraction at the Boston Theatre during the week of August 23d. The original company with an entire new scenic and costume production will be shown to Boston theatre-goers at that time. This is the company that ran all last year at the Herald Square Theatre, New York, to the largest business ever played to at that theatre. Clifton Crawford and Bessie McCoy are the two principal players in a cast that is unusually strong. "Three Twins" was made into a musical piece by Charles Dickson and was originally a farce called "Incog," by Mrs. Pacheo; the lyrics are by O. A. Hanerbach and the music by Karl Hoschna. The principal features that have made "Three Twins" the great success that it has achieved are its comedy and novel effects. The laughs are continuous from the time the curtain goes up until the finale of the first act, while there are novelties in music, stage settings, electrical effects, mechanical effects and in chorus ensembles.

BRIMFIELD.

Former Resident Purchase Home Here.

Frank H. Coolbroth of Springfield has bought of John Griggs his farm on Tower Hill and will make his family residence there, while continuing to carry on his business in Springfield, where he will remain for the present. Mr. Coolbroth is a graduate of the Hitchcock Free Academy in the class of 1880 and Mrs. Coolbroth was graduated from the same institution in the class of 1881. Mrs. Coolbroth, who was Miss Stella Homer, comes of a well-known Brimfield family identified with the history of the town from its earliest settlement, and it is interesting to note that the place which Mr. Coolbroth has bought adjoins the farm allotted in the original distribution to proprietors to Leonard Hoar, the ancestor of Mrs. Coolbroth's family, branches of which settled in different places on Tower Hill. There have been carried back this week to that historic hill articles which were in possession of members of the Hoar family living in that part of the town 175 years ago. The place now being occupied by Mr. Coolbroth's family has important historical associations as it was the property of Jonathan Brown, the first Brown of Brimfield, who was the first housewright and joiner of which there is any record in Brimfield, and who was prominent in the councils preliminary to the Revolution as well as one of the minute men responding to the Lexington alarm. Jonathan Brown moved from Beverly to Brimfield in 1739 and first lived in a house which is not standing, while the house which he afterwards occupied, now owned by Mr. Coolbroth, is said to have been built by Jabez Nichols in 1760. Of special interest in this house are the walls of one of the sleeping rooms which are stencilled with a conventional design, a mode of decoration which preceded that of wall paper.

M. E. Haley, Thomas Haley and Howard Booth have returned from a trip to New York City.

Miss Bertha B. Bliss of Brookline has been a guest this week at the home of George M. Hitchcock.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Lincoln Peirce have returned to Newtonville after spending a month at their summer home in Brimfield.

Dr. S. A. Fisk has entertained at his home on Prospect Hill this week two of his college friends, ex-Gov. Henry Roberts of Connecticut and Charles S. Miller of New York.

Arthur A. Stoughton of New York gave a talk relating to the commemoration of the centenary of Edgar Allan Poe by the Bronx Society of Arts and Sciences after the distribution of books Saturday evening in the public library. The commemoration exercises were held in Poe Park in Fordham and in the auditorium of New York University. Mr Stoughton was chairman of the committee that arranged the commemoration and he presented the bust which is placed in the park opposite the cottage where Poe spent his last years. Mr. Stoughton read extracts from addresses given by Prof George E. Woodbury and Hamilton Wright Mabie and from Woodbury's life of Poe and poems delivered by Edwin Markham and John Henry Boner. These readings were interspersed with recitations of several of Poe's poems by Mr. Stoughton. About 40 remained to enjoy an interesting and impressive hour.

BULLET THROUGH WINDOW.

Crashes Into Passenger Coach Near West Warren.

THREE MEN HAVE NARROW ESCAPES.

Fortunately No One Hurt. Three Tramps Arrested, But Nothing Proved Against Them.

The passengers on the smoking car of the westbound train due in West Warren shortly after 7 o'clock were given a severe fright Tuesday morning, when a revolver bullet was shot through one of the windows while the train was half way between Warren and West Warren. The bullet lodged in the woodwork on the other side of the car, narrowly escaping three men who sat in two seats in the line of the bullet.

At the time of the shooting two freight trains were passing on the east-bound track, and three men were seen in a coal car. An account of the affair was sent from West Warren to Boston, and telegrams sent to Warren and West Brookfield to hold the freights and search the men. No men were found on the first freight, which was caught at West Brookfield. The second freight backed off east of Warren to allow express train No 36 and the milk train to pass. Station Agent Homer Tupper, after calling on the police force of the town, notified the crew of the special freight No. 258 to wait until the train could be searched. Three men were found, crouching in one end of a partly loaded coal car and they were arrested.

Upon reaching the detention room, the men were searched, but no firearms could be found, but an exploded shell from a 44-caliber revolver was found in one of the men's pockets, which was the only incriminating evidence found. They gave their names as George Centerbar of Albany, John W. Powers of Boston and Thomas James of Boston. A. Tessier, section foreman, sent two of his men to the place the men were arrested in search of revolvers, but none were found.

M. J. Wool of Worcester, a detective in the employ of the New York Central, interviewed the men for over an hour, but they positively declared they had no knowledge of the shooting. They cla med to have left Springfield Monday and to have slept in a box car in West Warren Monday night, and they boarded the freight car where they were found as it was slowly passing through West Warren shortly before 7 o'clock.

Officer Daley swore out warrants for vagrancy against them and they appeared in the district court in East Brookfield Wednesday morning. All three were found guilty of vagrancy, and the case of Centerbar was placed on file. The other two were committed to the house of correction for a month each.

Shortage of Milk at Ware.

James F. McManus, one of the largest milk dealers in Ware, notified about 100 of his customers in the West, Water and South street districts of that town the first of the week that he would discontinue delivering in that section, for the present at least. Mr. McManus stated that owing to the great shortage of milk, he was unable to supply all of his trade. Nearly all of the other milk dealers have been forced to give up some of their customers.

WARE.

Winfield S. Bouton, 40, and Miss Minette E. Jones, 23, both from Connecticut, were quietly married by Rev. G. B. Hatch at the Congregational parsonage Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Miss Claire Moriarty of Pleasant street was removed to St. Vincent's hospital in Worcester Monday by Dr. H. D. Gaffney, and operated on at once by Dr. M. F. Fallon of that city for appendicitis. She is slowly recovering.

John Ducey, who left the prison camp of the state's reservation at Rutland last Friday, without stopping to ask permission, was taken into custody by Officer B. W. Buckley Saturday evening and returned to the institution in charge of Fred Mitchell. He was serving a sentence of six months in the house of correction at Lowell, his home being nearby at Dracut, and was transferred to Rutland with his consent during June.

C. G. V. Sjostrom entertained over Sunday six members of his family, including his father, Ludwig Sjostrom of Miami, Fla., now in his 78th year. The other members were three brothers, Robert of New York, treasurer of the recently organized United States Worsted Company; Vladimir and Ivar, both of Lawrence; a brother-in-law, Gustin Nordenstjarna, and a nephew, Otto Rhulin, also of Lawrence. The last four made the trip to Ware in the touring car of Ivar Sjostrom. The father remained in Ware during the week.

The selectmen have stated that the work of continuing the macadam road on West street will be taken up this year and carried on as far as the amount of money available for that purpose will allow. The work will probably not be done until fall, as the superintendent of streets has arranged to secure a steam roller from the state, which he cannot have the use of for several weeks. The money available is $3000 and the strip of highway extends from Vernon street on West street to a point opposite the Indian cemetery, but for the greater part of this distance the road must be of double width and for a long distance on the east side a banking wall will have to be built. It is thought that the money will do about half of the distance.

FORMER RESIDENTS BACK.

Successful Old Home Week Gathering at Wales.

TWO DAYS OF QUIET CELEBRATING.

Addresses, Ball Games, Big Picnic, Social Gatherings, Dance, and Good Time Generally.

In motor vehicles, large and small, in barges and pony-carts, on bicycles and some on foot, the sons and daughters of Wales came back last Saturday and Sunday to the sixth annual celebration of Old Home Day. Some there were who had returned each year, while others had allowed a quarter or even half a century to elapse without visiting the scenes of their childhood. Many came bringing with them sons and daughters who were eager to see where father or mother once lived and the old house, or house-spot, was visited, flowers gathered and clippings taken from favorite vines and shrubs. Although Wales, like the neighboring towns and cities, is suffering from the continued drought a sudden but generous shower of rain fell on Friday afternoon, laying the dust and making the weather all that could be desired for Saturday and Sunday.

The picnic was held Saturday in the ball ground grove, which seems so well adapted for the purpose and in which the committee each year makes some improvement for the convenience and comfort of the guests. At 11 o'clock an eloquent address was given by the Rev. Albert L. Squier, pastor of a large Methodist church in Fitchburg. Mr. Squier is a native of the adjoining town of Monson and is naturally interested in this vicinity and expressed the wish that the advantages of Wales might be more fully known to people who sweltter in the cities. He spoke of the Old Home Week movement and of how generally it is being tested in towns and states everywhere and of its tendency to help the communities in which it is observed by bringing out and preserving much of town history which would otherwise be overlooked or forgotten, thus adding to the pride of the citizen in his own community and so bringing about improvements in public institutions and buildings as well as in homes, lawns, etc. He cited the case of H. H. Rogers as a remarkable instance of what one individual has accomplished for his town. He mentioned the renewed interest in forestry and agriculture in Massachusetts, and the work the Grange is doing for the rural communities. He then spoke with feeling of the old houses made by man, and even though deserted by him, still full of tender memories, also of the hardships of former generations and our indebtedness to them for much of that which we enjoy to-day.

Following this address, which was much enjoyed by all, lunch baskets were opened and their contents eagerly devoured for the pine-scented air of the grove gives an appetite to all. From one o'clock on during the afternoon frequent and pleasing musical selections were rendered by Blanchard's orchestra of Southbridge. A ball game was played by the Scholastics of Southbridge and the Independents of Monson. The score was 8 to 2 in favor of the Scholastics. Less interest than usual was displayed in the game as neither was a home team, but the social part of the program was just as heartily enjoyed as ever and people went about all the afternoon hunting up old acquaintances and introducing themselves whenever necessary. At 6 o'clock on the Wales pond came the boat race which was won by Charles Drechsler. With the beauty of a full moon shining on the lake a large company gathered again in the evening at the pavilion and danced and chatted.

The first car Sunday brought still other guests, business men who could not leave office or store on Saturday, but who wished to spend every possible moment of the season in their native town. At 3 o'clock carriages and automobiles were lined up outside the old church on the hill and a large number gathered for the one service of the year that is held in the ancient edifice. After singing by the congregation, scripture reading and prayer by Rev. George H. Hudson and selections by the junior choir of the Baptist Sunday school, the Rev. E. B. Dolan of Agawam, who was chairman of the Old Home Day committee at the time of the first two celebrations, addressed the meeting in his usual pleasing manner. He mentioned the past celebrations that he had attended, first as an active worker and speaker, later as a visitor, and said that he knew it would not be the words that were spoken so much as the memories of the past that would have an abiding influence. For his text he took the words, "No man liveth unto himself alone," and applied it to the community as well as to the individual and suggested that even by one's thought he exerts an influence that is felt for good or ill. He emphasized the fact that love of home is not dependent upon outward conditions but rather upon the home spirit which can be found in the poorest cabin as well and sometimes better than in the costliest palace. In closing he urged the people of the community to take and to show a kindly interest in one another and to prepare for the "laug hame." After this service as usual the audience seemed loath to depart and lingered and visited about the door while some of the tardiest of the guests, having just arrived, climbed the stairs to the auditorium and went and sat for a few minutes in the hard uncushioned pews where they used to sit with father and mother, and brother and sister in the days of "Auld Lang Syne."

The following is a partial list of the visitors: Charles Morris, George Morris, Mr and Mrs Elliott Brown, Mr and Mrs James Tupper, Mr and Mrs Willard Nelson, Miss Selina Orcutt, Mrs H T Moulton, Miss Mildred Moulton, Mr and Mrs Edgar Squier, Mr and Mrs Fred Cady and daughter, George Kenerson, Mr and Mrs Irving Bradway, Horace Squier, William Flint, Misses Gertrude and Bessie Flint, Miss Hannah Welch, Fred Horton, Merton Thompson, Mr and Mrs William Thompson, Beatrice Belding, Beecher Blanchard, Mr and Mrs William Bowden, Mrs George Adams, Mr and Mrs A E Shaw, Harold and Kathryn Shaw, Mrs Dwight Barnes, C M Webber, Harry Medzker, Mr and Mrs Herbert Heck, Lyman Miller, Milton Belcher, Mrs Lucian Washburn, Mrs Rogers, Harry Rourke, A Thompson, Myron Wright, C F Orcutt, Mrs Charles Moore, Gladys and Morris Moore, Mrs Edith Kennedy and Lincoln Kennedy, Mrs W K Simmons, Mrs Waterman Penery, Mrs William Ricketts, Dr and Mrs Ellis and Mr and Mrs W B Whittemore, all of Monson; Eugene Cady, Charles Eager, Carl Green, Mr and Mrs Fred Bowden and Miss Ida Bowden, the Misses Amy and Maude Arnold, Milton H Soule, Miss Mary

A Little More Cross.

A little more cross and a little less creed,
A little more beauty of brotherly deed;
A little more bearing of things to be borne,
With faith in the infinite triumph of morn,
A little less doubt and a little more do
Of the simple, sweet service each day brings to view;
A little more cross, with its beautiful light,
Its lesson of love and its message of right;
A little less sword and a little more rose
To soften the struggle and lighten the blows.
A little more worship, a little more prayer,
With the balm of its incense to brighten the care;
A little more song and a little less sigh,
And a cheery good-day to the friends that go by.
A little more cross and a little more trust;
In the beauty that blooms like a rose out of dust;
A little more lifting the load of another,
A little more thought for the life of a brother;
A little more dreaming, a little more laughter,
A little more childhood, and sweetness thereafter;
A little more cross and a little less hate,
With love in the lanes and a rose by the gate.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Lost on Main street Saturday morning an ivory rattle with a silver bell, bell marked "J." Finder please return to A. W. Holbrook, North Main street.

PALMER NEWS.

WOMAN ROBBED.

Mrs. A. P. Adams of Thorndike Victim of Two Sharpers.

Mrs. A. P. Adams of Commercial street, Thorndike, was robbed of a valuable gold watch and chain Wednesday night by an unknown man and woman to whom she had rented a room. The woman called on Mrs. Adams about 5 o'clock Wednesday and stated that she would like to hire a room for a couple of months for herself and husband, giving her name as Mrs. Ford. She was accommodated by Mrs. Adams.

Yesterday morning, the couple failing to put in an appearance, Mrs. Adams rapped on their door about 11 o'clock to awaken them. Shortly after the woman came down stairs and said that she was expecting a dress suit case on the train and was going to the depot to get it. When or where the man had gone Mrs Adams did not know. After the woman went out Mrs. Adams went to the room occupied by the couple and found that a gold watch and chain which she had forgotten to take from the bureau drawer the night before, had disappeared. She hastened to the depot, but failed to find the woman, and upon inquiry learned from Station Agent Wendling that no such woman had been there. Mrs. Adams at once notified Police Officer Edward McKelligett, but no trace of the strangers could be found. The police in the villages and nearby towns and cities have been notified to be on the watch for the couple. The man is rather short and slight, and much younger than the woman, who is of dark complexion, weighing about 130 or 140 pounds, and about 25 years of age; she wore a large tub shaped hat covered with flowers, a white shirt waist and dark skirt The couple were seen going in the direction of the upper village in Thorndike after leaving Mrs. Adams' house and it is thought that they went to Lake Junction and boarded the electric cars for parts unknown.

The woman told Mrs. Adams, when hiring the room, that she had lived in Palmer and also in Springfield, where she had worked in the Five and Ten Cent store. She said that her husband worked on the steam cars.

The watch and chain, which were taken, were valuable and highly prized by the owner, having been in her possession for the past half century. The watch was a gentleman's hunting case, solid gold, valued at $100, with the monogram "A. C. K." within a scroll on the front of the case. The chain was a solid gold lady's chain valued at $50.

FIREMEN'S BENEFIT.

Last Opportunity to Help Swell the Boys' Relief Fund Near.

The Palmer firemen have been working hard this week to add to their benefit fund by the generous offer of J. W. Gorman, manager of the Forest Lake theatre, who is given them a percentage on all tickets sold for the the theatre this week by them. The tickets are good for any performance this week or next Sunday, and the boys have been canvassing all the week for their sale. They have succeeded in disposing of a generous number of the 5000 allotted them, but the storm of Wednesday evening and yesterday diminished the theatre attendance and the consequent profit to the firemen. They will make an effort to make up for this on this evening and during the rest of the performances allowed them. Their profit is only on the tickets sold by them, and not on those bought at the box office, so all who wish to help the boys should be sure and buy theatre tickets of members of the company, or of someone who has the special tickets.

Hard Fight With Forest Fire.

The firemen had a hattle royal with a forest fire on the "Stndley" farm east of the village Tnesday and Wednesday. They were called ont abont 1 30 Tnesday afternoon and after a brisk scrimmage thonght they had the fire ont and retnrned home. The fire managed to rnn along nnder ground, following tree roots, for a long distance and broke ont again later in the day, necessitating the attention of a force of men in the evening. It broke out again Wednesday morning and a gang worked from 10 nntil 6 before they finally stopped it within 300 feet of 200 cords of wood and about 250,000 feet of lnmber belonging to J. M. Allen. Jacob Gold, owner of the farm, lost some wood by the fire, as well as damage to trees, etc.

Gold-headed Cane for Oldest Resident.

The chairman of the selectmen, Henry W. Holbrook, has received from the Boston Post a handsome gold-headed cane which he is requested to deliver to the oldest citizen of the town with the compliments of the Post. He is to keep it as long as he lives, and at his death it is to go to the then oldest citizen. The selectmen are desirons of learning beyond the shadow of a doubt who is entitled to the cane, but have little knowledge of the ages of the older citizens; they have the name of one who is 86 years old, but if there are any who are older, in any village or section of the town, they are requested to send their name and age to the Journal office.

Next Week's Lake Show.

Another of Matt Ott's musical comedies —"The Man and the Mummy"—will be the attraction at the Forest Lake theatre next week. The piece is a Spanish-American melange and the action is laid in Montezuma, Mexico. The plot is not heavy, but there is said to he lots of fnn. The piece has to do with a mummy which comes to life and creates no end of trouble; she is very beautifnl and the usual consequences result. There are a lot of catchy songs and some good specialties by way of variety.

George, the 14-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Summers of Converse street, is ill with typhoid fever.

Miss Rnth A. Trumble and Orris Ives were married at the Baptist parsonage last week Thursday evening by Rev. C. W. Williams.

The executive committee of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society will hold a meeting this evening at 8 o'clock in the Converse House.

The store in the Holden block, recently occupied by the moving picture show, is being fitted up for a firm of milliners from Thompsonville, Ct.

Undenominational services will be held every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. O. C. Marcy on the corner of Walnnt and Pleasant streets.

The Masons of Ware, Warren and West Brookfield are to have a clambake at Lake Wickaboag, West Brookfield, Augnst 12th. Several from this town are planning to go.

Benson Charles, the three-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. O'Neil, died Saturday morning of marasmus after an illness of some length. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon.

Four boys who had jumped a freight in Worcester were gathered in about midnight Monday by Officer Crimmius. Two of them were taken back to their homes Tuesday by their parents.

The E. Brown Company of Palmer has been awarded the contract for heating the new Congregational church building. The contract for the seats goes to the American Seating Company through the Boston agency.

An ivory rattle which was lost on Main street last Saturday morning is advertised for at the head of this column, the owner being particularly anxious to recover it on account of the associations connected with it.

George H. McClean of Springfield has secured the contract for heating and ventilating the two new dormitories of the children's group, under process of construction at the epileptic hospital, and the administration building.

Mrs. L. A Royce was called to Fitchburg Sunday by the death of her brother, Charles Oliver, at the age of 78 The funeral was held Sunday. Mr. Oliver lived in Palmer for a time, being well known by many of the residents here.

The annual field day of the O. E. S. will be held next Wednesday with Trinity chapter of Amherst at Orient Springs Members of Revere chapter of Palmer will leave on the 10 o'clock car for Bondsville, going from there to Amherst by steam and returning by trolley.

Rev. F. S. Brewer and O P Allen were delegates from the Congregational church to the council at North Wilbraham Monday called by Grace Union church to dismiss its pastor, Rev. Vernon H. Deming Mr. Allen was one of the council which installed Mr. Deming.

Rev. W. H. Gibbs of Lawrence, who is visiting his son, Rev. F W. Gibbs, fell from the piazza of the house Sunday morning and received a severe cut over one eye, cuts and bruises on one hand, besides a general shaking up. Fortunately his hurts were not serious.

The services of the Congregational church will be held in St. Paul's building next Sunday as usual: Morning worship 10.45, subject of the sermon, "A Plumb Line." Sunday school meets at 12 o'clock, song service Christian Endeavor prayer-meeting at 7 o'clock; subject, "Why war should he abolished."

Clayton L Alexander, 47, a former resident of Palmer and engaged while here in the manufacture of brick at West Brimfield, died suddenly on the morning of July 27 at his home in Burlington, Vt., where he had lived for the past five years, holding at the time of his death the position of deputy clerk and inspector of customs.

A young doe was struck and killed near North Wilbraham last Friday evening by the electric car due in Palmer at 8.15 One leg and three ribs were broken, one of the latter penetrating the heart. The animal was brought to Palmer, where Deputy Game Commissioner Luman distributed the meat among those who happened to be about.

The regular services of the Baptist church in the Advent chapel next Sunday will be as follows: Men's prayer meeting at 10.15, morning worship at 10.45, sermon subject "A Check Cashed." Sunday school at 12. Evening worship and Christian Endeavor praise service at 7; subject of sermon, " A Good Man's Shadow." All are invited.

The funeral of Mrs. Nicholas K. Rogers, who died Friday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Horace R. Paine, on South Main street, was held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. F. W. Gibbs of the Universalist church officiating. The bearers were her son-in-law, H. R. Paine, and nephews, Rolf, Glenn and Rexford Paine. Burial was in the Palmer cemetery.

Charles Davis, living on the road to Monson, was thrown from his carriage Friday evening while driving home with his wife and child, and is sufferiug from a dislocated shoulder as a result; Mrs. Davis was cut over one eye but the child escaped harm. The horse shied suddenly and brought the carriage in contact with the tool car of the electric road, which was standing in front of the car barn.

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company has been hard at work for three days laying its conduit through Main street, in which the company's wires will be placed. Four tubes of creosoted wood, the life of which is said to be 30 years, are laid, through each of which a cable will be passed. The conduit will extend from Thorndike to Church street, with outlets at various places between the extremities.

The Holmes-Cady Memorial Society will hold its 12th annual meeting at Crystal Lake House, between Stafford Springs and Ellington, Ct., Thursday, Aug. 12, with a basket lunch at noon in the dining hall of the Lake House. The trolley cars from Hartford to Stafford Springs pass the place hourly. All descendants of the Holmes and Cady families are invited to be present and are expected to bring a basket lunch.

There was some little excitement on North Main street about 7 o'clock Sunday evening when a bright fire was seen close to an automobile standing by the sidewalk, and a crowd quickly gathered. A chemical extinguisher was rushed to the scene in another anto on the supposition that the standing machine was on fire, bnt the blaze was only a small quantity of gasoline which had dripped to the ground and been set on fire intentionally.

Appearances indicate that the Ware River roundhouse will be rebuilt on the old location. A gang of men began Tuesday the tearing down of the remains of the former building. While there is much indignation along North Main street that the road declines to move the house, there is nothing that can be done to prevent it being rebuilt; if the undesirable conditions formerly existing are continued in the new building it is likely that a move will be made to have the nuisance abated.

At the regular monthly meeting of the selectmen Monday there was a public hearing on the petition of the telephone company for a location through Main street for its conduit; there was no opposition and the petition was granted, with a location on the north side of the street. The contract for the construction of the North Main street sewer was awarded to Calvin W. Johnson; the town is to furnish the pipe, in fact it has been on the ground for some time. Dominick Accorsi of Three Rivers was granted a pool license.

District Court.

Last Satnrday one "drunk" was placed on probation nntil Sept. 7.

Monday was probation day, with only two cases to appear; one was discharged, hnt the other failed to appear.

Tnesday morning Jen Moskalik and Janbin Parada of Wesson street, Wilbraham, were found guilty of assault and fined $20 and $10 respectively, which they paid. One "drunk" was continued until the 14th, and one was fined $6 and given until September 7 to find the money.

Yesterday morning Jan Lazar and Adam Dyman, both from the Ludlow end of Wilbraham, were charged with an assault; they pleaded not guilty and the cases were continued nntil next Friday, bonds in the sum of $50 being furnished in each case.

When the mercury boils you can find coolness and relief in a delicions glass of Williams' Root Beer.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Aug. 4, 1909.

To-day Gov. Draper has nominated the new homestead commission. It was not necessary for him to do this, for the resolve under which he has acted says that the governor "may" appoint. It was left at his discretion and this action, therefore, commits him to the idea sufficiently to give it a trial. It is an idea which was proposed, in this particular case, by Representative James H. Mellen of Worcester, but it is an old idea and has been tried before with no encouraging results The resolve, after providing that the governor may appoint the commission says that they shall serve without compensation "but may incur such expense, not exceeding $1000, as shall be approved by the governor and council. It shall be the duty of the commission to consider whether it would be expedient for the commonwealth to acquire or open for settlement lands in country districts with the view to aiding honest, industrious and ambitious families of wage-earners to remove thereto from congested tenement districts of the various large cities and towns of the commonwealth, to the end that such lands may ultimately pass into the possession of the families settling upon them. The commission shall report statistics showing the probable expense to the commonwealth of the undertaking, and any plans which it may recommend for adoption, together with any recommendations for legislation which the commission may deem proper The commission shall report to the next General Court on or before January 15, 1910."

Of the five commissioners named to-day, Albion F. Bemis is in the Governor's council, serving his third term from the second district. He has been in House and Senate the regular time for a man who makes the orthodox score before getting laid away on the shelf. This is his third term in the council, and he is as fond of public life, and able in its, as most of the men who get to the Legislature He would doubtless have congressional aspirations, if there was any prospect that John W. Weeks would finish his course. Jeremiah Mahoney, second, is a Lawrence lawyer and judge of the local police court. Freeman M Saltus, third, is editor of the Worcester Labor News. George S. Ladd, fourth, has been in the House, is past master of the state grange and a member now of its executive committee. He is thoroughly familiar with local agricultural and real estate conditions, as much as any man who could have been selected. William S Felton of Salem, fifth, is a prominent business man who has been much interested in public affairs. It will be noticed that Worcester county gets two of the five appointees. As to the effort to get people to leave the city, it is the experience of men in close touch with the very ones who would seem to be the best subjects of the policy, that they object strongly to getting away from their city haunts. City Missionary Daniel W. Waldron, the chaplain of the House of Representative for 31 years, can tell many stories of the way that wretched people cling to their city homes of poverty, when it would seem as if they would welcome the chance of getting out where air is fresh and there is relief from the hot pavements of summer and the chilly attic of winter. But many families who have been helped to better country conditions have surprised and disappointed their benefactors by turning up in the city once more, after a brief stay in the country. It is a hard prospect which Mr. Mellen's movement faces.

Writing at an hour when the prospect for a genuine rainy day seems better than it has for a month, it is to be observed that all about this part of the state the drouth is so severe that it has come to be a protuberant fact of every day's living. Wherever one goes where grass should grow, except for the protection of occasional shade or the advantags of low places, there is nothing but brown stubs, as if the entire surface had been scorched. Many are the shrubs whose leaves are wilted, almost as if the wood had been cut off close to the ground. Brooks are dry, and there is that parched and brazen aspect of the entire landscape which makes one suffer to look at it. The dry weather must be of enormous damage to the market gardens hereabout, and thus the Hub sympathizes with the sufferers in other parts of the state. Right in the face of this privation of water, however, the city of Boston, and the entire metropolitan district look serenely upon burned fields and evaporating lakes and ponds, for the great Cochituate reservoir holds for the district such an abundance of water that if there should be no rainfall for an entire year, yet the people could use water just the same during all that time. There has been some talk lately of Boston's going west from the Cochituate basin to the valley of the Swift river in Hampshire, or to the Ware river, in order to get further supply. But Secretary William N. Davenport of the metropolitan water commission says that the people of those valleys need not have the slightest fear, for the district cannot do anything without legislative authority to spend more money, and no move has been made for asking for such authority. He says that not for 20 years is it probable that the metropolitan district will be compelled to make any addition to its supply.

But there are other things in the suburbs to notice than burned lawns. The rider on electrics who comes in through the residential districts will notice that an immense amount of building is being done. Having, this morning, come through portions of Brookline and Brighton, the fact has been impressed with fresh force how rapidly Boston is growing in population. On the main avenues of travel and on the side streets many apartment houses are in process of construction. Thousands of people will soon be in homes which to-day are in the hands of workmen, for it is said that these apartments are let even before they are finished, such is the demand for more house room Some of the buildings have only three floors above the basement. Others have four or five, but there was seen only one case where there was any pretension to erecting a building of numerons stories. The tendency is for Boston to grow horizontally, rather than vertically, except in the business section, and there the laws forbid any business block from being more than two and a half times the width of the street. As nearly every street in the business part is narrow, the new buildings can never become skyscrapers, as in New York and elsewhere.

The new state board of education is taking the utmost pains to discover a suitable man to become the new commissioner of education. It does not seem possible, at this hour, that Secretary Martin of the late board, will be elected to the position. High and exceptional qualifications are demanded in the new man. He must be a genius who combines a wonderfully broad and active personality with mental grasp sufficient to get all the merits out of the two systems of industrial, or vocational, and cultural education and combines them into one successful whole. It is believed in the new state board that Massachusetts faces a crisis in educational and industrial development and that a man is demanded who has the eye to see the new situation, the will to force into adoption the new policy and the confidence of the board must stand behind him. It is felt that there is general dissatisfaction on the part of the mass of the people, with the barren results of our educational system, and reform must be had which will fit boys and girls better for their daily living and will not waste as much time upon matters which are of little consequence.

In the political world there is no change from the situation as it has existed regarding the probable candidacies this fall. All of the Republican state ticket remain sure of renomination, and James Valley is still without a rival in sight for the Democratic nomination. The broad fact about the conditions in Massachusetts is that there is a positive growing opposition to the high tariff and President Taft holds the confidence of his party by insisting upon lower rates. So much does this seem to be so that it looks as if he must be called the savior of his party, if the next congressional elections shall prove that it has been saved. There is a growing complaint at the constant rise of prices. It matters not whether this is caused by the steady increase in the production of gold or not. The people know that the tariff is high and that the trusts want to put it higher. They know that prices of daily living are going up. They believe that wages and salaries are not nearly keeping up with prices of necessaries Hence there is accumulating the material for a political revolution and it may come in spite of Taft's work. It surely seems as if it would come if he had not insisted upon downward revision. LANDON.

Monson News.

ACADEMY'S NEW PRINCIPAL.

Arrives in Town and Begins Work. New Faculty and Curriculum.

The coming year at Monson Academy bids fair to be one of progress and upbuilding. The school will have an entirely new management and faculty with one exception and there will be changes in the curriculum which will tend to strengthen the college preparatory courses especially.

Henry Franklin Dewing, A. B., Harvard University, 1904, has been chosen principal. Mr. Dewing was born in Revere in 1880, was educated in the public schools of his native town and entered Harvard from Chelsea high school in 1900. Following his graduation he was head of the department of science at Salisbury high school of Salisbury, Ct., and for the past four years has been principal of Alleghany Academy of Cumberland, Md., the leading preparatory school of the central and western part of that state. He was married in 1905, Mrs. Dewing being a Radcliffe graduate, and they have two sons. Mr. Dewing comes highly recommended as a man of excellent ability in his profession. His work in building up Alleghany Academy bespeaks of his capableness as a principal. He will teach English and physics.

The other members of the faculty are all secured except a successor to Miss F. M. Nixon in the science and commercial branches. George Stewart Miller, Tufts 1906, a native of North Andover, will teach physics, history and commercial law and will be in charge of Cushman Hall. William M. Lee Jr. of Malden, a graduate of Dartmouth in 1908, will be the instructor in English, general science and physical culture. He will also have charge of the athletic interests of the school. Miss Olive Tolman of Worcester, Smith College 1907, who has taught at the Academy for the past two years, will occupy her old position as instructor of Greek and Latin. Miss Carolyn Louise Munroe, Radcliffe college, will teach German and mathematics. Miss Louise Chabrier Norton of Chicago, a graduate of Chicago University, will be instructor in French and mathematics. Miss Lena Jordon of Springfield, who has conducted the drawing classes for the past two years, will hold the same position the coming year and Miss Joanna Veronica Cantwell will have charge of the music as she has for several years. The matron at Cushman Hall will be Miss Martha A. Ink of Mansfield, Ohio, a graduate of the Boston school of domestic science.

LIQUOR DEALERS FINED.

Assessed $175 Each in District Court at Palmer Monday.

The cases against the local liquor dealers were decided in the district court in Palmer Monday morning, when Fiske G. Rogers, E. J. Hughes, J. F. O'Neil and Carl Kretchsman were each found guilty of two separate sales and fined $50 for each count, and of keeping liquor with illegal intent to sell, and a fine of $75 on that count, making a total fine of $700. An appeal was taken in each case and sureties to the amount of $300 were furnished for their individual appearance in the superior court.

This ends for the present one of the most interesting cases ever brought up in Monson against the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors. Rev. J. M. Gage, who was instrumental in bringing out the complaints and pushing the cases, gave an outline of the campaign as follows:

"The unusual amount of drunkenness on Sundays began to attract my attention early in the month of June and after some deliberation I consulted Guy A. Ham, attorney for the Anti-Saloon league. Plans were formed but were not known by anyone until Sunday, July 4, when two men arrived from Boston to collect evidence. The affair was then mentioned to a few citizens. The evidence was gathered satisfactorily and then I brought a complaint before the selectmen, stating that I had the necessary evidence. This was the first idea they had of any movement of the kind, and after consideration they advised me to push the matter in the district court. When I mentioned the question of paying the bills, they said that $300 had been appropriated for such purposes and they saw no reason why it should not be used; they did not state positively, however, that they would meet the expenses of the prosecution. The fact that the dealers were convicted makes it necessary by law that the town pay for the prosecution and when I presented my bills for about $189 before the board last Monday afternoon the full amount was paid." Mr. Gage said that there had been a great amount of talk on the whole case and an attempt made to bring in personal feeling. He stated that he had no personal feeling in the matter whatever, it was simply a question whether the laws of Massachusetts be obeyed or not.

There has been some criticism since Monday that the selectmen paid the bills of the prosecutors in the liquor cases in full. No criticism is justified because according to law the town in which a criminal case is found is obliged to pay the charges in case of conviction. There was no other course of action which could have been adopted.

Death of Mrs. Elizabeth Graves.

Mrs. Elizabeth Graves, 73, a resident of Monson for many years, died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Graves on Pease avenue Tuesday morning after a two-months' illness. She was born in Wales in 1826, but came to Monson early in life and was educated here. In 1856 she married Austin Spaulding and they lived in Westboro until Mr. Spaulding's death. In 1876 she married Harrison Graves and they moved to Monson the following year. Mrs. Graves was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and was well known and respected by a large circle of friends. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Julius N. Graves of this town, and two sisters, Mrs. Eliza A. Greenwood of Machias, Me., and Mrs. A. S. Pease of New London, Ct; also one brother, William Charles of Monson. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30, Rev. J. M. Gage officiating, followed by burial in the No. 1 cemetery.

Appointment of Teachers.

The list of teachers in the public schools for the coming year has been completed, and is as follows: No. 1, grammar, Margaret T. Corcoran; intermediate, Anna C. Murphy; primary, Gertrude Bennett. Main street, Stella M. Hodge. State street, seventh grade, Helen M. Moulton; primary, Elizabeth A. McGuire. Green street, ninth grade, Mattie M. Collis; eighth grade, Bessie E. Sutcliffe. No. 8, grammar, Joana A. Leary; intermediate, Elizabeth T. Curley; primary, Marion L. Tucker. North Monson, Alice E. Carpenter. Quarry, Mary B. Merchant of Framingham; Colton Hollow, Louise Wells of Springfield; Silver Street, Agatha Healy; Pease district, Elva M. Young; State Line, Teresa M. Costello; Childs district, Alice M. Morton; Moulton Hill, Amy A. Drawbridge; East Hill, Dorothy Hill. Supervisor of music, Joana V. Cantwell; supervisor of drawing and manual training, W. Louise Larsson.

Death of Miss Olive M. Horton.

Miss Olive M. Horton, 74, a resident of Monson nearly all her life, died at the home of her nephew, William B. Grout on East Hill Tuesday afternoon after a long illness of Bright's disease. She was born in Canterbury, Ct., and came to Monson early in life and received her education here in the public schools. She was a member of the Congregational church for many years and was much respected by her many acquaintances. She leaves no near relatives. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at 2:30, Rev. J. M. Gage officiating, and the burial was in the No. 1 cemetery.

There will be a bridge whist party in the Quaboag Country clubhouse Tuesday evening in charge of Mrs. F. M. Fenton, Mrs. R. D. Tucker and Miss W. W. Cooke.

Mrs. Sophia Smith underwent a successful operation for a cataract on one eye last Monday and has recovered her sight. The operation was performed by Dr. Moore of Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. John Pendergast, Misses Margaret and Elsie Looney, Miss Louise Pendergast, Esther Priestly and Loretta Powers have returned from a week's camping out at Crystal Lake, Ct.

Jeremiah Fountain was painfully injured while fishing last Monday. He was casting his line when the hook caught in his left cheek and was so deeply imbedded as to require the services of a physician in extracting it. The wound is not considered serious.

Several firemen responded to a still alarm Wednesday afternoon and extinguished a grass fire set by an engine on the Central Vermont railroad near Belmont avenue. The flames were working near George Aldrich's property but were put out before any damage was done.

A petition signed by several citizens has been sent to the county commissioners requesting them to determine the bounds of Cushman street. Until this is done buildings operations on E. J. Hughes' new block will be suspended. The commissioners will be in Monson September 7th in response to the request.

Edward Graves of Brooklyn, Newton C. Graves of Orange, Mrs. H. S. Lyman of Talcottville, and Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Taylor of Easthampton have been spending a few days during the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Julius Graves on Pease avenue, being called here by the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Graves.

The W. N. Flynt Granite Company have taken the contract to build the foundation for A. D. Norcross's new block on the Central block site and work was begun Tuesday. The building will not occupy quite all the space used by the brick block which was burned but will be so constructed that an addition can be readily made at any time.

Work on the Green street bridge is progressing favorably and the concrete is being put on. The work is being done by the New England Construction Company of Worcester and the new bridge will be ready for use in a short time. The F. B. Berdlow Company of Springfield are at work on the Borgeson bridge and the iron frame-work has already been laid prepatory to the concrete.

Monson people will be interested in the notice which was received from Minneapolis to the effect that A. M. Morrell and Arthur R. Nichols had entered into partnership for the practice of landscape architecture and engineering. Arthur R. Nichols is the son of the former Rev. Mr. Nichols, who was pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church for several years, and an Academy graduate.

BELCHERTOWN.

Miss Carrie Holland is visiting her sister, Mrs. Fiske, in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Talmadge of Springfield has been the guest of her brother, Major John Anderson at the "Bivouac."

Miss Nancy Carney, assistant postmaster, is spending two weeks at the beaches, and Miss Mary Baldwin is substituting in the office.

Alvin S. Merrill, 26, died in the Springfield hospital last Friday night as the result of injuries received by being kicked in the chest by a horse Friday afternoon on the C. P. Bolles stock farm. His chest was badly crushed and he received internal injuries. The funeral was held in the home of Rev. N. J. Merrill Monday afternoon at 2, Rev. G. A. Downey officiating, and burial was in Woodland Dell cemetery.

Mrs. Amy Seaver celebrated her 97th birthday last week Thursday at the home of her granddaughter, Miss Etha Turner, in East Wilbraham, where she has lived for many years. Many relatives and friends called to offer congratulations and to leave tokens of remembrance. Mrs. Seaver is unusually active for one of her age, and is able to be up about the house every day, and is busy much of the time piecing quilts. She is now the oldest person in town.

Dr. C. C. Hathaway and family are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry LaBroad.

A gang of men have been at work this week on the Boston & Albany railroad, putting crushed trap rock in the roadway in front of the station in place of gravel.

The county commissioners have made their report in the case of the petition of F. W. Green and others regarding the relocation of a highway in this town. They have decided that the highway ought to be relocated from a point near the house of John Baldwin for 180 feet to the old Boston road. A plan of the proposed relocation has also been filed.

Along the North Shore.

From the north side of Central Wharf, daily and Sunday, the fine steel steamboats of the long-established and regular Gloucester line start with large numbers of delighted passengers, week-days at 10 and Sundays at 10.15 a. m.

Those who have never seen the quaint old fishing city should take this trip by all means. Enough time is given to see and "snap-shot" the many scenic charms of that picturesque locality, and a return is made in time for suburbanites to go to their homes in the early evening. Music is furnished on each round trip.

The daily and Sunday trips of the fine steel steamer "Cape Ann" to Gloucester is being taken this year by a greater number of people than ever, to whom the picturesque scenery of the rugged shores of old Cape Ann particularly appeal.

There are new objects of interest to be seen with every trip, and the grand army of cameraites, may be seen out in force these fair autumn days. Glimpses of coast scenery impossible to get in any other way are here found in great profusion. This trip can be taken in daytime, with a return to Boston in ample time to take care for suburban residences.

FORBES & WALLACE, SPRINGFIELD

Baseball Briefs.

"Bill" Drexler got his first sacrifice of the season last Saturday.

"Johnny" Rice was on deck with a safe one Saturday with bases full, scoring the three men.

Three Rivers was outbatted nearly twice Saturday by Bondsville but couldn't win. "Hard Luck."

Rogers was there with a wallop for three bases as usual last Saturday, clinching the game for Three Rivers.

Barrett tried to wrestle with a ball in the first inning in the game between Palmer and Gilbertville, and "Bill" didn't get his man.

Umpire Sheridan, who officiated at the Thorndike-West Warren game, did a good job, although he is not the man from the American League.

There is a lot of interest in the league, for if Palmer subues Bondsville and Three Rivers defeats Thorndike there will be a three-tie for second place.

Crosby, who pitched for West Warren and dislocated his shoulder at Thorndike last Saturday, will probably not pitch anymore this season. It was hard blow for West Warren.

The Palmer Town League games to-morrow are Three Rivers at Thorndike with Rogers and Snow battery for Three Rivers and Wells and Mayforth for Thorndike; Bondsville at Palmer.

Connor pitched an excellent game for Palmer last Saturday, allowing only two hits and fanning 17 of the Gilbertville sluggers with only two balls going to the outfield; he deserved his win.

"Gene" O'Leary, who has been catching for Palmer, while catching for Northampton had the first finger on his throwing hand badly split last Saturday, which will keep him out of the game for a few days.

A Caroline Islands Legend.

The Caroline islands group includes, besides coral islands, five mountainous islands of basaltic formation, beautiful and fertile with rivers and springs. Among the many queer legends of these children of the Pacific there is none more highly improbable than their theory as to the origin of these islands and their inhabitants. They think they themselves were very strong in the water—in fact, they lived in it. The story goes that a woman and her children were floating around on the reef when a man appeared from the west with a basket of soil on his shoulders. He had started out to make an island with a mountain on it. One of the children cried out to him, "Give us a little soil to make a place for our mother to rest, for she is very weak and cannot swim." He took out a handful of the earth and threw it down, making an island. As the man was going on his way over the water the son slyly made a hole in the basket, so as he proceeded on his way he left a trail of land behind. Suddenly he became conscious that the basket seemed light, and, looking around, he saw the land. In his anger he turned about and trod upon it, and thus the islands were formed.

Dressing the Sponge.

When sponges are first torn from the sea bed they are of a dark color and living. By tramping and pressing them with the feet a milky substance oozes out, whereupon the sponge dies. They are then immersed in the sea for a space of eight or ten hours. The dark, skinny substance is then removed by scraping, and gradually, through cleaning, drying and bleaching, they take on the fine yellow color which characterizes many of them.

Mrs. Turtle—"I see by the papers here that an automobile ran down a 20-foot embankment and turned turtle. Now, Henry, what I want to do is to run up a 20-feet embankment and turn into an automobile, You know I've wanted one this long while."—Circle Magazine.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE.

Palmer People Should Learn to Detect The Approach of Kidney Disease.

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistakable that they leave no ground for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The backaches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Palmer proof:

Mrs. Jerry Sullivan, living on Central street Palmer, Mass., says: "Recently when suffering from kidney trouble I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and procured a box from Lynde and Gould's drug store. I had been annoyed with backache pains in my sides and back for a long time and it only required the use of a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills to drive these attacks away. Mr. Sullivan has also used this remedy with good results and we both have great faith in its curative powers."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

BROILED FINNAN HADDIE

A finnan haddie is a haddock smoked slightly. The genuine article comes from Scotland and is cured in great smoke. It is soft and but slightly salted and smoked and will not keep as long as fish more thoroughly cured.

Broil a fish in a greased wire broiler with the flesh side down towards the coals; do not turn until almost done, as the skin scorches quickly. Place on a hot platter, add butter and a little pepper. The lemon garnish illustrated is made by cutting out little sections of the yellow part of the rind of slices of lemon leaving what resembles a rosette.

A fish weighing one and a half pounds is sufficient for a breakfast for four people and costs about twelve cents. Finnan haddie may also be creamed or made into fish balls in place of salt cod fish.

If not convenient to broil a fish it may be given an oven broil if the oven is well heated. Spread the fish on a buttered pan and set on the upper grate. Fifteen minutes should be long enough for a small fish. Ventilate the kitchen well when broiling fish, otherwise the disagreeable odor of the scorched fish will penetrate to other parts of the house.

Are Doctors Any Good?

Foolish question! Yet some people act as if a medicine could take the place of a doctor! The best medicine in the world cannot do this. Have a family doctor, consult him frequently, trust him fully. If we did not believe doctors endorsed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for coughs and colds, we would not offer it to you. Ask your doctor. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

If we did not believe doctors endorsed Ayer's Pills for constipation, biliousness, sick-headache, we would not offer them to you. Ask your own doctor about this.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Antalgica

Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Coughs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do you good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1 00 per bottle by The Quimby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

DANGEROUS CONDITIONS.

Fire Engineers Find Back Yards In Bad Shape.

INFLAMMABLE MATERIAL ALL ABOUT.

Engineers to Pass Rules Forbidding Its Accumulation. Fine Chance For Fire.

The attention of the board of engineers of the fire district having been called by Night Officer Crimmins to the conditions existing in the rear of some of the business places, they made a round of inspection Wednesday afternoon and found some things which gave them a start when they stopped to think of the possibilities.

The opportunities for fire were numerous, and so dangerous were the conditions that the only wonder is that more than one blaze has not been started by accident long before this. One was averted by Chief Summers Tuesday evening, who discovered a blaze just starting—evidently from a carelessly dropped match or cigar stump—about 10.30.

Waste of every description was found in heaps in exceedingly dangerous places. In the rear of one store quantities of waste paper and excelsior—the latter being of the most inflammable character—was found crowded under a platform to get out of the way. A pile of hay was found in another place close to a heap of small crates and packing boxes; a match carelessly dropped in the former, or a cigar stump, and the result can be guessed, the damage being determined by the time when the fire started and the good work of the firemen. Heaps of broken crates and packing cases were found in numerous places, and there were also accumulations of excelsior other than the one mentioned above. And the greater portion of the dangerous places were along a line of travel much used at certain times of the day, with the consequent liability to fires resulting from careless smokers. It was in one of these locations where Chief Summers discovered the blaze Tuesday evening.

The condition of affairs was much worse than it has ever been before—and that is saying much. It was so bad that it made the engineers "sit up and take notice," and they have determined to prevent if possible a repetition of the conditions. The statutes gives them the power to establish fire limits and prohibit the accumulation within those limits of exposed combustible material, and this they propose to do. They will give public notice of the established limits and their rules concerning the accumulation of forbidden material, and prosecutions will follow for offenders. The engineers figure that an ounce of protection is worth a pound of cure, and that no person should be allowed to endanger the property of others to the extent existing this week The limits to be established will include only the business section, and will not take in a large territory, probably.

The visit of the engineers had an effect in certain quarters, one of the worst of the places being cleaned up yesterday and the rubbish either removed or burned under supervision.

ASSESSORS' FIGURES.

A Few of the Things to be Found in the Books This Year.

The assessors have fully completed their work and the tax book will be in the hands of the collector in a few days. The increased valuation of the town this year, with the reduced tax rate, have already been given in the Journal, but there are other figures of moment, and a comparison with last year will be of interest. The total amount to be raised by taxation this year is $67,238 74, and is levied as follows:

On personal property,	$19,847.46	$23,115.37
On real estate.	42,821.28	46,931.85
On polls,	4,570.	4,398.
Residents assessed on property,	668	735
All others,	139	47
Non-residents,	160	161
All others,	33	11
Persons assessed on property,	1,000	972
Poll tax only,	1,800	1,614
Total number polls,	2,333	2,199
Polls exempt,	48	2
Number horses assessed,	471	482
Cows,	676	657
Sheep,	3	0
Neat cattle,	114	146
Swine,	146	68
Dwelling houses,	1,069	1,024
Acres land,	18,536	18,469
Fowls,	868	825

The "all others" in above schedule is made to include corporations, firms, trustees, etc., who cannot be classed as individuals, and it will be noted that the number of these is much smaller than last year. There is a slight loss in the number of horses owned in town but a distinct gain in the number of cows. There are three sheep this year against none last, while the neat cattle fall off and swine increase. There are a few less dwelling houses but more acres of land. This may seem strange to the uninitiated, who naturally think the number of acres of land within the town limits could not swell or shrink; this is true, but land which was not taxable last year may be this. For instance, a person who owns land may be, under the laws, exempt from taxation; the land is sold to some other person who is not exempt, and the taxable acreage of the town is then increased that year. This year the assessors were fortunate to find 76 acres which changed hands a number of years ago and was lost sight of, never having appeared on their books since; it was discovered in looking over old deeds in Springfield in search of other information.

Bennett Family Reunion.

The annual reunion of the Bennett family was held in Bliss's grove, North Wilbraham, Wednesday, 60 members of the family being present. C. E. Bennett of Cornell University read a paper on the early history of the Bennett family, after which the following officers were elected: President, Jasper Knight of Ludlow; secretary and treasurer, Rosabel Olds of Belchertown; executive committee, Nellie A. Fuller of North Wilbraham, Harriett Dickinson of Amherst, Archer Bennett of Ludlow. Among those present were: L. J. Bennett of Burnside, Ct; Mrs. Anstin Adams of Worcester; Mrs. Eva Graves, Charles Graves, Fred and Bessie Graves of Southampton; Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Olds, Miss Rose Olds, Mrs. Mary Doolittle, Miss Edna Doolittle, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Shaw, Mrs. W. O. Burnett, Mrs. Iva G. White, Carleton White, Mrs. G. H. B. Greene and A. D. Moore Jr., all of Belchertown; Joseph W. Bennett of Westfield, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Underwood, William Underwood and Miss Harriet Underwood of Mount Tom; Mrs. Lucina Dunbar of Springfield; Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Olds of Granby; Miss Ruby Knight of East Brookfield; Harold Woodard of Leverett; Mrs. Anna Fuller, Mrs. Nellie Fuller, Miss Mildred Fuller and Mrs. L. E. Hawley, all of North Wilbraham.

CUT OFF OWN HAND.

Fiskdale Man's Peculiar Attempt at Suicide in Wilbraham Sunday.

A man, giving the names of Alvin Niles and John Gill of Fiskdale, was found early Sunday morning lying in the woods near Moran's crossing in Wilbraham, with his left arm severed between the elbow and wrist. When questioned, he stated that he had cut off his arm with an ax which he stole, in an attempt to commit suicide. He was discovered by a Pole, who lives near the place, about 6 o'clock in the morning and Dr. M. B. Landers of Ludlow was immediately called upon. He ordered the man removed to the Mercy hospital, where he is in a critical condition. The dismembered hand and a portion of the arm were found wrapped in a piece of paper in a clump of bushes not far from the spot where the man was found.

There is little doubt that Niles was insane at the time he tried to take his life by hacking away at his arm until it was completely severed. Before he chopped the arm off he severed the fingers of the same hand with the ax Niles did the cutting each time after placing his hand and arm on a fence post, which later was discovered, spattered with blood. Niles was not found until some time after the cutting, and lost a large amount of blood from the wound.

Niles gave his age as 49 years, but it was thought at the hospital that he must be about 35 or 40. He said that he formerly was employed as a weaver in Fiskdale, but had lost his job, and was on his way to Springfield in search of work. He gave as his reason for committing suicide that he had a great craving for drink, and being unable to get any decided on the way of taking his life, supposing he would bleed to death before he was found. From the appearance of the amputated arm, it would seem that Niles must have made several unsuccessful attempts to sever the arm before he succeeded. It is thought that he was crazed by heat, liquor, or both. He said himself he was crazy.

HOSPITAL FOR WARE.

Mrs. Coggshall Gives Land and Association Will Buy Building.

A meeting of the directors of the Ware Visiting Nurse and Hospital Association was held at the home of Mrs. J. H. G. Gilbert, the first vice president, Wednesday afternoon. It was voted to buy the house on South street owned by Edward O. Deery of Worcester, which was built about 12 years ago. This will serve as a nucleus for a larger building at some time. The house will be prepared for use as a hospital as soon as the present tenants find other quarters. A committee, consisting of Mrs. Gilbert, Mrs. George E Tucker and Miss Mary B. Storrs was appointed to take charge of such repairs as are found necessary.

It was announced at this meeting that Mrs. Ellen Bond Coggshall had presented to the association the deed of a tract of land adjacent to the Deery house. This land is a part of the Cummings property and is given by Mrs. Coggshall as a memorial to her father and mother, Joseph Austin and Elizabeth Frances Cummings. The land extends westward from the Deery house for some distance and back from South street to the railroad tracks. The land was at one time held to be worth $3000 and the total value of the property thus acquired by gift and by purchase may be placed at about $6000.

1600 YOUNGSTERS LOOSE.

Ninth Annual Daniels Outing at Forest Lake.

SEVEN BIG CARS FULL OF CHILDREN.

They Owned the Grounds on Wednesday. Not an Accident to Mar the Day's Pleasure.

The hearts of over 1500 of Springfield's younger population were made happy Wednesday, when H. & D. Daniel of that city gave their ninth annual children's outing at Forest Lake. Seven double-truck cars carried the party to its destination, where eight short hours passed all too quickly to suit the youngsters, who had the time of their lives.

Everything was open to the children, and the merry-go-round, theatre, in fact every spot where there was "something doing" was crowded from the time they arrived until they started on the return trip. A ball game and various other sports were enjoyed, but the exciting moment came when Harry Daniel threw broadcast 150 Lincoln pennies. Such a scramble as there was for the coins, which the lucky ones proudly exhibited as souvenirs of a most happy day. Lunch was served at the noon hour, and never was there such a hungry crowd of youngsters. Everything eatable in sight vanished in short order, and each child left the table with a "lollypop" in his mouth. In the meantime the 90 helpers who assisted Mr. Daniel in caring for the children were not forgotten, and for these a special shore dinner was served in the pavilion. The party left at 5.20 for the homeward trip and upon reaching the Daniel store in Springfield showed their appreciation by giving rousing cheers.

ONE SMALL FIRE.

Barn Near Wire Mill Burned Friday Night. Cow Cremated.

The first alarm of fire since the Fourth of July came last Friday night about 11.45 from box 38, at Shearer's Corner. The blaze was in a small barn just beyond the Wire Mill schoolhouse on the road to Three Rivers, and it was about "all in" when discovered, a cow being converted into roast beef before help arrived. The structure was owned by Mrs. M. L. Palmer and was occupied by Charles Walker. How the fire started is a mystery. Mr. Walker closed and fastened the door late in the evening, and at 10.30 a passer-by noticed no fire or smoke. The loss on the building is about $500, and the same on contents.

HOLLAND.

Deacon and Mrs. George Putman of Worcester are spending two weeks at the Rice-Drake homestead.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Williams and daughters of Warren and Clifford Bonrne of Springfield are spending the month in town.

A ladies' sewing and missionary society has been organized by the Holland church, the first meeting being held with Mrs. Emily Brown. The next meeting will be held Monday with Mrs. Loriug Howlett.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Wright of Worcester and her sister, Mrs. Monlton, of Lawrence, and her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Burley of Worcester, and their son, Bradford, are at the Lake cottage.

WARREN.

Mrs. D. S. Ellis of Rome, N. Y., has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Herbert N. Shepard on East road.

Rev. Thomas C. Richards and family are camping in the Putnam cottage, Lake Lashaway, East Brookfield.

Mrs. William E. Nichols attended the outing of the Order of the Eastern Star at Orient park in Pelham Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Keyes of Roswell, N. Y., are guests of his sister, Mrs. Jennie S. Bowen of Burbank avenue.

Mrs. Charles H. Comins is spending the week as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Johnson of Worcester at Camp Pantauposg in Dana.

Carl M. Blair, attorney for the Ware Savings Bank, has sold the Charles H. Freeman property, corner of Southbridge and Crescent streets for $800. It was sold by Auctioneer J. W. Maxim to the bank.

At a meeting of the selectmen Wednesday, the following election officers were appointed for the ensuing year: Precinct A—Warden, James McKelligett; deputy warden, Edward F. Moran; clerk, William E. Nichols; deputy clerk, Daniel A. Hathaway; inspectors, Lewis W. Pearce and Frank H. Linnehan; deputy inspectors, Ralph R. Jones and Everett P. Sheridan. Precinct B—Warden, Charles A. Dufresne; deputy warden, Joseph Campbell; clerk, Augustine J. Fanenf; deputy clerk, John E Hurley; inspectors, Joseph D. Vigneanx and William W. Campbell; deputy inspectors, Timothy M. Collins and Benjamin B. Tait. The selectmen also appointed Joseph St. George police officer to hold office until the first Monday in April, 1910 Mr. St. George resigned his office as constable about four weeks ago and was persuaded by his friends to accept this appointment and again act as police officer.

FOR THE PALMER FAIR.

Improvements to Be Made for the Big Fair Next October.

The executive committee of the Palmer Fair has commenced work on the repairs and improvements to be made on the fair grounds for the coming exhibition October 8 and 9. Numerous improvements are contemplated, among them being the removal of the cattle to the west end of the grounds, to a space hitherto unoccupied, giving visitors a much larger area in which to move around than formerly. Water is to be provided inside the track at the lower end, a feature long needed; a new pipe will be put in the whole of the way from the main of the Palmer Water Company, and a new outlet provided for the use of the horsemen. By vote of the directors additional toilet facilities are to be provided, and these will be ample in size and convenient in location. The picket fence on the outside of the track, which was begun last year, will be materially added to this season, and additional railing on the inside of the track provided. The seats in the grand stand are receiving a coat of paint, which will be duly appreciated by all who have used the building in its former condition. The seats in the grand stand are to be reserved and sold by check this year, and the work of marking off the seats and numbering will be completed next week, it is expected, after which reserved seats will be sold at any time for either or both days of the fair. Numerous other improvements are contemplated, the aim of the officials being to provide a bigger and better fair than ever before.

Brimfield Man Shaken Up.

Orrin Hicks, one of the selectmen of the town of Brimfield, was given a bad shaking up Tuesday afternoon as a result of a fall from an electric car. Mr. Hicks was riding to Palmer, when his hat suddenly blew off. Mr. Hicks immediately jumped off for it, not waiting for the car to stop, and he received a bad toss. He was brought on the car to Palmer, where he was attended by a physician, but he was not injured beyond a severe shaking up.

PALMER CENTER.

Miss Elizabeth Christenson of Springfield has been calling on friends in this place.

Miss Mabel Sedgwick of Newton Highlands has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. E. K. Ogle.

Edward Germain of Montgomery, Vt., has returned to his former home in Three Rivers and is stopping at the Riverside Hotel.

WARE.

Joseph A. Plouff passed the state bar examinations recently, but has made no plans as yet for the future.

The board of health has been taking measures to have children who have not been vaccinated attended to before the opening of the fall term in September.

The engagement is announced of Miss Grace Marie Hinckley, daughter of Mrs. L. A. Hinckley of Amherst, and formerly of Ware, to Raymond Lee Whitney of Brockton.

Miss Clara Satz of Main street, who has been spending two months with relatives in Paris, landed in New York Saturday and arrived in Ware Sunday with her brother, Bernard Satz, who met her in New York.

According to the records in Town Clerk Morse's office, there were more deaths in Ware from January 1 to August 1 in 1908 than in the same period this year. Last year 93 persons died against 63 in the same length of time this year.

A horse driven by H. A. Waters of West Warren became frightened by a large turtle near the side of the road last Friday afternoon on the West Warren road, and shied to one side of the road. One of the front wheels of the wagon struck the fence by the roadside and threw Mr. Waters out. He clung to the reins and stopped the horse before any serious damage was done.

BELCHERTOWN.

Struck by Train.

Merrick A. Whittemore, an old resident of the town and an employe of the Springfield water works, was seriously injured last Friday by being struck by the 11.27 train on the Boston and Maine railroad. He was driving to the village from his home and when he reached the crossing saw a train approaching on the Central Vermont tracks. In avoiding this train he did not notice the Boston and Maine train coming and was struck by the engine. He was thrown and badly injured about the chest and head. On account of his age, 75 years, his condition is considered very serious.

Buildings Destroyed by Fire.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Ansel Shaw, an aged couple, was destroyed by fire last week Thursday evening. The buildings burned were located on the site of the so-called Burt place. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw, who are very feeble, were saved only by being taken out from their beds and carried out. The fire is supposed to have been set by chicken thieves, who were evidently looking for plunder in the barn adjoining the end of the shop where the fire started. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw were taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ketchen, who are entertaining them for the present.

Walter Bigelow has returned from a four-weeks' trip through Nova Scotia.

Marie West has gone to Chicago for a visit with her brother, Myron H. West.

Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Barton entertained a party of friends from Athol at Park View on Sunday.

Miss Libbie Davis, Mrs. Laura Godfrey and Miss Marie Davis enjoyed a trolley trip to Boston this week.

J. Raymond Gould, who has been employed as clerk for E. A. Fuller & Co., has resigned his position.

Miss Doris Stillman is substituting in the telephone office during the absence of Miss Shaw, who is on her vacation.

Mrs. Roberts and Miss Thayer of Holyoke, who have spent previous summers at Park View, are visiting in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Blackmer entertained Mrs. Martin Bardwell and her Sunday school class at supper last Friday evening.

Charles, the young son of H. F. Monlton, fell from a barn near his home on West Main street Saturday morning, breaking his wrist.

Oasis lodge of Rebekahs will hold an ice cream party next Wednesday evening as a benefit for Miss Eliza Hirst of Monson, who is in a hospital in Boston, where she underwent an operation recently, one leg being amputated. Miss Hirst is a member of the lodge and was formerly employed in the Ware Dry Goods store. It is hoped to secure enough money to get an artificial leg for the young woman.

Measuring the Children.

They used to stand on the door-stone gray,
By the side door, worn and old,
And we made a pencil mark for each,
For the brown heads and the gold.
Low, indeed, was the earliest mark,
For Bessie could scarcely stand;
But we held her safe, and marked her height
With careful and loving hand.

For many a year the game went on,
We made it a merry match,
And the one should win who grew the most
And who first should reach the latch.
And Harry grew slow, and Nell grew fat,
And Johnnie grew plump and round,
And no one could tell which little head
Would first at the latch be found.

But Harry it was that won at last
By the very smallest space;
And Nellie, with all her shining curls,
Held only the second place;
And Bessie, the oldest little child,
Was away beyond our sight
Where we could not tell how fast she grew
Nor measure again her height.

And all the rest of the children now
From the farmhouse old have gone;
Far above the latch now rise the heads
Of Harry, Nellie and John.
Happy and strong in the world they work,
For their childhood days are o'er;
But when they come back they still can see
The markings beside the door.

PALMER NEWS.

Awnings Much Too Low.

Complaint is being made—and justly so — of the height — or lack of it — of several awnings along Main street from the sidewalks. Several years ago all merchants were required to adjust their awnings so that they were at least seven feet above the walk. Since then they have been allowed to sag gradually until at the present time there are several where the iron framework is scarcely six feet in the air, and some where the cloth is not more than five feet and four inches. It is impossible for pedestrians to pass under these without stopping, and then there is liability of damage to headgear in the case of ladies. The awnings extend so far from the store that there is not room for two persons to walk abreast between them and the edge of the sidewalk, and an annoying and offensive condition generally prevails.

Death of Daniel Slattery.

Daniel Slattery, 63, died at his home on State avenue Wednesday evening after a several months' illness with cancer. Mr. Slattery had resided in town for 43 years, and had been employed in the foundry of R. B. Francis as moulder nearly the entire time, and was well known and highly respected. He leaves a widow and four children, Minnie A, Joseph E, Edwin D. of Palmer and John H. of Worcester; also a sister, Miss Kate Slattery of Worcester. The funeral was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock in St. Thomas's church and burial was in St. Thomas's cemetery.

Excursion to Newport.

The Central Vermont railroad will rnn an excursion to Newport, R. I., Wednesday, August 25. Round trip tickets will be sold for $1 50 The train will leave here at 7 27, arriving in New London at 10 The trip from there to Newport will be made on the steamer "Chester W. Chapin," a delightful sail of three hours. A three-hour stay is allowed at Newport, where the hathing is ideal, and besides which there are numerons other attractions.

Firemen Clear About $70.

The firemen will add about $70 to their relief fund as a resnlt of last week's benefit at Forest Lake. The boys hustled all the week and succeeded in disposing of a large number of tickets. Their efforts made an appreciable difference in the attendance at the theatre, the Saturday night crowd being one of the largest, if not the largest, ever present on that night of the week; every seat was filled and many were obliged to stand.

Wire Mill Employe Painfully Injured.

Walfred Peterson, an employe of the Wright Wire Company, was painfully injnred last Friday while at his work. His hands were caught between a drnm and the wire which was being moved on it and the fingers of the left hand were crnshed and lacerated. One finger on the right hand was also torn and the injuries proved so serious that he was removed to the Springfield hospital in the evening.

The Boston and Albany railroad announces another cheap excnrsion to Boston on Saturday of next week, the fare from Palmer being only $1 for the rondn trip.

Mrs. Fanny Hurley, who formerly lived in Thorndike, died Tuesday in West Warren and the body was brongbt to Palmer yesterday for burial in St. Thomas' cemetery.

The proposed location for the new bridge that is to replace the Hastings bridge was viewed last Friday by the state highway commission, several of the street railway and town officials.

The E. Brown Co. has been given the contract to install two steam heaters for the Thorndike Company at Thorndike, and two hot-air furnaces in L. A. Conant's two-tenement house on South Main street.

The Veteran Firemen will hold a special meeting next Wednesday evening. They will also hold a playout the same evening at 6 30. The boys are considering the question of entering the coming muster at Indian Orchard.

The Palmer friends of Mrs. M. Lillian Hills, formerly of this place, will be interested to learn of her marriage to George W. Honse of East Hartford, the ceremony taking place on Wednesday of last week in that place.

The Baptist church society held a meeting last evening and instructed the building committee to purchase the furnishings and organ for the church and gave it instructions to proceed with what is necessary for the completion of the building.

Superintendent of Streets Brainerd has greatly improved the condition of Pleasant street between Church and Central, Central from Park to Pleasant, School from Park to Pleasant and Pearl from Park to Pleasant. These were all low and have been filled in with fine gravel obtained from the excavation for the cellar of the new Congregational church.

The pulpit of the Congregational church will be supplied next Sunday by Rev. F. W. Gibbs of the Universalist church. Preaching at 10.15 a. m., Sunday school at 12, song service and Christian Endeavor prayer meeting at 7. Miss Olsen will play a violin solo at the evening service. All services are held in St. Paul's building and all are cordially invited to attend.

FOREST LAKE.

Good Bill This Week. Girl Swimmer Every Day. Farce Next Week.

The show at the Forest Lake theatre has drawn large audiences at every performance this week. The piece is "The man and the mummy," a musical comedy, with Phil Ott as the comedian. The scene is in Mexico, and the mummy comes to life and creates amusing complications. An added attraction every afternoon has been Rose Pitonoff, a girl swimmer, who has been giving exhibitions of diving and fancy swimming every afternoon. She is only 14 years old, but made a record recently by swimming Hull Gnt near Boston, a feat which has baffled many strong men. In addition to showing fancy strokes and doing other "stunts," she swims across the lake every afternoon. Sunday she will swim across and back to establish a record. The band concert Sunday will be by the Stevens band of Chicopee.

The theatre program next week will be the farce, "My Wife's Husband," by Leonard Grover and company; Gardner and Stoddard in vaudeville frivolities; Lorette and Latina, juggling and pantomime; and Tommy Donnelly, the old-time negro minstrel.

The baby contest is in full blast. A gold watch is to be given the most popular baby in each of these places: Palmer, Three Rivers, Thorndike, Bondsville, Ware, Monson, Gilbertville, voting conpons being given every theatre attendant. The contest began Wednesday evening.

Walter W. Snow, a former resident of Palmer, living on the Talmadge farm in Three Rivers, died Wednesday in Meriden, Ct. The body was brought to Palmer to-day for burial in the Four Corners cemetery.

The regular services of the Baptist church will be held next Sunday in the Advent chapel on Park street, beginning with a prayer meeting for men at 10 15. Morning worship and sermon on "The Bad Use of Good Characteristics," Bible school at 12. Yonng people's meeting and praise service at 7, followed by a short sermon on "The Coming Vacation."

The Springfield-Worcester limited express passenger cars, which were installed two weeks ago on the electric road, are being well patronized every day. The cars have been running as close to the schednle — three hours between points — as the regular cars, weather conditions and stress of traffic affecting all alike at times. The through trip with only ten stops is appreciated by patrons, and the cars are as fine as any in this section of the country.

District Court.

Antoni Marco paid a fine of $50 last Saturday for peddling without a license.

Monday the case of one "drnnk" was placed on file and that of another continued until September 7.

Yesterday morning Patrick Howard of Monson was given 60 days in the house of correction for drunkenness. When gathered in by Officer Murray on Wednesday Howard had a knife and was threatening to do some "carving" if his demands were not acceded to, and that quickly.

WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. Myron Brnuer is spending the week in Waltham.

Edward Brewer of Dalton has been a guest at the Brewer Homestead this week.

Mrs. Mary Bancroft Judd of Warehouse Point, Ct., class of '88, has been spending the week at Rich hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sigsbee of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Welch of New York have been guests of Mrs. R. M. Welch.

Rev. Dr. William R. Newhall of Somerville, formerly principal at Wesleyan Academy, who has been spending part of the summer with his family on Faculty street, left this week to spend two weeks in the Maine woods.

There will be no services in the Congregational church for the next three Sundays, as Rev. M. S. Howard is enjoying his annual vacation. He will attend the old home exercises in South Yarmouth Snnday and then will join his danghter, Miss Mary E Howard at North Truro.

WALES.

Death of Mrs. Mary Gokey.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Gokey, 79, who died of heart failure Snnday morning, was held at her home Tnesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Gokey was born in Ireland but came to this country early in life and had lived the greater part of the time in this town. She leaves a danghter, Mrs Mary Ferguson, and two grandchildren, Walter and Sibyl Fergnson.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Aug. 11 1909

Whatever Nathan Matthews says about the redncton of assessment of his hotel or park property hy the amount of $157,000, there will be two parties among the voters over the charges that he has been wrongfully favored at the expense of other people. So much political animus attaches to his relation with many people that it is impossible to get an impartial judgment from them. He has come out positively and almost bitterly, in his capacity as chsirman of the first Boston finance commission, against direct nmnations as a political principle. Hence many voters who believe that he is wrong would be glad to discredit him, for the stronger he stands as a public-spirited citizen, with nnimpeached and unimpeachable judgment, the worse it will be for their pet reform. That would operate agsinst giving him a fair hearing in some qnarters. His high rank as a Democrat makes him a most valnable asset for Republicans, such as those on the New York committee to investigate direct nominations, to quote against the reform, and the nse to which he has been put hy that committee, and evidently will be put by them displeases the Democracy, as well as Republicans who want to see Gov. Hughes of New York victorions in the fight which the machine Republicans are making against his favorite doctrine of direct nominations. On the other hand, the machine Republicans of Massachusetts may well promote the political disaster of one of the leaders of the Democracy. So it is a nasty fight, with a bearing npon the strength of the local Democracy. He has recently been far more promioent in politics than he was for years after his term as mayor. The dissension occupies much prominence jnst now when there is time to give to it, and it helps to keep open the divisions between Democratic fractions and leaders. Republicans are too shrewd to do their fighting in public

For average popular interest the coming war game will doubtless stand at the head of current events for the next week. But it will not be possible for the newspapers to give out all the information they would be glad to, for this is to be played as a war game as if actnal military conditions were present. Adjutant General Brigham has just told me that the department does not give out the locations of the regiments before the Sunday papers. The troops are nnder orders to march Saturday, the second regiment, which comes from Worcester county and Western Massachusetts among the others If the papers should publish the places where the regiments are to be stationed, he says, the commanding general of the enemy would know their whereabouts and thus play his game all the better. On the part of health authorities there has been apprehension lest there be pollution of water supplies by so many troops marching across farming conntry and watersheds of domestic water It was owing to this that there was consnltation hy the snrgeon general with the state board of health and snbsequently there was issned a military order for the observance of sanitary conditions which are designed to keep the water supplies pure from all sorts of camp pollution. It was put by the state board that the Middleboro ponds are sonrces of domestic water snpply for Brockton and if typhoid germs shonld get into the water and be distributed, it wonld be a serious matter. Still further, the sewage of Middleboro discharges into the Taunton river, and if the invading army, composed of New York, Pennsylvania and Washington troops, ignorant of local conditions, should drink from the river below the entrance of Middleboro sewage, them might stand a good chance of taking typhoid infection and then scattering it over the watersheds where they marched. So it is a risky situation unless great precautions are taken.

Gov. Draper has returned to his vacation at the Profile House, whence he was drawn to take part in the Gloucester pageant and celebration. For the time being Lieut. Gov. Frothingham is acting governor and he fills the position well. But the real governor will return in time to betake himself to the seat of war when the emergency arrives. It will be recollected he is, nnder the constitntion, although a civilian, the commander in chief of the military forces of the state. In that capacity he will be present on the field of maneuver and will nominally have the direction of the troops, if he exercises his constitntional authority. But it is hinted that he will be practically more of a spectator than a participant in the actual command.

Council meeting was held this forenoon, but there were no nominations ont of the routine of justices of the peace and notaries public. For the first time since the death of Judge Gaskell of Worcester, it is a fair guess that Gov. Draper, while having his eye, of course, out for the welfare of the state as a whole, is trying to see if that welfare is not consistent with the nomination of a Worcester county man for the vacancy. The fact that the only Worcester county representtive on the superior bench is now Jndge Pierce of Fitchbnrg, joined with the large size and smount of business of Worcester county, makes it desirable to appoint the new encumbent from the county, if possible. It is said that ex-Senator Charles F. Jenney of Hyde Park, who wonld have run for the presidency of the Senate against President Treadway if his own district would have given him a third term, has high testimonials for the judgeship, but still the governor wants presumahly to see if the best settlement will not be to take a Worcester county man. Other counties would immediately recognize the fitness of such an appointment, if the right man were found, and there is no donbt he can be.

In the midst of the hot weather, people must have some amnsement and the very few places which are open get patronage which would naturally go to other and higher priced theaters in other months Consequently it doubtless pays well for these few to keep open, thongh, if two or three more were to try to divide the income with them, all would be running at a loss. At one of the crowded places the other evening, when a musical medley was part of the stage performance of a big orchestra, there was a quick rondn of applause from the andience when the players struck up "Dixie," as if it were a southern gathering, or the sympathies of the North had turned toward the South. But when "The Red, White and Blne" followed, that had eqnal recognition, and at the end the entire audience rose to their feet, following the example of the orchestra, when they began "The Star Spangled Banner" Then they all broke ont in cheering. Thus is our patriotism stirred in public, but it is to be noticed that real patriotism, such as paying one's just share of taxes, is as unpopular and as lonesome as ever, while the detective and inquisitory department of the tax commissioner's office continues to report the discovery of hoards of millions concealed successfnlly for years by rich tax-dodgers.

It will be an interesting story this year, at the end of the assessing season and the comptation of returns. The new law for state supervisors of assessors is working just as it was designed to work. Uniform practices by assessors, coöperation by the cities and towns, watchfulness of records of probate offices, interchange of secret information obtained by detective methods, all open new fortunes to the entrance of the assessors and so the lists of taxabi property keep enlarging. But our Massachusetts patriots draw the line on paying taxes. They would much rather die chargiug the cannon's month or live to sing "America."

At the Republican state headquarters there will be held on Friday the regular committee meetings preliminary to the holding of the Republican state convention. The executive committee will sit at 11 o'clock, and the full committee will meet at 2. The talk ahout selecting Congressman Washburn of Worcester for chairman of the convention seems to have passed by. At the same time, it is a singular situation, because it is admitted cordially that he is an ideal person for the function. If the truth were known, doubtless it would be found that if the selection were put on the ground of taking members of Congress, some are of longer service than Washburn and they are hardly what the state committee, want to select. Therefore the only alternative to wounding the sensibilities of jealous men is to pass over Mr. Washburn nutil the situation is different and then recognize his merit when it will not force odious comparisons. It was doubtless out of this dilemma that the mention of District Attorney Arthur D. Hill arose, followed by his saying that he did not think it fitting that the incumhent of his office should be in politics to that extent.

On the Democratic side there remains nothing done beyond the little organizing work which Chsirman MacLeod and Secretary Loring can accomplish hetween them at headquarters. Renewed talk is heard of the re-entry of William A. Gaston as manager of the party, but the ordinary observer can see by this time that no conservative of the Gaston type will lead a united Democracy when the tendencies of politics and popular thought, even in the Republican party, are as radical as they are to-day. Vahey's friends expect that he will he nominated, and beaten as before. It is sad, but there is nothing better in sight. In the meantime the Republican managers are living on Easy street.

If Your House Needs Painting Use S. W. P.

If your house, or barn, or buildings of any sort, need painting, don't put it off. Now—this spring—is the time to paint. A building that is kept protected from the weather, damp, sun and so on, will outlast by years a building that is allowed to go unpainted or poorly painted. It is much better business to save the building you have than buy a new one. And besides this, well painted buildings are much pleasanter to live in, and bring a much higher price if you should want to sell, than dingy, unpainted buildings.

To arrive at the cost of painting, figure the number of square feet a gallon will cover, and how long it will last, not what the paint costs a gallon. Don't simply figure what it costs to paint your house or barn, but what it costs to keep it painted year in and year out. S. W. P. is honestly made of the best raw materials obtainable, and will prove more economical and satisfactory to the man who pays the bill than either hand mixed lead and oil or the so-called "cheap ready-mixed paint." We are agents for Sherwin-Williams Paint, Prepared (S.W.P.) Come in and we will be glad to discuss the paint and varnish question with you.

Better Trolley Service Needed.

The street car service on the Springfield and Eastern street railway from Palmer to Monson has been subject to much criticism during the past month. One of the chief complaints has been that the Springfield and Ware cars did not connect with the Monson cars and passengers coming from those two points were obliged to wait one hour at Palmer. If the Springfield car was late the Monson car generally went out on time and the same on the Ware end. The management have now put on half hour cars at 4.15, 5.15, 6 15 and 7.15, all arriving at Monson 45 minutes of the hour. This plan has reduced conditions one half from their former state; instead of waiting one hour if connections are missed, Monson people now wait 30 minutes. It is true the half hour cars are an improvement and are appreciated, but by holding the Monson car at Palmer oftentimes three or four minutes the 30 minute wait would also be avoided. The Monson end is a paying one and the patrons of the road feel that they deserve the large sized cars. At present a good big trolley express car is run down to Monson carrying a little freight and a little car is run carrying a crowd of passengers. The summer is a time of heavy traffic and some provision should be made to meet the increase.

Resignation of Night Policeman.

Death of Mrs. Fanny Pierce.

Mrs. Fanny Pierce, one of Monson's oldest residents, died at her home on Pearl street Monday night. She was of Indian descent and had lived in Monson for many years, being well known by three generations. Her exact age is unknown, but she was nearly 100 years old, a fact which she could prove by her reminiscences. Her husband and one son were veterans in the Civil War. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Edward Salisbury and one son, Loreuzo Pierce, both of Monson. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at 2.30, Rev. J. M. Gage officiating, and burial was in No. 1 cemetery.

Last year nineteen pupils were taken out of one school alone and a repetition is not desired.

The need of regulation of automobile speeding through the village streets is hecoming more noticeable. The ont-of-towu machines disregard utterly all traffic and run at a high rate of speed. Some definite speed limit should be set and enforced until a precedent has been estahlished that the antomobilists will respect and remember. It wonld be necessary to post signs stating the rate that motor vehicles would he allowed to rnn at the "turn-out," where there is a dangerons corner for antomobiles; signs were posted warning travelers against the danger, but the weather has so affected the signs that they are illegible and amount to nothing whatever. They should be repainted, for the situation is dangerous and if an accident happened the town might be liable to suffer the consequences in neglecting to warn antomobilists of the danger.

THUMPING HEADACHES.

Many Palmer Women Have Them, Bnt Few Know the Real Cause.

Dull, thumping headaches,
Sick, prostrating headaches,
Dizzy, whirling, blind headaches—
Point to disorders of the kidneys,
Tell of uric poisons in the blood.
Narcotics may ease the pain
Bnt won't cnre the cause.
Doan's Kidney Pills cure the kidneys,
Remove uric poisons, purify the blood,
Banish headache, backache, urinary ills.
Here's Palmer testimony to prove it.

Mrs. W. H. King, living on Main St., Palmer, Mass., says: "I suffered from kidney disease for years and was constantly growing worse. I was never free from a dull hearing-down pain in my back and the action of the kidney secretions was too frequent. My head aches and I was subject to dizzy spells. To-day the action of the kidney secretions is normal, the pains have lost their severeness and my back is much stronger. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Lynde and Gould's drug store, deserve the credit for bringing about this change in my condition and I am very grateful to this remedy for the great benefit I derived from its use and am pleased to recommend it to other kidney sufferers."

HER SECRET.

She Told It Frankly and Was Glad That She Did.

By BYRON H. KELLEY.

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Virginia sat down before the glass and took stock of herself in minute and critical fashion. When a woman has reached her twenty-eighth year she is either at her worst or her best, and Virginia was at her best. Her glass told her that and the faces of her friends of her own age who had faded about her until she was left like the one perfect flower in a cluster, conspicuous by her brightness.

Her little sister had just announced that Mr. Bridges had driven up in front of the house and was waiting to take her driving.

But Virginia sat still. She had just been making a resolution never to go driving with him again, and here he was. She clinched her hands tight.

"Just this once!" she pleaded to her conscience. Her eyes met the longing ones in the glass. "Just this once, and I'll tell him. I will be honest. His heart shan't break even if mine does."

She turned to her sister.

"Dorothy, dear, tell Mr. Bridges I'll be right down," she said gently. Then she rose and put on her hat.

It did seem so good to be sitting beside him again—if only it were not for that miserable thing which she had promised herself she would make known to him before the drive was ended. She looked at his face. It was such a strong, good face. Oh, it would be bitterly hard to tell him!

He seemed to have something on his mind, too, be was so grave and silent. And whenever he looked at her it was with quiet penetration.

Virginia leaned back against the thick cushion, trying to steady herself. She did not notice that Plume had stopped trotting and was walking slowly. But when a hand fell over hers she started and looked into the eyes of the man whose face had come suddenly near to hers.

"Virginia! Dear little girl!"

She knew what must come after those words, but she could not speak.

"Virginia"—his eyes held hers—"I love you!" Then he smiled his swift, gentle smile, as if her silence had reassured him.

That smile seemed to break the spell. Virginia remembered that she drew her hand from his and began to say something wildly, what she did not know until his changed, white face stopped her.

"Virginia, what are you saying? Promised—you? I will not believe it."

His stern voice braced her.

"Oh, but you must—you must!" she said.

"I will not believe it. I will not believe that you do not care for me—that you have led me on just for pastime. It isn't true, is it, dear?" His voice had softened again. He put his arm about her and drew her against him until her cheek touched his.

"Tell me all about it," he urged. "I must know it all. There is some mistake somewhere, I am sure. Tell me, Virginia."

He released her gently and waited. Virginia gathered herself together desperately.

"I'll tell you everything, Arthur," she said. "I promised myself that I would before this drive was ended. I should have told you before only I could not somehow. I shall begin at the beginning and tell it all, and then you may think what you please of me."

"It happened ten years ago, when I was about eighteen and Andrew two years older. We had known each other always. He lived in that little gray house next to ours until his father got into some financial difficulty and lost what property he had. Mr. Hall never could get along somehow. I always liked Andrew better than any other boy; he was so good hearted and gentle. One night when we were walking home from church he asked me to marry him." Virginia hurried a little. "It was June, and there was beautiful moonlight. I had never dreamed of marrying him or anybody then, but he looked so handsome and he seemed so much in earnest that I promised before I thought. Then I was frightened, because I knew my people would never consent to it. My mother always said she was afraid Andrew would be just like his father and never amount to anything. So we decided to keep our engagement a secret.

"Just after that Mr. Hall was taken with a great desire to go west. He knew he could do something out there. I think he had an idea that gold nuggets could be picked up like acorns. Anyway he was perfectly crazy to go, and he went and took Andrew with him. We wrote back and forth pretty steadily for awhile. Andrew didn't like the west very well, and his father was disappointed, but they would have to stay there until they had earned money enough to get back home with. Well, I don't know—I was in school, and there were so many things to take my time that I guess I grew careless about writing, and Andrew seemed to grow just as careless himself. Besides, he and his father were constantly on the move. I think they must have traveled the west over pretty thoroughly. The last time I heard from Andrew was three years ago. He said he was still trying to get rich and talked of going to the Klondike. I answered the letter, but perhaps he never got it.

"You are the first person I ever told this to," she said, looking earnestly at Arthur.

"I see," he said quietly. He thought he could understand what manner of man it was that would keep a girl to a foolish promise in this way for eleven years.

"You really think, Virginia, that Andrew will come back?" he asked.

"Yes; I really think so."

"And you will marry him if he does?"

Virginia turned very pale.

"You see, Virginia," Bridges went on gently, "I have some old fashioned notions about these things. Unless you love him you have no business to marry him, were you twenty times promised to him. It would not be fair to him, and it would be most unjust to yourself."

Virginia never had thought of that.

"Now, I'll tell you what I shall do, for I think I have something to say in this matter. I will wait just one more year for Andrew to put in his appearance—just one year, not a day more or less—and if he doesn't come then I shall take you for myself. Do you understand me, Virginia?"

She looked at him with a brightening face. But the brightness quickly faded like the light from a sunset cloud.

"And if he does come"— she gasped.

"Why, then, that's a matter for your own deciding. If you love him enough to marry him, marry him. But if you don't," he smiled, "you'd better marry some one you do."

During the rest of the drive Virginia sat trying to realize things. She could not be thankful enough that she had told him and he did not despise her.

It was 6 by the clock when Plume trotted down the long street and left Virginia at her own door. She ran into the house, unpinning her hat as she ran. Her mother came in from the dining room with a dish in her hand.

"Virginia, guess who has come while you've been gone," she said.

"I don't know," she faltered.

"Andrew Hall! Would you believe it? I thought I knew him when I saw him go by in the bus. Afterward Mrs. Ward came in and told me. He wasn't dressed any better than he was when he went away. I guess he hasn't brought much back with him except his wife. He's married."

"Married!"

Virginia sank trembling into a chair

"So Mrs. Ward says. She's been over to the hotel to see them."

Dorothy danced in from the kitchen.

"Mamma," she bawled, "the tea is boiling over!"

Mrs. Swift hurried out, and Virginia her hands pressed to her throbbing heart, understood the situation.

A few minutes later Arthur Bridges drove up to the house. He entered the library, where Virginia sat weeping softly from joy.

"My own sweetheart!" he exclaimed as he took her in his arms. "There is no one between us now. Andrew Hall has just come back with his wife."

"I know. Mamma just told me, and—and I am so glad, Arthur!"

Said at Last.

On one occasion a highland minister called upon Dr. Alexander Whyte of Edinburgh for some financial assistance for the work in the north. Dr. Whyte regretted that he could not afford to assist the highlander, but advised him to visit a wealthy layman in the city.

Going to the house of the wealthy layman, the highlander found him disinclined to give and ungracious in manner. Nettled at his reception, the highlander answered brusquely. Resenting the tone, the rich man asked, "And whom do you take me for?"

"A fire deserving sinner, like myself," came the quick retort.

Returning to Dr. Whyte, he explained the circumstances.

"You did not say that?" eagerly asked the doctor.

"Aye, I did," replied the other.

"Well, well! I've been wanting to say that to him for the last fifteen years! Here's a five pound note for your fund."—Dundee Advertiser.

Fashion, Not Health.

In nine cases out of ten, says the Iowa Health Bulletin, if a physician tells a woman that in order to improve her health she must wear her clothes in a certain way she will follow the advice of her dressmaker instead.

After the races—The curfew tolls the knell of parting day; the grouchy herd winds slowly o'er the lea. They failed to guess, as sporting people say, which was the shell that hid the little pea.—Washington Herald.

"Yeh," said the first gallery god, describing the melodrama, "de hero done de villian up all right, all right, but de villian wouldn't admit it." "G'on!" exclaimed the other. "No," the first continued, "de last woids he sez wuz: 'I am undone.'"—Philadelphia Press.

Baseball.

PALMER TOWN LEAGUE.

Bondsville 13, Palmer 8.

The hit column indicates a different result from last Satnrday's game, hnt the error column shows where the trouble was. It was abont as poor an exhibition of at tempted ball playing as was ever seen on the local grounds, with apparently no excuse for it. "Phil" Connor is not as good a pitcher as "Dick" and he might not have been able to win the game, hnt his support couldn't have been worse at times. The team seemed to lack management and forceful direction at critical times and wasted good chances foolishly.

Baseball Briefs.

Lamery of the Indians landed a safe one Satnrday, the first in five games.

The Metropolitans went back to their old form last Satnrday with 15 errors.

The Indians continne to draw the crowds, bnt crowds don't always win games.

The Ponies have played two 10-inning games this season, evidently trying for a record.

"Pat" Keyes was too sure of a fly ball and let in a rnn in the sixth by letting the sphere drop.

The Metropolitans have succeeded in reaching last place; not by wanting to—it's a case of "have to."

Snow showed his gameness with the "Tri Streamers" Satnrday by returning to the game after seeing a doctor.

Connor, who pitched for the Metropolitans Satnrday, was not "Dick," although he pitched hall good enough to win.

"Dick" Donovan seems to be the pinch runner for the Ponies, being called npon four timee to rnn for his team mates.

"Tom" Clifford got his from the Metropolitans Satnrday, having to be content with holding the boys down to 11 hite.

Bondsville certainly did turn loose its artillery in the 9th and 10th innings last Satnrday, when it batted ont an even nine runs from Palmer.

Mayforth of the Indians, who stole seven bases in one game with the Ponies five weeks ago, has not stolen one since Sullivan's arm was responsible for the seven.

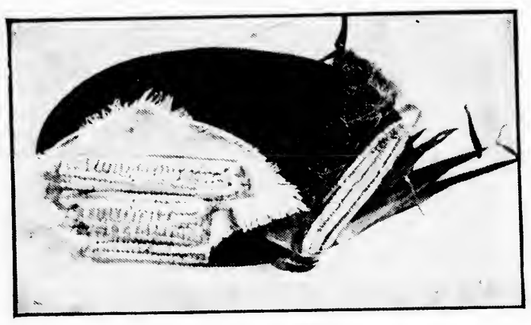
The Indians were given expenses to see the Detroit-Boston game on Thnrsday of last week by the association. If they got any pointers they didn't show it in the game with Three Rivers.

"Snip" Shearer had a hard time trying to land first base in the sixth, but did it after fouling four times and running the distance ont; then he stole second with the hall in "Tom" Clifford's hands.

Wells, the slab artist for the Indians, who pitched a no-hit-no-rnn game against West Warren, got his at Thorndike, Three Rivers getting at him for eight hits in a little over one inning, when he was replaced by Furkey.

"Dick" Connor, who pitches for the Metropolitans, did the slab work for the All-Holyokes at Keene, N. H., Saturday, losing his game 1 to 0 hy a pass in the ninth, bnt "Dick" will he with the Metropolitans to-morrow.

Palmer plays Bondsville at Bondsville to-morrow afternoon at 3 30, and a close game is looked for. Bondsville is on edge for the fray as it means much to that team in the race for the pennant. Every Bondsvillite will turn ont and root for the home team.



The Town League games this week will be Palmer at Bondsville and Thorndike at Three Rivers. The batteries will be: Rogers and Snow for Three Rivers and Clark and Mayforth for Thorndike, while Clifford and Clifford will do the work for Bondsville and "Dick" Connor will do the slab work for Palmer, the catcher will be announced later.

Household Hints.

GREEN CORN.

Green corn must be fresh and kernels filled out fairly well, else it is an extravagance to buy it and an invitation to digestive troubles to eat it. Never buy it when it lies wilting in a window, or in an uncovered box in a huckster's wagon. The best corn, like other vegetables, is that which goes quickly from the garden to the dinner pot, and it is only in this way that the best flavor and tenderness are gained.

To prepare corn for cooking take off the outer green husks and bend back the white inner husk. Pick off all the silk, then fold back the thin white husk and drop into boiling water. Corn should be cooked just long enough to set the juice, or milk, so that it will not flow when a kernel is pressed or cut. All time after that makes it tough and indigestible, in fact it might be boiled for hours and never be as tender as in from five to fifteen minutes' cooking. Cooks who think, or notice much about their work, know that salt hardens water and that for some vegetables it is the best way to add the salt for seasoning to the water and take advantage of its hardening power to keep the vegetable tissue from breaking up. But in some cases this is not desirable; salt should never be added to water in which corn is boiled. Serve the corn in the husk or remove it and lay on a fringed doiley. Serve with butter.

"There's a royal satisfaction
When the butter's on the ear,
In the chewing of the kernels,
Being sure there's no one near."

A VERY SIMPLE DETECTIVE CASE.

By BERTHA DALSOP.

[Copyright, 1900, by American Press Association.]

"Walter, call a cab."

So spoke Walter De Forest while sitting in the cafe of his club. In a few minutes the waiter announced that the cab was at the door. De Forest went out, gave a street and number to the cabman and got into the cab. There, before him on the seat, lay a package.

"Ah," exclaimed De Forest, "some one has lost something."

Taking up the package, he opened it and saw on the top a bank bill for $1,000. He opened his eyes very wide. Lifting the bill, he came upon another for the same amount. He opened his eyes wider. Fifty bills, each for $1,000, were in the parcel.

He looked at the wrapper. There was neither name nor mark on it to give the slightest clew to its ownership. He tied up the package and put it in his pocket. On reaching his destination he said to the driver:

"Who was the last person in this cab before me?"

"A young lady, sir."

"What name?"

"I don't know, sir."

"Where did she engage you?"

"She called me from the sidewalk."

"Where did she tell you to drive?"

"To 81 Union street."

Mr. De Forest started. "Did you take her there?"

"No, sir. A pair of horses were plunging in the crowd of vehicles beside us. I drove on, but when I got down to open the door there was no one inside. I think the lady got scared and slipped out."

"Did you go to the location she gave you to collect your fare?"

"Not yet, sir."

"How much does she owe you?"

"A dollar."

"Here it is. I know the lady. I'll tell her."

"Thank you, sir."

The coincidence was a strange one. Julia Drayton, aged twenty-one, that day had been paid in bills a legacy of $50,000. She had stepped from a bank to the sidewalk, got into a cab, suffered from a fright, jumped out and left her fortune inside. Walter De Forest was an admirer of hers and had at the time made up his mind that he would marry her if he could. Money was no special object to him.

The next morning he saw an advertisement in the papers of a large reward for the lost money. In the evening he called on Miss Drayton. The servant who received him said that her mistress was indisposed.

"Tell her that I have called to speak to her about her loss," said De Forest, and in a few moments Miss Drayton came down. She was much agitated.

"I saw an advertisement this morning," he said, "which from its reading I think must be yours."

"I have lost my inheritance."

De Forest asked her to tell him the story, which she did.

"I am very sorry for you," he said when she had finished, "indeed so sorry that I am going to exercise my ingenuity to find who has the bills. I have a plan that I will put into operation, and if it succeeds I shall recover your fortune."

"All of it?" she gasped.

"All or none."

"But there is the reward."

"That we may talk of after getting the bills."

Mr. De Forest called often to report progress. Miss Drayton begged him to tell her of his methods, but he assured her it was not best. Though at times he spoke encouragingly and at times the reverse, he continually kept her up by a steadfast hope.

One evening De Forest left the young lady conscious of the fact that he might as well bring his detective investigations to a close. A few days later he showed Miss Drayton a piece of paper on which was scrawled by some illiterate person an agreement to return fifty $1,000 bank bills provided that immunity were guaranteed. Miss Drayton caught her breath. But De Forest reminded her of the many frauds in such matters and warned her not to feel too sure. Nevertheless she wrung his hand.

A week passed, during which Miss Drayton suffered alternate chills and fever—chills of despondency and fever of hope. And all the while she was thinking of that good, kind man who was devoting his time, his energies, his genius, for investigation to the return of her lost fortune.

One day she received a note from De Forest notifying her that if her doorbell rang between 7 and 8 that evening she would do well to answer it herself. At a quarter to 8 the bell rang. Miss Drayton opened the door A man in working clothes handed her a package and without a word hurried away. Turning to the light, she opened the package and saw her lost bills. Counting them, she found all she had lost.

She was still in a delirium of joy when the bell rang again. She flew to the door and admitted Mr. De Forest. She could not control herself. Throwing her arms around his neck, she wept for joy.

There was one and only one matter to be settled between them. That was Mr. De Forest's reward for his patient labors. Miss Drayton asked him to name it and it should be his.

Then he told her that the reward he had been working for was herself. She kept her word.

Avoided the Conventional.

"It is a wonderful story," says the publisher to the new author, whose manuscript has just been accepted "but you have failed in one important feature. You do not describe the way the heroine was dressed when the hero first met her. You'd better write in a paragraph about her clothes, but try to avoid the conventional."

The ingenious author, knowing the sameness of costume descriptions in the best sellers and also knowing how to make an appeal to the feminine heart, wrote:

"Heloise floated toward him garbed in a $900 dress, a $250 hat, with a $98.75 mantilla over a $375 lace coat."—Chicago Post.

Sorry He Spoke.

He was very deferential, but he was a deacon in the church, and he felt that he had a right to criticise. "I hope you'll pardon me," he said, "if I suggest that your sermons are—ah"—

"Too prosy, I suppose?" suggested the minister.

"Oh, no, not that, but too long."

"But you mustn't blame me for that," returned the minister pleasantly. "If you knew a little more I wouldn't have to tell you so much."

UNIMPRESSIONABLE BARRINGTON.

A Scheme That Did Not Turn Out as Was Planned.

By RICHARD BARKER SHELTON.

[Copyright, 1900, by Associated Literary Press.]

"You must be very nice to her, Ted," said Mrs. Wainwright thoughtfully. "Indeed, you must monopolize her while she's here."

Ted Barrington blew out a cloud of smoke and smiled lazily.

"Must I, now, Annette?" he said. "Why fore and wherefore?"

"She's dangerous," said Mrs. Wainwright, with the air of one imparting select and exclusive confidences. "She's a disturbing element. I rely on you to keep the peace of the house while she's here. Fact is, Teddy, dear, she's a most incorrigible and heartless flirt. The last time she was here she left in her train a cohort of heartsick swains that was positively appalling It's perfectly dreadful to have a jolly little house party disrupted as that one was."

Barrington squinted his eye thoughtfully as he looked away to the great blue bulk of the hills rising in the distance against a perfect sky.

"And so, Annette, I am to be the sacrifice, as it were, am I?" he chuckled good naturedly. "Won't somebody else do? I'm lazy. I'm having the time of my life here just being lazy."

"I have come to you," said she with deep conviction, "because you are one of the few men I know whom I believe can remain heart whole under all circumstances. Oh, don't look so conceited about it. The ghastly truth of the matter is that you are much too indolent and self satisfied to fall in love. Therefore I make this appeal."

"Oh, if you put it that way now," said he in mock protest.

"I do," said she. "You must, as I say, monopolize her while she's here. Make her think she has made a conquest. Take her sailing and motoring and riding, understand? Make her think your case is very, very desperate."

"Oh, you women—you scheming, farsighted women!" he complained. "Set your fluttering heart at rest, Annette. For old sake's sake I'll do my best. When is she coming?"

"This afternoon. Hubbard has gone down in the trap to meet her."

A rumble of wheels sounded in the roadway. A trap drawn by a smart colt turned into the drive. Mrs. Wainwright nodded meaningly toward it and withdrew, and Barrington, turning his lazy eyes toward the drive, saw in the approaching trap a vision of wavy hair and pink cheeks and flowing veil that was not at all unattractive.

"Well, well," said the unimpressionable Barrington, "it's not such an awful thing to be the appointed sacrifice, after all."

An hour later Mrs. Wainwright was presenting him to the girl, and something in the older woman's eyes warned Barrington that his duties were to begin at once. Therefore he stepped nobly into the breach.

"Oh, I say, Miss Gray," said he, "are you fond of motoring? You are? Good! Wainwright has a little peach of a car in the garage. Suppose I get it out and show you how it can take the hills round here."

"Oh, jolly!" she declared.

They motored until dinner time, and at the after dinner bridge Miss Gray was Barrington's partner. And the following days he followed out Mrs. Wainwright's injunctions to the letter.

"Ted, you are perfectly splendid," she declared one evening as he sat smoking on the veranda.

"Always glad to oblige, Annette," he drawled.

"You do it so well I almost think sometimes you're not at all averse to the role I've assigned you," she said musingly.

"I'm much too indolent to fall in love. I'm safe," he said in the same queer voice.

Mrs. Wainwright leaned anxiously toward him. "Ted, do be careful," she warned him. "I didn't think for a minute"—

"You are quite on the wrong tack, Annette," he said composedly. "Your suspicions are utterly without foundation. Where on earth did you ever get such childish ideas?"

Yet Mrs. Wainwright, once in her own room, sat looking out thoughtfully. And at last, more perturbed than she cared to admit, she tapped on her husband's door.

"Tom," she confessed uneasily as her big husband, swathed in a gorgeous bath wrap, opened the door, "I believe I've made a mess of things."

"Well," he said cheerfully, "you're not without precedent in the matter, Annette. How have you done it? Unburden yourself."

"It's Ted and Francesca Gray. I—I"—

"You mean you're afraid he's lost his head?" Tom Wainwright asked. "Nonsense—nothing of the kind; not a symptom of it. Go to sleep, Annette. He'll take care of himself."

Mrs. Wainwright felt decidedly heartened, but when, two days later, she found Ted Barrington all alone by the old sundial in the gardens behind the house, his hands clinched and his face hard, a quick fear and an equally swift contrition gripped her heart.

He had not heard her noiseless approach. She hurried to his side. At the sound of her steps he looked up and grinned rather sheepishly.

"Ted," she cried, "I know it now. There is no use denying it."

"Why this commiseration spilled for unworthy me?" he said, with an attempt at nonchalance.

"I saw your face just now."

"Oh, did you?"

"You'd better confess," said she. "It's my fault, anyway. Maybe I can help you."

"You're quite right, Annette," he said quietly—so quietly that it cut her to the quick. "The impossible has come to pass. My case is desperate."

"Has she refused, then, and laughed at you?" she asked anxiously.

"She has not," said he, "and please heaven she'll never get the chance. I think I know how to make a graceful exit from a mighty trying situation. I've said no word of it to her, nor shall I. I couldn't quite stand having her refuse me. I really couldn't, Annette. She's going away this afternoon. I think I can hold my tongue in leash."

Mrs. Wainwright arose without a word and left him. Ten minutes later she was back again. He was still sitting there by the sundial.

"You're a brute," she announced flatly and uncompromisingly.

Barrington stared at her.

"Haven't you any eyes in your head?" she demanded almost angrily.

Barrington frowned. "My dear Annette," said he, very much puzzled, "this is not at all like you."

Long and searchingly and also disapprovingly Mrs. Wainwright looked at him.

"Well," she said at last, "I have just seen Francesca, and if you are worth the tears she's wasting on you I'm very much mistaken. She may have been heartless before, but if you had any eyes, as I said before"—

"Hush!" Barrington interrupted her. "Say, where is she—where is she, Annette? Down by the river, you say?"

A brown streak that might have been Ted Barrington went tearing across the lawn in the direction of the river. Mrs. Wainwright sat watching him with shining eyes.

He Knew What They Would Do.

Sir Charles Locock, who was the physician attending Queen Victoria at a certain period of her reign, was once commanded by her majesty to proceed to Berlin and report on the condition of her daughter, the crown princess. On the return trip, stopping at Dover for a hasty luncheon, he was enabled to snatch a glass of poor sherry and a piece of questionable pork pie.

After the train had pulled out and Sir Charles had been locked in his compartment he began to feel drowsy and to fear that faintness was overtaking him. Immediately he thought to himself:

"They will find me in a faint on the floor and bleed me for a fit, and I need all my blood to digest this pork pie."

Thereupon he hurriedly drew out his pencil, wrote on a piece of paper and stuck it in the band of his hat. Then he resigned himself

The Antalgica

Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Coughs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do you good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle by The Quimby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

BARN AND STOCK BURNED.

Bad Fire at Wright Wire Mill Saturday Morning.

THREE FINE HORSES ARE CREMATED.

And a Fourth Had to Be Killed. Origin Of Fire Unknown, But Probably Incendiary.

A fire which was discovered soon after 2 o'clock last Saturday morning burned a large barn belonging to the Wright Wire Company at their plant west of the village, killing three horses and injuring another so badly that it had to be killed, besides destroying hay, grain, vehicles, etc. The loss is easily $6000 or $7000; insured.

The three horses which were burned were particularly valuable; they were purchased by the Wright Company within a few years, were large heavy animals, had become perfectly acclimated and hardened to the work of hauling heavy loads of wire, materially enhancing their value. They were used as a three-horse-hitch, and attracted much attention and were greatly admired by all who saw them. They cannot be duplicated for less than $1200 or $1300. The other horse was owned by D. E. Marcy, owner of a livery stable in this village, but was used by one of the mill overseers and was kept in the Wright Co's. barn. In the barn was also about 15 tons of hay, a large truck loaded with flour, a light buggy and several harness, 100 bushels of grain and a quantity of coils of wire; all were destroyed; the truck alone was valued at $1800.

The fire was discovered soon after 2 o'clock by Michael Laford, who lives in the house next the barn and had charge of the stable and team. At that time the flames were bursting through the roof and the barn was all afire both upstairs and down, and there was no possibility of saving the horses. The horse owned by Mr. Marcy had broken loose by the time the first comers reached the barn and was taken out by Walter Worth, one of the wire mill employes, after the door had been broken; it returned to the barn however, and before it could be removed again was horribly burned. It was thought at first that it might recover, but it was too badly injured and was killed Saturday afternoon. Box 39 of the fire alarm was pulled at 2.15 and the wire mill fire department had a stream on the blaze in a few moments, and a second one a little later. The firemen from the village arrived in due time and Chief Summers assumed charge. There was little that could be done however except to deaden the flames, there being nothing left to save.

The cause of the fire is a mystery, and it is hard to account for it except on the ground of incendiarism. The barn was closed and locked about 9 o'clock, and there was nothing connected with the establishment from which a fire could start. Whether it started down stairs or in the loft cannot be determined, as the flames had progressed too far when discovered. So thoroughly destroyed was everything about the place that there is nothing on which to work in looking for the origin. It is not known that the Wright Company has any enemies who would set such a fire for real or fancied wrongs; in fact, the employes are to a man extremely loyal to the company as a whole, Mr. Wright and Manager Oakes individually.

The loss of the three fine horses is particularly regretted by the employes of the works, many of whom had made pets of the animals, while all of them admired the hitch and were particularly proud of their fine appearance. There is no lack of indignation among the men, and should the fire prove to have been set and the incendiary be caught, it would no doubt go hard with him if he fell into the clutches of wire mill employes.

Earl M. Scott, clerk of the church, made the presentation speech; Mr. Scott also presented him with a Bible. Mr. Deming expressed his gratitude for the gifts in a few well chosen words. He has moved his family to East Douglas this week.

NEW LIST OF JURORS.

Palmer Men Liable For Duty During the Coming Year.

The list of jurors as prepared by the selectmen under the new law of last year has been posted, and is to be found below. The law provides that not less than one name for every 100 inhabitants of the town shall be selected, and not more than one for every 60. No name is to be placed on the list without careful investigation as to the owner's character and fitness for service. A possible fine of $500 or one year in the house of correction is provided where names are placed on the list for any other reason than fitness for duty, and similar penalties are possible where persons ask to have their or any other name put on the list. After the list is prepared no names may be added or taken off.

NO PAVING THIS YEAR.

Non-arrival of Street Railway Rails the Cause.

MUST ENDURE MUD FOR WHILE YET.

Question Whether Wise to Proceed This Fall If Possible. Work Will Be Done by Town.

Many queries are heard as to the time of beginning the work of paving Main street, for which the sum of $10,000 was appropriated at the annual town meeting. The

WILBRAHAM.

The Congregational Sunday school will hold its annual picnic next Tuesday at the home of Ethelbert Bliss. Carriages will be at the church at 9 30 for those who wish to ride.

EAST BRIMFIELD.

Mrs. F. N. Alberty of Worcester has been a recent visitor here.

Duke Harris of Woodstock, Ct., is visiting at the home of W. O Smith.

Thomas Patterson of Springfield and Frank Bagley of White River Junction, Vt., were visitors here Sunday.

Two scrub nines played a nnique game of baseball here Saturday. The game lasted three and one-half hours. They played about 20 innings and the score was 39-40 in favor of the H. G. N. team.

John Hopkins is seriously ill at his home on Maple street.

rain of the first of the week left Main street in a state of muddy nastiness which was disagreeable to pedestrians, and the questions as to the time of paving were asked anew.

From present indications it seems unlikely that the work can be done before next year. The preparations for the work have been numerous and unavoidable delays have cropped out now and then. The Palmer Water Company wisely decided that it preferred to lay a new iron main through Main street before the paving was put in rather than run the risk of having to take up and replace the brick a few times; their work was completed some time ago. Then the telephone company desired to lay a conduit for its wires rather than take up the paving for the purpose. The company was under agreement to bury its wires any time after next fall at the order of the town, and preferred not to wait for the paving.

My Little Daughter's Shoes.

Two little rough, worn, stubbed shoes,
A plump, well-trodden pair,
With striped stocking thrust within,
Lie just beside my chair.

Of very homely fabric they,
A hole is in each toe;
They might have cost, when they were new,
Some lifty cents or so.

And yet, this little, worn-out pair
Is richer far to me,
Than all the jewelled sandals are
Of eastern luxury.

This mottled leather, cracked with use,
Is satin in my sight,
These little tarnished buttons shine
With all a diamond's light.

Search through the wardrobe of the world,
You shall not find me there
So rarely made, so richly wrought,
So glorious a pair.

And why? Because they tell of her,
Now sound asleep above,
Whose form is moving beauty, and
Whose heart is beating love.

They tell me of her merry laugh,
Her rich, whole-hearted glee;
Her gentleness, her innocence,
And infant purity.

They tell me that her wavering steps
Will long demand my aid;
For the old road of human life
Is very roughly laid.

High hills and swift descents abound,
And, on so rude a way,
Feet that can wear these coverings
Would surely go astray.

Sweet little girl! be mine the task
Thy feeble steps to tend!
To be thy guide, thy counsellor,
Thy playmate, and thy friend!

And when my steps shall faltering grow,
And thine be firm and strong,
Thy strength shall lead my tottering age
In cheerful peace along!

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Aug. 18, 1909.

Perhaps people at a distance from The Hub suppose that we are deeply engrossed in the war game which is being played on our southern frontier and which, according to the morning's news from the field seems to be coming nearer home. But the truth is that there is no sign of exceptional interest on the part of the average citizen, as far as I can judge from having an eye and ear out for evidence upon that particular point. To be sure, the daily papers are full of it. Dispatches from each of the hostile camps are printed at much length, far exceeding what any correspondent would be permitted to send if it were the real thing. According to the space given in the columns of the papers, this should be the great overshadowing fact of life here this week, and we should all be in the kindergarten kept by the god Mars, learning tactics, studying evolutions and getting stirred up generally. But the truth is that as long as people must have some understanding of what they read in order to be interested and as long as only a minute fraction of the public knows or cares anything about war tactics, so long will this vast over-proportion of war news be read only by a few people. Very little comment is heard,—nothing practically about the strategy and the respective merits of the opposing armies. Genuine sympathy is felt for the soldiers in the rain, save that some people say, in so many words, that they have no sympathy for them at all, that they need not have gone, that they have brought it all on themselves and that if they get pneumonia it is their own look-out. Hence this war promises to arouse as much grumbling at the enormous expense it will put upon the taxpayers as it does admiration for a military life. Adjutant Brigham put the figure at $165,000, and of course there will be a lot of extras and damages which may run the total to $200,000 or near it. It is likely, from what I hear, to figure in politics. But it will have two sides.

On the other hand, compare this war business with the errand upon which some of our Boston citizens have gone abroad and which they will undertake this month,—from August 29 to September 5,—at the Universal Peace Congress at Stockholm, Sweden. Edwin D. Mead and Mrs. Mead, Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood, secretary of the American Peace Society, Miss Anna B. Eckstein, who secured 2,000,000 signers to a petition to the second Peace Conference at The Hague in 1907 and is trying for 3,000,000 for the next one in 1915, and about 20 in all from this country, will have part in the first great public delegate gathering in the history of mankind to discuss the practical proposition of the political organization of all the world into one body. Here is an occasion beside which the game between the Reds and the Blues is totally unworthy of mention, yet the Stockholm Congress will be fortunate if it gets one-hundredth part as much space as our local play war. But this great canae of the political organization of the world with legislature, courts and executive, is growing much faster than people realize who are not watching it. Already, even during this century, much has been done, and while the Reds and the Blues are trying to educate the people for war, the world organizers are trying to substitute true world courts for war, and the prospect of success within a reasonable time is very bright. This is the most important and the best news which can be sent out from Boston, even though the Reds last night slept nine miles nearer us than they did the night before, and as Boston has been at the front in this movement, it is natural that the story should be told from here and not from Stockholm. That city will have its own tale when the Congress is ended. In the meantime, let the most emphatic assurance be given to the public that this subject is the most important possible matter of the news of the day to which they can pay attention and that every man should be well informed.

It looks as if the New York Central were trying to make good its promises of improved management and as if it were also trying to prepare for a great future of business. Some months ago tables of estimates were published of the many thousands of dollars' worth of improvements which it was to make at different points on the line of the Boston and Albany for the sake of handling its expected larger traffic. The passer-by at Allston, where the repair shops have long been located, will notice that great enlargement of terminal facilities is in progress. Just east of the highway which crosses the road on the way to Central Square in Cambridge, the road has taken a large property. The old house and outbuildings have been destroyed, the hill is being carted away. An immense coal depot has been cut in two and half of it raised, and through the vista left where it stood one can look away off across the old ground of Beacon Park and see a great area of tracks, thus increasing freight accommodations here immensely. On that old park Buffalo Bill gave his entertainments, many horse races were run, and the place has its sporting history as truly as the late and lamented Boston Museum had its theatrical traditions. Each place, with its memory of famous names, has been turned over to the most urgent prosaic uses and horses and actors equally are fading into the mists of oblivion. The management of the Central has improved vastly over the wretched condition two years ago and the trains are almost invariably right on the dot.

The decision of the Republican state committee to select ex-Mayor Edwin U. Curtis for chairman of the Republican state convention may have a bearing on his candidacy for the mayoralty of Boston, which is the biggest political prize of the year aside from the Republican state ticket. Before the meeting, a leading member of the committee assured me that the possibility that he might be a candidate was a reason why the committee expected to choose him. After the meeting, an official of the committee assured me that the two facts had not the slightest connection and that Curtis was taken on his merits without the remotest idea of his being candidate for mayor. Two good men differed in their point of view, that was all. Mayor Hibbard may be a candidate; he is expected to run for a renomination. But the Republican city is hostile to an intense degree. How, then, can he get the nomination, or if nominated, be elected in a Democratic city. A leading member of the committee tells me that if Hibbard is a candidate and Curtis runs also, Hibbard will not carry a single precinct in the entire city. Both parties are much split up in to colliding factions and any candidate would presumably be badly knifed in his own party. The important issue between Plan No. 1 and Plan No. 2, which must be decided at the state election, will probably be the leading political feature of the year, surpassing the state

WAS FORMER RESIDENT.

Sudden Death in Leominster Sunday of Dudley C. Perkins.

Dudley C. Perkins, aged 54 years and 7 months, died suddeuly Sunday evening at Leominster, where he had lived since April, when he went there to take the position of warden of the town farm. He was sitting in his chair and Mrs. Perkins was reading to him when he suddeuly fell forward. A physician was summoned at once but Mr. Perkins died just after his arrival; fatty degeueration of the heart was the canse.

Mr. Perkins came to Palmer in April, 1903, as warden of the town farm, remaining four years, after which he bought the Palmer Bakery, conducting this until his removal to Leomiuster last spring. He was a native of Barnard, Vt., a member of Meridan Sun lodge of Masons of North Brookfield, a Past Master of the North Brookfield and Palmer Granges, a member of Pilgrim commandery Knights of Malta and of Revere chapter, Order of the Eastern Star of Pamer. He leaves a widow and one sou, Harry C. The funeral was heid at North Brookfield Wednesday afternoon, delegations from the Knights of Malta, Eastern Star and the veteran firemen's association of Palmer attending.

CHURCH REPAIRS.

Alterations and improvements to be Made in St. Paul's House of Worship.

Workmen will begin next week on extensive repairs to be made on St. Paul's Universalist church. The edifice has been in use about 30 years, and time and custom reqnire repairs and improvements in nnmerous ways. The slate roof, with its metal angles and cornices, is thoroughly overhauled and put in the best of condition. Inside, the audience room will undergo numerous alterations. The plastering has cracked and loosened in places, and this will be removed and replaced wherever necessary, after which the walls will be freshly painted and decorated. The lighting system will be entirely changed, the center cinster of lights in the ceiling being done away with and the lights ciustered so as to spread the light more and still give more of it. New paint will also be applied to the woodwork. The interior of the parlors and vestry will also he repainted and decorated.

Test for Fire Steamer.

When the fire steamer was coupled on the location assigned it at the Wright Wire Co's. fire Saturday morning it could get no water from the main. The hydrant is located on the large pipe running from the company's fire plant to the river, and through it the water for pumps is drawn. As the pumps furnish six large fire streams it was thonght they might take the water away from the steamer, so it was taken out again Tuesday for a test. With the company's fire pumps at rest the steamer had no trouble in drawing all the water it could use, but when the fire pnmps were put on full head the steamer got nothing, the heavy draft of the pumps taking the water all away. Should there be occasion to use the steamer in that locality again at the same time the mill pumps are running, it will be located on the bank of the reservoir recently constructed for fire purposes, where it will have plenty of water with nothing to interfere.

Morse Family Reunion.

The 29th annual reunion of the descendants of Samuel Morse was held yesterday at Forest Lake, Palmer, the attendance being about 45 A short business meeting was held after a basket lunch was enjoyed at noon and the following officers were elected; Honorary president, Jesse Buffington of Ware; president, Alvertus J. Morse of Northampton: vice president, Charles M. Smith of Boston; second vice president, Alonzo M. Beebe of Monson; secretary, H. A. Buffington of Monson; treasurer, Mrs. F. A. Towne of Lndiow; entertainment committee, H. A Buffington, Miss Alice Parent of Bondsville, Charles Morse of Belchertown. The next meeting will be held the 3d Wednesday in August of next year.

Next Week's Lake Show.

The theatre at Forest Lake will have a vaudeville program next week which is claimed by the management to be the best of the season, well balanced and of pleasing variety. The Bicknells, whirlwind dancers who "gyrate in all sorts of terpsicorean mazes;" C. W. Littiefield, in impersonations; Hammond and Forester in a droll comedy act, introducing a new song, "Bandy Legs;" the Piquays in gymnastics and contortion; and Lorette and Latina in pantomine, juggling and comedy. There will be the usual band concert Snnday.

Congregational Church Corner Stone.

The ceremony of laying the corner stone of the new Congregational church will be heid on Saturday of next week at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. A new corner stone has been contributed, and this with the old one will be laid with appropriate exercises. Rev. George S. Rollins, D D, of Hope church, Springfield, will make the address A large lot of heavy timber for the new strncture arrived this morning. The laying of brick began to-day, and it is expected that the stonework will be completed by the middle of next week.

A meeting of the Woman's Relief Corps will be held this evening in Memorial Hall.

The Boston and Albany railroad will run an excursion to Boston to-morrow, with a round trip fare of $1.

The Palmer Carpet Company will close to-morrow in order that the employes can attend the Boston excursion.

The executive committee of the Palmer Fair will hold a meeting in the Converse House this evening at 7 45.

A meeting of Good Cheer Rebekah lodge will be held Monday evening, when several candidates will be initiated.

The Grange held a field day at Overlook farm to-day. State Master C. D Richardson was present and addressed the members.

Undenominational services will be held every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs O. C. Marcy on the corner of Walnut and Pleasant streets.

The milkmen have advanced the price of milk to seven cents a quart, due to the scarcity of pasturage and the necessity of feeding grain at high prices.

Abont 700 of the employes of the street railway attended the dance of the trolley. men at Forest Lake Wednesday evening, coming and going on special cars.

At a meeting of the Grange last Friday evening, Francis L. Jones was installed as master, succeeding Perley V. Emory, who has moved to Kennebunkport, Me.

A broken trolley wire near North Monson yesterday afternoon delayed the cars on that line somewhat for a couple of trips; a turn-back was run until the trouble was remedied.

The Gordon Bible class of the Baptist church planned a lawn party for Wednesday evening on the lawn of C. B. Fiske of North Main street, but it was postponed on acconnt of the rain.

Miss Harriet F. Marshall of Gloucester has resigned her position as teacher of the Shorley district school to accept a more lucrative one as teacher of the fifth grade in the public schools of Weymouth.

Dr. H. C. Emerson of Springfield, well knowu in Palmer, who has for the past two years been health examiner for the state board of health, has resigned that position to give his entire time to his laboratory work.

The Monson and Bondsville clerks played baseball on the driving park yesterday afternoon. When it was decided to quit the score stood 16 to 1 in favor of Monson. Now the Monson team expresses a desire to play the Bondsville league team.

The organ committee of the Baptist church, after visiting several places and hearing a number of different makes of instruments, have placed an order for the organ for their new church with George W. Reed of West Boylston. It will be a two-manual, 21 stop instrument.

Fred Wilder Cross, for several years principal of the Palmer high school, since which time he has been resting from professional work, was last Friday elected principal of the Templeton high school from a list of 30 applicants. Mr. Cross has been living in Royalston.

The rain of Tuesday and Wednesday has done an almost incalculable amount of good. The pastures have long been dry and the feed in them short, and lawns and gardens were parched, some of them being beyond remedy. The rain penetrated to a depth of about 12 inches, but more will be needed soon to create any lasting effect.

The subject of the sermon at the Congregational church Sunday morning will he "Building the Wall." Sunday school at 12 o'clock; song service and Christian Endeavor prayer meeting at 7. Miss Eunice Bates, delegate from Hampden county to the recent International Christian Endeavor convention at St. Paul, will be present and speak of the convention.

The report of the New England Investment and Securities Company, which owns the trolley roads hereabouts, is to the effect that business is much better than a year ago. The May earnings were 9 per cent ahead of last year, June 12 per cent and July 8 per cent. The earnings are between 2 and 3 per cent above the 1907 level.

The last excursion of the season to Newport will be run over the Central Vermont railroad next Wednesday, with a round-trip rate from Palmer of $1 50. The trip from New London to Newport will be made on the elegant steamer "Chester W. Chapin" and a stay of three hours is allowed at Newport, where there is surf bathing and numerous other attractions.

The new waiting station at the Ludlow junction of the electric roads on the Springfield line is nearly ready for occupancy. It will contain ample accommodations for the traveling public, and a small store, where ice cream, soda, etc., may be procnred. The structnre is not being built by the street railway company, bnt by the Ludlow Mfg. Associates.

Athough the name of John F. Lnman did not appear in the list of deputy game wardens pnblished last week, Mr. Luman has not left the service. He is very much on the job, and his district comprises Palmer, Monson, Wales, Brimfield, Holland, Hampden, Wilbraham, Lndlow, Warren, West Brookfield, Brookfield, Southbridge, Webster, Oxford, Charlton and Dudley.

The State Highway Commission advertises in another colnmn for bids for constructing the new bridge over the Quaboag river near the wire mill, which is to be paid for jointly by the state and the towns of Monson and Palmer, and will do away with the ancient "Hastings" bridge at that point. The new structure will be a three-span stone masonry, and bids must be in hy noon of the 24th next Tuesday.

The Central Vermont railroad passenger train leaving Palmer at 12.17 for the north, had a head-on collision in the Brattleboro yard Monday with a freight train standing on a siding, the accident occnrring through the carelessness of an employe in leaving a switch open. One or two employes were shaken up somewhat but no one was seriously hurt. Miss Jennie Todd of Pine street, Palmer, was a passenger on the train but was not injured.

Complaint is made of the lawless spirit exhibited by many in their conduct about unoccupied places; apparently such places are looked on as public property, judging by the way they are run over and the liberties taken on them The Wing property on North Main street has suffered much in this respect of late, and Mrs. Wing suggests that now King street is opened to Main it might be made use of as a thoroughfare, instead of making a new one across her property adjoining.

O. P. Allen attended the twelfth reunion of the Holmes-Cady Association at Crystal Lake, Stafford, Ct., last week Thnrsday, and was elected president of the association for the fourth time. A. W. Kinsbury of Stafford was elected vice president and Mrs. Mary F. Holmes of West Brookfield secretary and treasurer There were more than 150 members and friends present who highly enjoyed the occasion. Mr. Allen, who has been collecting material for the genealogy of the descendants of Nicholas Cady of Watertown, 1645 to date, reported that the work was nearly completed, and was ready to receive advance subscriptions for the work. Quite a nnmber availed themselves of the opportunity to subscribe.

District Court.

One "drunk" was placed on probation Monday nntil Sept. 7; one paid a fine of $11. Richard Costello of Monson was asked to contribute $11 for drunkenness, and being without funds was sent up.

Tuesday morning Lewis Shepherd of Monson was fined and paid $10 for an assault on Joseph Fahey. The story was that members of the Shepherd family were playing ball Sunday evening in a lot owned by Fahey and invited him to take part. Fahey ordered them off and at Shepherd's house there was an argument and mixnp over the matter, during which Fahey was roughly handled

The case of Ernest M. Lord of Wilbraham for assault was farther continned until Saturday, the 28th.

A case of domestic infolicity was adjudicated Wednesday morning, when John Skowyra of the Ludlow end of Wilbrahaun was sent to the house of correction for three months for assaulting his wife. When she made the complaint Tuesday she said she wanted him sent away for five years, and when sentence was pronounced through the interpreter again desired a longer time, as she was afraid he'd kill her when he got out. Judge Konefick promised to keep him traveling to York street if he didn't respect her rights and she seemed a little more at ease. The couple were married eight months ago, and her story was that John didn't work much or provide very much for the living expenses, spending the greater part of what he did earn for "booze." His favorite pastime seemed to be to "lick" and ponnd her, and she was tired of it. Her demeanor in conrt was that of a forlorn hope. Skowyra told on the stand that he had come home abont 9.15 Monday night after quitting work at 6 and going to a neighbor's where there was some beer drunk He asked for supper and was told there was none for snch as he, whereupon he proceeded to pound his wife. His appearance Wednesday was the third time in a year on charges of assault.

Wednesday John Farrell of Bondsville was fined $10 for drunkenness, and the case was continned until Sept. 7. George T. Anstin of Thorndike was arraigned on a charge of assault on Patrick Nagle, and the case was continued nntil this morning, when he was found guilty and the case continned until Sept. 7 for sentence.

This morning two Poles from Wilbraham were fined $5 each for larceny of railroad ties, and one was found not guilty and discharged.

WARE.

Death of Owen Tiffany.

Owen Tiffany, 66, died last Friday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James Dufault on Vernon street after being in ill health for two years. Mr. Tiffany was born in Ireland, hut came to this country when a boy. He learned his trade as a shoemaker in Brookfield, but was still in his teens when he enlisted in Warren with the other volunteers of the Second Massachusetts regiment. He was mustered into service as a private in Roxbury on May 25, 1861, and was in many of the hardest battles of the war. He fought at Antietam, Gettysburg and Chancellorsville, but a wound in the left shonlder forced him to spend six months in Findlay hospital in Washington, and after he was able to get abont again he was honorable discharged. He had a cobbler's shop on Water street for a number of years. He leaves four sons, Robert E of Pittsfield, Me., Thomas of Hartland, Me., Dominick and James of Ware, also two daughters, Mrs. James Dufault of Ware and Mrs. Julia Tnllim of Danby, Vt. He leaves a sister, Mrs. James Kennedy of North Brookfield, and two brothers, Patrick of Togus, Me., and Dominick of Spencer. The fnneral was held in All Saints' church Sunday afternoon at 2 30, Rev. J. H. Murphy officiating. Mr. Tiffany was a member of J. W. Lawton post, and the bearers at the funeral were these comrades of the post: George S Marsh, John C. Boyle, Charles H. Rood, D Otis Holden, Thomas Moriarty and Amable Gareau. Burial was in St. William's cemetery.

Drawing Teacher Resigns.

Miss Grace A. Jenkins, teacher of drawing the past two years, has resigned to take a similar position at a salary of $800 in her home town of Andover No appointment of a new teacher will probably be made before September 1, when Superintendent G. W. Cox will return from his vacation in Nova Scotia.

WARREN.

Oldest Man in Town.

William H. Bishop, as the oldest man in town, was presented Saturday with a handsome gold-headed cane by Charles L Combs, chairman of the selectmen. The cane is the gift of the Boston Post and the idea is that it shall always be held by the oldest man in town. In case of the death of the first holder, the cane is to be transmitted to the then oldest man in town and so on. Mr. Bishop is 87 years old and enjoys the best of health, being seen on the streets every day. He was born in Homer, N. Y., March 5, 1822, and went to Warren to live when seven years old. When 17 years old he was appreuticed to William Howe, the originator of the Howe truss bridge, and assisted him in building the first wooden bridge across the Connecticut river at Springfield and the wooden bridges between Springfield and Albany when the railroad was built. He returned to Warren to work in 1843 and was engaged as carpenter and contractor, building many of the houses and large barns in the town at that period when it was fast developing, and has for over 60 years lived in the house he himself built. Later he was associated with L. J. Knowles in making the wooden work for the Knowles loom and remained in the emplov of the Knowles steam pnmp company as a carpenter, and later in the lagging of steam chests and cylinders with different kinds of hardwood, which was much in vogue at that time. He gave up work in 1894 owing to cataracts upon his eyes, for which an operation failed to restore his sight. He served the town at one time as selectman and held many minor officers. When the Republican party was first organized he became the first candidate for the Legislature, but was defeated by the late Samuel E. Blair, who remained in the old ranks. He is the oldest living member of the Warren thief detecting society. Mr. Bishop has always attended the First Congregational church except for a few years when as an "anti-slavery" man he attended the Methodist church. He was first married in 1847 to Olive Ranger, who died in 1861. They had three children, Frank R., Emma A. and Olive R, all of whom are dead, Frank R, the oldest, having died last month. On February 12 1865, Mr. Bishop was again married to Miss Martha A. Davis of Chester, who died in 1897, and his only near relative living is Harry Bishop of Thorndike.

Death of Miss Dolly P. Johnson.

Miss Dolly P. Johnson, 66, died Monday morning at 7.30, after a three-years' illness with dropsy. She was horn in Winsted, Ct., July 18, 1843, hut went to Warren to live when two years old and had lived at the same place ever since. She was the oldest child of Eli and Dolly Johnson. She was an active member of the First Methodist Episcopal chnrch, interested in all its work, a constant attendant at its services when her health permitted. She is survived by two sisters, Miss Rose A. of Warren and Miss Jessie A. of Springfield, and two brothers, Edward G. at home and Robert E of Springfield. The funeral was heid Wednesday afternoon at 2 30 in the Methodist church, Rev. William M. Crawford of Springfield, a former pastor of the church, officiating. Selections were rendered by a quartet composed of Miss Grace Brosseau, Mrs James C. Campbell, H. A. Perry and William Hallows. Burial was in Pine Grove cemetery and the bearers were John Van Slyke, Andrew P. Van Slyke, John J. Lycett and Albert Woodward.

Narrow Escape.

William Dillon of West Warren narrowly escaped being seriously injured last Friday evening while trying to jump from a fast-moving freight train near the mill of the Sayles & Jenks manufacturing company Mr. Dillon had boarded the train at West Warren and did not realize how rapidly he was traveling until he started to jump off He was thrown between the tracks When he tried to get up and walk he could not, and was assisted to a barn nearby and Dr. John E Dalton was summoned. He found no broken bones, hut several cuts on his left hand and that he was badly shaken up. He was later removed to his home in West Warren.

Death of Edward M. Sibley.

Edward M. Sibley, 72, died Saturday night after a short illness with acute nephritis. Mr. Sibley was born in North Brookfield February 4, 1837, hut went to Warren when a young man and located on the farm in the east part of the town where he had since lived, and had enjoyed unusually good health until very recently He leaves two children, Walter Sibley, clerk at Cooley's hotel in Springfield, and Mrs. Etta Shaw of Belchertown. The funeral was heli Tuesday afternoon at 2 30 and burial was in the family lot in Pine Grove cemetery.

Mrs Allen was for many years a resident of the southeast part of the town and moved away about a year ago. Besides her daughter, she leaves three sons, Harry, Henry and Frank, all of whom live in South Warren.

No Paving This Year.

The engineering work having been done, there was a difference of opinion betw en the street railway officials as to the kind of rail which should be put in to replace the ones now in use. By the terms of its franchise the company is compelled to change the space between its rails and for 18 inches on either side of its tracks to the same grade and material as the rest of the street whenever the town makes a change. The present rail is not adapted to brick paving and new ones must be put in. The road wished to lay a five-inch rail but the town officials stood out for one of eight inches; a compromise on seven was finally effected. Then employes of the steel company came and made measurements for the new rails and switches, and departed. Nothing can be done with the work until the rails have arrived and are laid, and when they will be along has been the conundrum. It is stated now however, by officials of the street railway, that the rails are promised in September. That—assuming that they arrive the first of the month,—will he too late to complete the work this season, and it will in all probability have to wait until spring. There is also a question in the minds of many whether, in view of all the digging up which the street has been subjected to this summer, it would not be the wiser plan to wait until spring, even if the work could be done at once. It is suggested that, in view of the manner in which much of the earth was replaced when the excavating was done, it shonld be allowed to settle for a time—go through the freezing and thawing of one winter at least—before permanent work like brick paving is placed on top of it.

Questions have also been asked regarding the contracting of the job. It is understood that the selectmen have decided to do the grading, etc, and employ an expert to lay the brick, employing local labor to as great an extent as possible.

Contest Will.

Local people are interested in the contesting of the will of the late Electa M. Dwight by Samuel E. Fairfield, her brother. Judge Charles L. Long recently pronounced a decision allowing the will as it read, but Mr Fairfield filed a notice of appeal from the decision Wednesday. Mrs. Dwight was a widow who lived on the Wales road and her only daughter and surviving heir, Miss Eva M. Dwight, died last January. The contested will was made subsequent to her daughter's death. In the will $500 is left to S. E. Fairfield and the Baptist church at Stafford Hollow; 40 acres of sprout land in Stafford are given to F. Z. Fairfield, a nephew; Frank Hulett of Longmeadow receives three acres of land in the town of Somers; Mrs. Eunice Wakefield and Oliver Dwight of Chicago, Ill., and also Truman Dwight of Los Angeles, Cal., are given $100 each. The residuary estate is left to Ida E. Johnson and Elizabeth A. Hitchcock, nieces of Mrs. Dwight, and both of this town. A jury trial for validity is asked for in the appeal and the charges of unsound mind and undue influence are brought. Carlos M. Gage is executor of the will, Gardner & Gardner appear for the complainant and F. Q. Ball and W. B. Stone for the executor.

Oldest Resident Receives Cane.

Albert Bodurtha has been presented with a valuable gold-headed cane by the Boston Post as being Monson's oldest male citizen. The matter is left with the selectmen of the town as trustees and Mr. Bodurtha received the cane Wednesday. He was born in West Springfield May 13, 1824, and moved to Hampden early in life, Hampden being then a part of Wilbraham. Mr. Bodurtha was brought up and educated in Hampden and after working several seasons in Palmer, he purchased a farm in the Scantic district of Hampden, where he lived for many years until 27 years ago he came to Monson. In Monson he was employed as gardener for the late Cyrus W. Holmes and later for Miss Esther Holmes. Mr. Bodurtha is in good health except for rheumatism and is still able to be up and around and is known as a kind, genial, old gentleman. He was a regular attendant of the Methodist church as long as his health permitted.

Find Snake in Letter Box.

A large live garter snake was placed in the letter box at the local postoffice Tuesday morning between 10 and 11 o'clock. No information has as yet been secured as to who committed the criminal act, for such a deed is so considered by the postal authorities. Every effort will be put forth to apprehend the guilty parties. Postmaster G. H. Seymour has offered a reward of $5 for the conviction of the person who did the deed and the case will be pushed to the full extent of the law. Mail boxes are to be used for mail only and even if the snake was placed in the postoffice the authorities cannot consider it as mail and jokers should restrict their fun outside of government property.

Narrow Escape.

Mrs. H. M. Stillman, who resides at North Monson, narrowly escaped serious injury last Friday night about 8.30. She was returning from the village on the electric car, but the conductor failed to see her signal and she was carried by her destination to just above the golf links, so it was necessary for her to walk back down the track. Just before reaching the highway again Mrs Stillman fell into a deep culvert which runs under the tracks and received besides a very severe shaking up, numerous bruises and a badly-sprained wrist. Had she been unable to extricate herself from the trestle work before the next car from Palmer returned the chances for a serious accident are obvious.

New Instructor at Monson Academy.

Miss Marian F. Stratton of Hudson, a Wellesley graduate, has been appointed instructor of chemistry and the commercial branches at Monson Academy, and the faculty is now completed for the coming year. Principal Dewing has had room 6 in the Academy building converted into his office and will transact all business there. There will be some changes in the curriculum and it would seem that the coming year at the Academy with a new and mature faculty, under new management and ideas, would be one of growth and development.

Former Academy Boy Has Serious Mishap.

William Cowle, a former resident of this town and a graduate of the Academy in the 1909 class, was so unfortunate as to lose the sight of his right eye as the result of a ball game accident in Leominster several weeks ago. He was playing as catcher and was hit by a foul tip full in the eye, which was dislodged from its normal position. In order to replace it naturally it was necessary to cut all the surrounding eye muscles, but the sight was ruined.

The rain of Monday and Tuesday was very pleasing to the local farmers as their crops had begun to show effects of the long continued drought. However it is thought the rain came in time to prevent serious results except to the early potatoes and the rowen crops.

Work on the addition to the Ellis No. 3 mill is progressing favorably and the exterior will be complete in a few weeks. The number of operatives are constantly being increased and the mill will be running on full time in the near future.

The derailment of an engine at Macey's switch near the State Line siding last Friday evening delayed traffic on the C V. railroad several hours. The train leaving Monson at 9.08 arrived at New London about 3 p. m., and the train from the south passed through the village about 11 p. m.

During the past two weeks there have been numerous complaints by property owners concerning the stealing of fruit and vegetables. One controversy, when the owner interfered, came to blows and much annoyance has been caused by thieving. The work is not the work of boys but of people who have reached the years of discretion, who make a clean sweep of one's fruit when they come. There is a law in Massachusetts which can prevent such depredations and it will be vigorously enforced if existing conditions of the past weeks are not speedily stopped voluntarily.

FAMOUS CLUBHOUSE.

Famous Beaver Lake Club of Ware Passes Out of Existence.

The clubhouse at Beaver Lake in Ware was sold at auction on Tuesday and is being torn down. It was sold by F. D. Gilmore of Ware, who acted as trustee for 20 members of the club who loaned the club $100 each when, at the height of its popularity, it wished to make improvements in the building. It was bid off for $170 by Joseph Edmond, who will use the material in the construction of other buildings.

Thus passes a resort which was for a number of years popular and unusually pleasing, and to a certain extent exclusive. Beaver Lake was a beautiful sheet of water, formed by the construction of a sizable dam. In the pond were many fish, and in the winter good catches were made through the ice. In the summer there were varied entertainments and amusements and gay parties held forth in the spacious clubhouse. Of recent years it has fallen more and more into disuse and deterioration of the building has been rapid. Broken windows, doors torn from their hinges, and other evidences of vandalism have been numerous for a long time. Then came the tearing away of the dam this spring and now the passing of the clubhouse.

Every Pot a Jackpot.

A little girl in this city had four cents which she was to give to the Sunday school in two equal installments. When she went to her class last Sunday she was advised by her mother to leave two of the pennies at home, but as she insisted on carrying them she was permitted to take them all in her purse. When she returned home the four pennies were gone.

"My child, where are the other two?" the mother asked.

And the little one, mixing for the moment some of the card talk she had heard at home with what she really wanted to say, innocently replied:

"Well, mamma, they dealt twice."—Lincoln Star.

THE DOCTOR'S TEST.

By ELBERT T. BENTLEY.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

We physicians need to exercise great care to avoid becoming victims of imposition. We are constantly called upon for expert testimony on the matter of claims or criminal cases where it often requires ingenuity rather than professional skill to get at the truth.

As an oculist I was called upon to pass upon a matter involving considerable money between two young women cousins, Eunice and Alice Jaynes. The ownership of a large property depended upon whether a certain paper had been written and signed by one of them. Eunice Jaynes claimed that she was totally blind and had been so during the period that it was claimed she signed the paper. If so, she could not have written and signed it without showing the fact that she was blind. It was claimed by her counsel that the paper was a forgery. Other oculists had examined the girl and signed certificates that she was entirely blind in both eyes. It was agreed that if I confirmed their opinion no further effort would be made to impeach her testimony and the case would be decided in her favor.

The girl did not please me. There was an expression on her face I did not like. Nature provides this telltale expression that we may distinguish the bad from the good, though I confess there may be counterfeit expressions so perfect as to avoid detection. On the other hand, I had seen her cousin and had at once been struck with a native honesty stamped on every feature of her face. Her case depended on me. If I decided that Eunice was blind I would give her a fortune. If I could prove that Eunice could see the property would go to Alice.

I examined Eunice first as to the surface of her eyes. Their condition was normal, but this did not prove she could see. I applied tests of very strong light. The girl did not blink and professed not to be able to distinguish between light and darkness. I did not believe that any one could stand this light test without a quiver of a muscle. It looked as if the nerves of the eyes were perfectly dead. I applied other tests, but did not have the confidence in them I had in the light test. The girl stood every one of them.

I gave up trying to prove by professional tests that Eunice Jaynes could see. It looked as if I must sign a certificate that she was stone blind. There was no defect in the eyes, for such could be discovered by any competent oculist. But a defect of the nerve might not be detected. I asked her if she had ever received a blow on her temple. She thought for some time and said that some years before on going upstairs in the dark she had tripped, fallen and struck her head on the stairs in a place upon which she laid her finger. It was her temple.

I had had cases of young men hit with a baseball in that region with a consequent blindness in the eye on the side struck. Since the nerves of the eyes cross, the remaining eye is liable to be affected. I asked the girl if she had discovered after the accident any difference in the sight of the eyes. She replied that when the sight commenced to fail it failed in both eyes at the same time—that is, so far as she knew.

I made up my mind to try one unprofessional test and if she stood that I would sign the certificate of her blindness. But the nature of the test required witnesses, because it was unprofessional. I directed the girl to come to my office next morning at a certain hour. I had my witnesses in my consulting room and received the girl in my waiting room. I blindfolded her so carefully that I was sure she could not get a ray of light, placing a bandage over her eyes, with two fillers for the eye sockets attached. When this was done to my satisfaction I led her into my consulting room and placed her in a chair before my witnesses. Then, taking up a mouse trap I had ready, I took a mouse out of it and held it by the tip of the tail close to but not touching the girl's face. Then I suddenly removed the bandage.

The instant Eunice Jaynes saw the wriggling little rodent within a few inches of her face she not only drew away, but uttered a slight scream.

Where my professional skill had failed my knowledge of feminine instinct succeeded. The proof was positive. I not only declined to certify that the girl was blind, but certified that she could see. The witnesses also certified to the demonstration of fact.

Of course the verdict was in favor of Alice Jaynes and on my testimony. The case excited a great deal of comment, with many thrusts at the professional tests of my brother practitioners and many compliments upon what were termed my "practical sense and absence of professional tomfoolery." This was naturally very gratifying to me, but something better was in store for me.

The day after the verdict on going to my office I found there a magnificent bouquet of flowers, with an accompanying card bearing the name of Alice Jaynes.

I did not propose to thank the fair donor in a note, and the same evening I called upon her for the purpose. I found her brimful of gratitude to me for saving her property to her and admiration for my ingenuity. When I finished my call, which seemed to me to have lasted half an hour, in looking at my watch I found that it had lasted three hours. I am now Alice Jaynes' husband.

Showed Her the Door.

Thomas had been a carpenter, but owing to the dullness in trade he engaged as a footman at the "big hoose" in the village.

On the day of his engagement his mistress, having a lady visitor in the drawing room, rang the bell for the footman.

"You will show this lady the front door, Thomas," she said.

"Yes, mem," replied Thomas, and, bowing to the lady, he requested her to follow him. On coming to the door Thomas opened it, and the lady was about to pass out when Thomas, tapping her on the shoulder, remarked:

"This is the door, mem; guid pitch pine in't, framed, two an' a half inches thick, with raised moldings; wud cost about two pound ten, mem."—London Tit-Bits.

Capacity Limited.

To a swell cafe I led her, and on terrapin I fed her, yet methought I noted sadness in her eye. Then as we departed and for a street car started, she let out a large and soulful sigh. When I asked her trouble, her answer knocked me double, "I got so full of turtle that I had no room for pie."—Chicago News.

THE CORPSE THAT KNEW THE LAW.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

David Wakefield was known in that far westerly region he inhabited for having as many lives as a cat. Thrice he was left for dead after altercations, and four times in illness the doctors gave him up. Once he tumbled off a cliff a hundred feet high, was caught on the limbs of a tree and landed on his feet without a scratch. But now Wakefield was dead. There had been altogether too much shooting in Paradise, and the people resolved to stop it. Wakefield was the next man to shoot some one, and the committee, wishing to make an example of him and fearing that if they looked into the matter they might run against a case of self defense or something of the kind, though they gave him a trial, did not take the trouble to summon witnesses for the defense. But, being law abiding men, they were very particular that the court routine should be observed even to asking the culprit if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon him. He replied that he had been a lawyer in the better days and could clear himself, but what he wanted was rest in the grave.

And so he passed out. He was "hanged by the neck until he was dead," and papers were on file to show that he was physically and legally a corpse. The case would have been forever closed had not a young doctor who had reversed the usual course by beginning practice and studying afterward stolen him from his grave. Wakefield came to life in a warm room, espied a bottle, stimulated himself and when the doctor came back to cut him up was just setting the glass down on a table.

Wakefield, being "that broke," offered for $100 to refrain from informing of the doctor's breach of the law. The doctor refused the offer, and Wakefield sued him for interfering with his lawful sepulcher. Since Wakefield was legally dead the committee did not see how they could deprive him of life. But they granted him a trial of his suit against the doctor, in which the claimant laid the damages at $1,000 About that time a lawyer came from an eastern law school and hung out his shingle. The doctor retained him. Wakefield stated his case in court thus:

"Your honor, I am legally a corpse, and this case must be tried on such grounds. Death, according to the law, separates a man from all his earthly possessions except his body. It is a maxim of common law that there can be no property in a corpse—that is, no one living can own it. My corpse is my own property"—

"I claim," interrupted the opposing counsel, "that the plaintiff is Wakefield's ghost. Since he places his case on technicalities I will do the same. Let him prove that he is not a disembodied spirit."

"It is not necessary," replied the plaintiff. "The law takes no cognizance of ghosts. When a man is dead the law says that he shall stay dead. His apparition has no standing in court, though his body has.

"It is the duty of the common law," the claimant went on, "to protect the 'repose of the dead.' The law holds that the corpse, being the owner of itself before death, possesses certain rights over itself after it becomes dead. Every corpse has the inalienable right to six feet of ground to be buried in and the right of being buried. The law holds the owner of the premises on which a man dies responsible for his burial. This corpse died on grounds under the jurisdiction of the courts. The courts buried it, and the courts are responsible for its being left untouched in its grave."

"Your honor," interrupted opposing counsel, "the law gives no civil remedy for the stealing of a body, for there is no property right in a corpse to give any one a right to recover in a court for violation of sepulcher."

"The learned counsel," pursued the claimant, "should insert the word 'living.' I admit that no living person has a right to recover for violation of sepulcher. That right is vested in the corpse. But in previous cases the corpse has not come into court to claim its rights. A civil action may be brought for breaking and entering a place where the body is buried, the same constituting a trespass, for which damages can be recovered. The law has often interfered to protect the rights of us corpses. And as no one can own any body except his own no one can remove a body without the court's permission, which can only be granted in behalf of the body itself.

"Having shown your honor that the defendant is only accountable to me, a corpse, and that he has willfully interfered with my rest in the grave, has brought me back to a life that is irksome to me, I ask that he be commanded by the court to pay me the damages claimed."

The judge looked at the defendant's counsel, but he was so dazed by the remarkable legal knowledge on the part of a corpse that he could not think of a single argument in rebuttal. He collapsed.

At this point a stranger in those parts arose and said to his honor:

"I am Judge Tatterton of the supreme court of —— and traveling in your county. Permit me to say that the points stated by the plaintiff are legally correct in every particular."

"Judgment for the plaintiff," said the judge, "and be sure to enter it in favor of the corpse of David Wakefield, together with costs."

Must Keep the Curtains Up.

"In London it is strictly against the law for the driver of any public conveyance to allow the curtains of his vehicle to be pulled down," said a man who has visited the English metropolis. "By day or night the windows of cabs, hansoms, carriages, or what not, whether drawn by horses or propelled by electric power, must be so open to public inspection as to allow a plain view of those occupying the interior. A closed rig wouldn't get a block before a London hobby would nab its driver and hale him to a magistrate's office, where he would get no mercy. The law is based on the theory that closed vehicles lend themselves easily to the commission of robbery or murder and that they may also assist a criminal to make his escape."—Baltimore American.

The Gorgons.

The Gorgons were creatures of Greek mythology, mentioned by Homer and Euripides as being of peculiarly abhorrent aspect. Their hair was composed of serpents, their bodies covered with scales and girdled with reptiles with heads erect, vibrating their tongues threateningly, while the hands of the Gorgons, adorned with sharp talons, were of brass. The gaze of the monsters was deadly, all upon whom they fixed their eyes being turned to stone. One of the three terrible sisters was conquered and beheaded by Perseus, and as he took flight in the air en route for Ethiopia, holding the severed head in his hands, the drops of blood which fell from it became serpents, which ever after infested the sands of Lybia —New York Telegram.

Free to the Ladies—Silk Embroidered Pongee Waists.

Just now every lady in Palmer and vicinity can add to her wardrobe an extra silk embroidered pongee waist which is given free to any lady by one of Springfield's leading business institutions for sending them a customer for a man's suit.

The firm in question is the ever-progressive Scotch Woolen Mills Company, No. 393 Main street. These pongee waist patterns have artistically embroidered front, cuffs and collar, in pleasing and clever designs They come in three-yard lengths and you have your choice of cream or white and embroidered design. They'll make up into the handsomest waists—something out of the ordinary. The Scotch Woolen Mills Company invite all of our lady readers to come to their store and give their opinion on these patterns.

They're absolutely free to any lady who brings or sends a suit customer, which is quite easy just now, considering that during August the Scotch Woolen Mills Company are tailoring to measure $20 suits at $12 and an extra pair of $4 trousers free. They claim they can afford this price slash because they won't be compelled to lay off their tailors during the dull summer, and then in the busy fall break green men into their painstaking tailoring system of 19 stores. Read their advertisement on first page.

"I don't know which is the greater gossip—Mrs. Lovenews or Miss Scandalamonger." "They say Mrs. Lovenews has a circulation 25 per cent. greater than Miss Scandalmonger."—Brooklyn Life.

HANDICAPPED.

This Is the Case With Many Palmer People.

Too many Palmer citizens are handicapped with a bad back. The unceasing pain causes constant misery, making work a burden and stooping or lifting an impossibility. The backaches at night, preventing refreshing rest and in the morning is stiff and lame. Plasters and liniments may give relief but cannot reach the cause. To eliminate the pains and aches you must cure the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Can you doubt Palmer evidence?

Thos. Cook, living on Main St., Palmer, Mass., says: "My work is such that I have to sit in one position nearly all the time and in this way my kidneys were weakened. I suffered constantly from backache and at times there were such severe pains in my kidney regions that I was scarcely able to sit still. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured a box from Lynde and Gould's drug store and a few doses gave me such great relief that I continued taking them and when I had used one box, I was without a sign of kidney trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and I am pleased to give them the credit."

Accident Narrowly Avoided.

C. A. Coto narrowly escaped a serious accident yesterday afternoon about 2:30. He was driving along Main street and when near the railroad crossing a freight train was just coming into sight. Mr. Coto thought that he had time to cross before the freight arrived and started across but the horse balked on the crossing and would not move. Mr. Coto remained in the team, trying to urge the horse on, until the engine was about ten feet away, then jumped. The horse also jumped forward but the engine struck the rear of the cart, throwing it against the fence near the post office. The horse broke loose and ran up the street and was captured at the mill office. Mr. Coto suffered no injury besides a shaking up, while the wheels on the cart were all broken and the windows were smashed to pieces.

Miss Doris Fitzgerald has returned to her home in Springfield, after a week's visit with her aunt, Miss Katherine Fitzgerald.

Misses Annie and Mary Carmody of Springfield have returned to their home after a few days' visit with their grandmother, Mrs J Carmody.

BOSTON LETTER.

campaign in interest, unless James H. Vahey contrives to put some new life into the situation. There is under consideration putting into the Democratic platform the proposition that a law be passed, giving the governor a legislative agent upon the floor of the Senate and House each, so that the administration could be questioned personally and be attacked and defended after the precedent of the British parliament. This would focus attention upon the executive department, and there are those who believe that Vahey could win on a platform of state issues with that at the front. In 1881 a special committee of the United States Senate, Republicans and Democrats, reported unanimously in favor of giving cabinet officials such a status on the floor of Congress, but the matter was dropped and has never been brought up since.

Sergeant-at-Arms Remington, who is making preparations for the dedication of the monument at Baton Rouge to the memory of Massachusetts men who fell in the Gulf campaign in the civil war, has received letters from the mayor of the city which are full of hospitality and a spirit of co-operation. He makes suggestions about securing the services of local bands and military bodies so as to make a great public display. He wants the date put forward to November 3 so as to have it occur the same day as President Taft's visit there. But all plans have been made with railroad companies, hotels and members of the party. Furthermore, the day set is the day after our state election, and, in order to be there, the Massachusetts party would have to start in October and would miss the close of the campaign and be absent election day. So the captain can do nothing until he consults with Gov. Draper, who is busy on the field of war.

There was a reason why Congressman Washburn of Worcester was not chosen for chairman of the Republican state convention, although his fitness was everywhere conceded. He is not the ranking member who has not presided. If he were taken, then others might have a grouch because they had not been preferred. One of the incidents of the canvas for a suitable man was the receipt of letters from Congressman Roberts offering himself as a suitable presiding officer, and it is said that on the day of the committee meeting a telegram was received from him to the same effect. My informant says positively that it was so. But, from the inside disposition of the committee, it seems to be a safe bet that neither Roberts, nor Tirrell, nor Ames nor Greene will ever be asked to wield the gavel at the Republican state convention.

Baseball Briefs.

"Dave" Belisle is still hitting the spheres for the extra bases.

Gilbertville defeated Hardwick, 9 to 6, Saturday in the former place.

"Bill" Cahill caught a nice game for the Metropolitans against the Ponies.

The Metropolitans made sure of last place by losing Saturday's game.

"Grinnie" Brouillette made a star one-hand stop of Bowler's hit in the sixth.

"Bill" Drexler of the Metropolitans stole a base in the game with the Ponies and did it easy.

"Tom" Clifford redeemed himself Saturday by holding the Metropolitans down to one hit.

Murray of the Ponies is the weakest hitter on the team, with "Gihel" Sullivan on top.

Brosnahan of the Indians got a double last Saturday at Three Rivers. How did he get it?

"Pat" Keyes added one more to his error column by dropping another easy one Saturday.

At Belchertown Saturday the Belchertown Independents defeated the Enfield team, 15 to 10.

"Mike" St. John of the Metropolitans didn't get a hit last Saturday, the first game of the season.

"Danny" Foley didn't get a hit Saturday, the first time this season. He fanned three times, "Something Unusual."

"Sam" Cole of the Tri Streamers was credited with an error last Saturday. It must have been an extra high one to get away from "Sam."

Poitras, of the "Tri Streamers," got a home run, this being the second one having been made in the league. "Jerry" Sullivan getting the other.

"Dick" Connor of the Metropolitans pitched a corking game against the Ponies, and would have won his game but for two misplays. Ask the "fans" about it.

"Herb" Clark, formerly of the Springfield team, who pitched for the Indians last Saturday, was hammered for 15 hits, 11 singles, two doubles, one triple and one four-sacker.

The Indians certainly didn't get any pointers when they went to Boston to see the Detroit-Boston game because they have not as yet shown them. They will have to spruce up in the next two games or they will lose their chance for first place.

The games to-morrow will be the Crescents of Holyoke who will play Bondsville. A hot game is expected in Palmer to-morrow when they play the strong Independent team of Monson for which Mydell and Patterson will be battery, while "Dick" Connor and "Gene" O'Leary will do the honors for Palmer. The umpire will be Metzdorf of Springfield

BRIMFIELD.

Munroe G Tarbell has returned from a ten-days' visit in Boston.

Postmaster Fred T. Parker is visiting his daughter Florence in Cambridge this week.

FISH FOR LUNCHEON.

A mackerel is usually split down the back and broiled or baked; it should never be fried, because it is an oily fish. For a change, when there are but two or three to serve, make a little stuffing from bread very lightly seasoned, fill the fish, from which the head and tail have not been removed, and pin together with small wire skewers. Set the fish upright or a pan and brace it in place by more skewers. Bake a half hour or until done and lift out carefully on to a hot platter and set upright with a row of brown bread points. Garnish further with small lettuce leaves or parsley and radish roses.

The brown bread if steamed in small cans is sliced and the rounds cut into quarters. Four slices will be sufficient and it may be toasted if preferred.

An average sized mackerel is about twelve inches long and weighs one and one-quarter pounds. It is so rich because of the oil distributed throughout the flesh that a weak digestion may find trouble with it, but it is a nutritious and valuable salt water fish in season from April to October.

THE JUNIOR'S CODE.

By THOMAS G. ECKLES.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

There are cases of individual stupidity and there are combinations of stupidity. It has been my fate to suffer from one of these combinations. In my case it consisted of a man in love and a small boy who hadn't any sense.

Mr. Perkins, the junior member of the firm where I was confidential clerk, was the man in love. His fiancee lived in an interior town, and he was continually neglecting the business to go and see her or in devoting himself to her when she came to town. He was obliged to go abroad on business, and before going he called me into his private office and said:

"Frank, I'm going to take you into my confidence. I am engaged to be married, as you probably know, to the loveliest girl in the universe. She is Miss Octavia Allerton and lives at B. I shall wish to cable her occasionally and have made a code, of which she has the key. Now, I don't wish these telegrams to be inspected by the whole office force, so I shall address them to you. As soon as you receive one of them take it to the telegraph office and send it to Miss Allerton. Now, be very careful and say nothing to anybody, and if you follow orders and handle the dispatches as instructed I will see that you are well paid for your trouble."

I promised to attend to the matter, and when I left him he felt assured that he could send messages to his fiancee safely and with secrecy. While he was on the ocean I received a wireless message every few days, and they continued at intervals when he got on land. I took them all to the telegraph office and forwarded them.

There was an interval of five days during which none came, and then I received one just as I was leaving the office in the evening to go to keep an engagement of importance to myself in a suburban town. Having just time to catch the train, I called Joe, an office boy, gave him the message with the proper address and told him to take it to the telegraph office. "Be very careful," I said, "to see that it goes all right. If it doesn't, my head will come off."

There's such a thing as spurring people to overdo things. I put too much caution into Joe. If I had said nothing to him he would have handed the telegram in without looking at it and nothing would have happened. As it was, while going to the telegraph office he took it out of the envelope and read it:

Notary, alternative.

Not knowing that it was a cipher telegram, he at once assumed that there was something wrong in it, since "Notary, alternative," meant nothing as it stood. He ran back to find me, but I had gone. He set out again for the telegraph office, trying on the way to make sure of the message. He had heard of blunders of operators in recording messages and concluded this was one of them. He put a number of words in place of "notary" in order to make a proper reading and finally hit on the word "another." "Another alternative" meant something. Before reaching the telegraph office he had written "another" in place of "notary."

The next day a cablegram came from Mr. Perkins that he would return immediately. He reached America within a week, but went straight to his fiancee. The next day he appeared at the office. He glared at me as he passed me, and, going into his private room, he sent for me. I saw a check laying on his desk before him. It looked ominous. He handed it to me and said:

"Here is your salary, paid to the end of the month. We shall not need your services any longer."

Of course I asked the cause of my discharge.

"I sent you a cablegram from Paris," he said. "It read, 'Notary, alternative.'" He handed me a copy of the cipher code, the word "notary" underlined. It read:

I am very lonely without you.

Then he told me to turn to the word "alternative," and I saw that it meant "love." The whole message read:

I'm very lonely without you, love.

Meanwhile he was scratching something on a piece of paper. When I had read the interpretation of his message he said, "Would you like to know how that message read when it was received by Miss Allerton?" I replied that I would, and he handed me what he had written:

I have found another love.

I explained to him how the blunder occurred, but my excuses made no impression on him. Turning to his desk, he indicated that the interview was ended.

Going out, I met the head of the firm. "I'm sorry for you, Carter," he said. "I did all I could for you, but failed. I couldn't refuse to consent to your dismissal. Indeed, it is best that you shouldn't have to meet him every day. That telegram lost him his girl. She wished to get rid of him to marry another man. She took advantage of it to break her engagement by cable, and before he could get to her she had engaged herself to his rival. You see, he couldn't endure the sight of you daily after what has happened."

That's the reason I have said that I have suffered from a combination of stupidity. I think the man was more stupid than the boy. He should have thanked me for indirectly bringing about a break between him and a girl who was fooling him. She was intending to marry him because he was making money.

The Cat and the Owl.

"Metaphysics," said a clergyman, "is a subject that always makes one think of the cat and the owl.

"A cat, you know, once set forth in quest of happiness. She wandered up, she wandered down. She questioned this animal and she questioned that. Finally, wrapped in meditation in a tree, she perceived an owl.

"'Owl,' said the cat, 'tell me, most wise bird, where happiness is to be found!'

"'In meditation,' the owl replied. 'Meditation alone is the true secret of happiness.'

"'But,' said the cat, 'on what subject am I to meditate?'

"'On the subject,' the owl answered, 'which has occupied the race of owls since the beginning of time—namely, which came first, the owl or the egg, for, while the owl comes from the egg, so also does the egg come from the owl!'"

Precocious Punctilio.

"So you don't believe in Santa Claus?"

"I didn't exactly say that," answered the little Boston girl. "But I don't approve of him. I understand that he calls after 6 o'clock and doesn't wear evening clothes."—Washington Star.

AUNT ALINE'S TRYST.

The Coming of the Man She So Anxiously Awaited.

By JOHN ROXBURY.

[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

"Why, Aunt Aline! How pretty you look! What have you been doing to yourself? And where are you going?"

Little Mrs. Jordan had run into her aunt's cozy home on her way to the city.

"Is it so unusual for me to look nice, Dollie?"

Miss Sherwin turned from the glass before which she had been giving a final touch to the soft brown hair that waved around her white forehead and smiled quizzically at her niece.

"No," returned the little matron with cordial sincerity; "you always look lovely to Dan and Nell and me. But you never would buy yourself pretty clothes while we were with you, and as you were always doing something for us you seldom took time to look nt yourself. That new golden silk is wonderfully becoming, and that mechlin at your throat, with the quaint brooch of coral and silver, is most artistic. And you have such a pretty pink color in your cheeks. One would think you were a young girl going out to meet your lover."

The color of which Dollie Jordan spoke deepened to rose. Miss Sherwin laughed an odd, embarrassed little laugh.

"You mustn't come flattering me," she said. "And—I don't wish to hurry you, but you'll miss your train to town if you stay much longer."

"Mercy me! So I will!" And with a hasty glance at the clock and a hurried kiss she rustled away at a rapid rate.

Miss Sherwin turned again to the mirror when she was alone. Dollie was right. She did not look her twenty-nine years. Indeed, the face that smiled back at her was very sweet in its bright serenity. The lips that parted over gleaming white teeth were full and rosy. And the large gray eyes, looking forth from under dark brows and lashes, had a beaming brilliance.

"Maurice won't see much change in me," she said as she put on her hat. She slipped on a wrap and took up her gloves. But suddenly she stood still, shaken by the cruel dread. Suppose he were not there! It was a long journey here from Australia. Accidents innumerable were occurring every week. What if he were the victim of one? What if he were ill and could not make the trip?

The one greatest dread of all she did not voice even to her inmost consciousness.

"How foolish you are, Aline Sherwin!" she said, with an impatient little toss of her head. "His last letter said he would meet you at the old trysting place on this day, the anniversary of our engagement there. Maurice would never break his word."

She walked at a brisk rate the many blocks which lay between her home and the park. The charming suburban pleasure ground was gorgeous in its autumnal robes of amber and crimson and living gold. There was a continual drifting of glowing leaves through the blue, hazy air. And everywhere children were making merry, running and laughing and playing games.

But when Alice Sherwin reached the great stone fountain where the leaping water no longer glittered her heart sank with sudden, sharp disappointment. There was no one there but a gray haired, spectacled man, who glanced up at her approach only to bend instantly again over the paper he was reading. She took out her watch and consulted it.

"My watch is fast! I am ten minutes too soon! How foolish of me to—to fear!" she said.

She walked up and down the graveled path near the fountain. To sit still was impossible. She watched the different avenues up which he might come. It was ten years since they had parted. Five minutes gone! At 3 he would be there, he had written—seven minutes!

And he need never have gone away. If it had not been for Mary's unexpected death she might have gone with him. But Aline had declared herself bound to take care of her sister's children.

Six months ago freedom had come to her. Dan was a man and prospering, Dollie was married, and Nell had gone to live with her. So Aline Sherwin wrote to her lover that she was waiting for him.

The clock in the tower clanged out the hour of 3.

She started, and her reticule fell to the ground. Three, and he was not here! Each clang of the bell had struck on her heart like a blow.

"You have dropped your bag!" The man on the bench picked it up and offered it to her, lifting his hat. "I'm afraid you are disappointed," he said pleasantly. "You were expecting some one?"

She hardly glanced at him. But she was in the mood for confidence, and his voice was sympathetic.

"Yes," she said and sat down. "A friend who has been long abroad was to have met me here this day, this hour, and he has not come."

"I've been a great traveler myself," the man said. "Where did your friend live abroad?"

"In Australia." Her eyes were still seeking an advancing figure along the paths that led to this fountain.

"I've been there. But of course it's a mighty extensive country, and the cities are populous."

"I suppose so," she assented abstractedly. Her heart was like lead within her. "It would be absurd to suppose you had known Maurice Farrar there."

"Let me see," he repeated musingly. "Yes, I did know a man of that name. What did your friend look like?"

"He was straight and handsome," she returned dreamily. "He had brown, beautiful eyes, a classic, clean shaven face and curling black hair."

"Oh, that isn't the man I know at all," he said positively. "The Farrar I know is rather stout and bearded and quite gray."

Miss Sherwin nodded indifferently. She glanced again appealingly at the clock in the tower. Fifteen minutes past 3! He was not coming.

"There is no use waiting," she said, rising. All the joyousness seemed to have left her. "Maurice would be here—if he were alive!"

How dreary the golden day had grown, how cold! And what a moan there was in the wind, a desolate cry that found its echo in her heart.

The man on the bench sprang erect, a straight, robust figure. He thrust his smoked glasses in his pocket, swept off his hat and held out eager arms.

"Aline!" he cried. "Maurice is here!"

For one wild, stunned, incredulous moment she stared at him. Then she took a faltering step forward. His arms closed around her as she sobbed out her gladness on his breast. Marked by exile and labor, prematurely gray, and yet the same the old sweet smile, the old loving eyes!

"It was no deliberate deception, dear. It was only when I saw you approaching that I remembered the glasses I must wear in strong sunshine and slipped them on. I cannot read with them on," he laughed, "but I bent over the paper just the same. My dearest own girl, will you forgive me? You have kept your girlish beauty. The fever that made my hair gray makes me look older than I am."

Her color had come back in a rose red tide. She smiled up at him, standing stalwart and dignified before her, and she cried to him: "You are handsomer than ever, Maurice! But even if you were really bent and crippled—yes, and blind you would be, as you've always been, the only man in the wide world for me!"

And now the leaves had a merry rustle and the wind a song of joy.

Pleasures of Trout Fishing.

Catching trout is not the only thing that makes fishing a mountain stream worth while. The early morning ride to the place where you are to commence your day's sport is in itself pleasant to a degree wholly missed by those who take their rides later in the day. During the early hours of the day the air is fresh and invigorating. Every leaf and spear of grass by the roadside sparkles with dew, and the forest is pungent with pleasant and health giving odors that are dispelled as the sun rises above the treetops and dries the moisture on leaf and twig. As you drive quietly along you may have the good fortune to see a deer browsing in a roadside clearing. He stands watching you for a moment or two, then turns quickly and with graceful leaps disappears among the trees. An old fox steps out into the road and trots boldly along ahead of you for some distance, but when he discovers that you are gaining on him he turns for an instant, shows his teeth with a snarl and then slinks away into the bushes. Farther along a partridge with her brood of chicks has also ventured out into the road, and when she, too, discovers that you are drawing uncomfortably near there is a great to do. With outspread wings and uttering the plaintive cry made by a mother partridge when she believes her young to be in danger, she hastily collects the members of her family and le

The Antalgica

Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Coughs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do you good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle by The Quimby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

ABOUT THAT PAVING.

Citizens Are Stirred Up Over Delay in Work.

WANT IT THIS YEAR OR NOT AT ALL.

Also Want Job Done by Contract. Plenty Of Time to Get It Done This Fall.

The announcement in the Journal last week that the brick paving on Main street in the Depot village, for which the voters appropriated $10,000 at the annual town meeting in March, was not likely to be laid before next spring, seems to have stirred up a veritable hornet's nest of protest and invective from all sections of the town. That the voters want the paving and want it now—or in the near future—is certain, and it is also certain that they are not at all backward about expressing their opinion in the matter. They fail to see why the work cannot be done before winter, and especially fail to see why the plans have not been so handled as to assure the installation of the paving before the advent of another muddy season like that of last spring, when everybody was disgusted and inconvenienced with the condition of the street and decided to make a better thoroughfare, and that on a permanent basis.

It is pointed out by those who speak freely and feel most critical in the matter, that when the appropriation was made last March it was with the understanding—though nothing to that effect was mentioned—that the work should be done this summer. New pipes were to be laid by the Palmer Water Company before the paving was put in, and the telephone company wished to lay a conduit for its wires. It was some little time before the water company got to work, but its changes have been completed for some time. The telephone company proved a laggard, but its work is now all completed. Apparently everything is now ready with the exception of the new rails for the street railway tracks. It has been stated that these would not be here until too late for the completion of the work this fall, but it is now understood that they will be on hand September 1st or soon after. If this is the cause of the holdup of the work, the critics ask why provision was not taken to see that there was no delay from this source. The plans of the engineer have been ready for a long time, but it was only a short time ago that an agreement was reached with the railway company regarding the size of the new rails, and a still shorter time since the measurements were taken by the representative of the steel company which is making the rails. The railway officials announced their willingness to make the improvements when the matter was first broached, and if they had not been their franchise compels them to do it. Certain it is that criticism is made of the delay in this part of the program. As to the claim that nothing can be done until the arrival of the rails, it is pointed out that the laying of them is the last operation but one in the program. Before they can be put in place a large amount of excavating must be done, the ground thoroughly rolled and a six-inch layer of concrete must be laid. There has been a suggestion also that in view of the recent digging up of the street the ground should be allowed to settle before the paving is put in, but with the six-inch layer of concrete over all there seems little likelihood that there can be much settling of a narrow trench underneath.

There is also manifest opposition to the proposed plan of doing the work other than by contract. It is claimed that any other plan will not only unnecessarily delay the work, but will be costly for the town. The suggestion that local labor will be employed is met with the question, "Where is it to be found?" There is not to-day in the town of Palmer any large number of idle men. Contractors on local jobs and at the epileptic hospital, where a large amount of new work is being done, are unable to secure the help they would like, even day laborers, and this condition is not likely to be improved for some time to come. The town some years ago passed a vote that all contracts over $500 should be advertised and not done by the town. The wording of the vote is unfortunate but there is no question of its meaning, and this has been recognized practically ever since by officials having charge of new work of that magnitude. It is urged that this is the proper course to pursue now, and that much better work and at a less price can be obtained by so doing. A contractor experienced in the work of brick paving would bring with him men skilled in that branch of work, who would know just what to do and would be pushed to the greatest amount of work by the contractor, who would be obliged to finish the work within the contract price.

The suggestion that there is not time in which to complete the work is not to be taken seriously, say those who have looked the matter up. It would not take the street railway people long to make the change of rails; after that is done experts have stated that the rest of the work can be done by a contractor in three week on a pinch, and that four weeks will be ample time. We do not get frozen ground—or anything beyond a slight freeze—until November, and that seems ample time in which to carry out the evident wishes of the voters—to have Main street paved before winter.

The feeling is so strong that it is frankly stated that if the work is not done this fall the vote will be rescinded at the next annual town meeting, many who voted for it last March saying that they will kill it next spring. This statement comes not alone from residents of the Depot village, but from every village in the town; all are obliged to make use of Main street when traveling via trolley, and all have become sick of the condition it has been in during the wet season of the year.

PRESENTED WITH CANE.

Festive Party Gathers and Oldest Citizen of Town Is Remembered.

A pleasant event took place in Hampden last Saturday, when about twenty of the older people, including Alanson N. Chaffee, the oldest man in town, gathered at the home of A. A. Jones, when the fine serviceable gold-headed cane, the gift of a Boston paper, was presented to Mr. Chaffee by Mortimer Pease, chairman of the board of selectmen. Mrs. O. A. Jones gave an address of welcome and Mrs William J. Sessions read an original poem written for the occasion by Lucy Chaffee Alden; then refreshments were served and Mr Chaffee's picture taken by Rev. C. B. Bliss.

Mr. Chaffee was born in South Wilbraham, now Hampden, Feb. 28, 1822, in the house near Burt's Mills, built over 90 years ago and occupied by some of the family until three months ago when it was sold to the Misses Wesson of Springfield. Mr. Chaffee at 16 years of age was apprenticed to William Hills to learn the mason's trade, which he followed for many years, the last five of which he was at the Monson state primary school, when he retired from active labor. Mr. Chaffee spent many years in Monson, where he served the town as selectman and overseer of the poor and in minor offices, and was a member of the Methodist church. Mr. Chaffee was twice married, his first wife being Hnldah A. C. Butler, and his second Elizabeth Fuller, who died ten years ago in Springfield, where they resided, after which he disposed of his property and returned to his native town, where he is cared for by his niece, as he has no children.

It is a singular coincidence that Mr. Bodurtha of Monson and Mr. Chaffee of Hampden should be the oldest men in the adjoining towns, as they were neighbors and schoolmates in their boyhood and have been life-long friends.

We bring to him who is Chief in years—
Our friend with the silver crown—
This staff a golden cone, the gift
Of the Boston Post to our town.

An eight of tens and a seven more
His anniversaries tell;
And Heaven may grant that he yet complete
His Century's measure well.

In his way of wit and wisdom still,
In his watch of men and things,
May care omnipotent keep in time
His harp of a thousand strings.

Who next will stand as our Chief in years,
In an eight or nine of tens,
We may not know, but there always waits
One oldest of citizens.

Entries for Fair Stake Race.

Among the races at the Palmer Fair in October will be a 2 19 pace stake race, for which there are twelve entries, the nominators and horses being as follows:

C. H. Redfield, New Haven, Ct.
"C. H. G.," br. g.
M. W. Delaney, Hartford, Ct.
"Red Sovereign," ch. g.
A. H. Drury, Athol, Mass.
"Roan Wilkes Jr."
W. T. Patten, Charlestown.
"Billy Patten," b. g.
V. M. Frost, Springfield.
"Kid Wilkes," ro. g.
"Lizzie Sims," h. m.
James R. Brown, Willimantic, Ct.
"Robert S."
W. H. Hall, South Willington, Ct.
"Ione," h. m.
"Mollie T.," h. m.
G. C. Flynt, Monson.
"My Favorite."
C. E. Pitman, Goshen, N. Y.
"Dawson Dillon," h. m.
"Lady Kate," h. m.

This should assure a fine race, as all the horses are speedy and doing finely. The stake races last year—there were two—were among the most interesting of the fair. The other speed classes for the fair have not been fully decided, but will be definitely settled soon. The committee is planning for a special race between three fast and well-known horses, which will be an unusually interesting event. The list of entries last fall were the best in the history of the society, as was the racing, but the indications point to still better sport this year.

HAMPDEN.

Rev. C. B. Bliss is enjoying a week's vacation.

Misses Mary and Lenora Twohig of Springfield are spending the month with their aunt, Mrs. Nora Delehanty.

WARREN.

Death of Horace P. Cole.

Horace P. Cole, 51, died suddenly Saturday morning as the result of an apoplectic shock. He was a native of Cornish, Me., going to West Warren when 17 years old. He early learned the meat cutting trade, which he followed until November, 1908, when he sustained a shock. He partly recovered and was out early Saturday morning for a walk, from which he was brought home, being found on West Main street leaning on a boundary wall, in an unconscious condition by F. A. Nutter. Dr. H. H. Moore was hastily summoned, but Mr. Cole only lived a few minutes. He leaves one brother, Charles E. Cole of Limington, Me., and one sister, Mrs. Malinda A. H. Hitchcock of Lynn.

Elmer Converse of Ocala, Fla., has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Homer A. Tidd of High street.

Bishop and Mrs. William Burt are guests of his sister, Mrs Mary Shuttleworth of Lombard street.

Miss Mary S. Hitchcock has gone to Sandwich, N. H., for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. George Weed.

John Sweeney of New York is spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sweeney of Liberty street.

Dr. Wallace Shuttleworth of Clinton and Miss Cora Van Voin of Gloversville, N. Y., have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Moody this week.

Mrs. Joseph J. Cunningham of Providence, R. I., is visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Corcoran of West Main street.

Rev. and Mrs. Thomas C. Richards and daughters, and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. Hathaway have returned from camping on the east shore of Lake Lashaway, East Brookfield.

The first annual reunion of the class of 1909 will be held in the town hall on the evening of September 3. The committee of arrangements is William Runyan, Harold Risley, Stanley W. Crosby, D. F. Barry, William S. Corrollo and William Shuttleworth.

REUNION AT BRIMFIELD.

Ninth Triennial Gathering Hitchcock Academy Alumni.

HELD THURSDAY. LARGE ATTENDANCE

Addresses, Dinner, and Old-Time "Interview" in Evening, With Music and Dancing.

The ninth triennial reunion of the alumni association of Hitchcock Free Academy in Brimfield was held in that place yesterday with a large attendance. There were addresses in the church in the afternoon and at 5 o'clock supper was served on the common in a large tent, after which there were informal after-dinner talks by different ones present and a general good time enjoyed. A movement was organized to increase the small nucleus of the alumni fund by systematic work of a committee consisting of Harry E Back, Hartley R. Walker, William W. McClench, G F. Keuney, G. M. Hitchcock, John Hibbard and Allen H. Warner.

Salem D. Charles of Boston, president of the association, presided at the exercises in the church, which opened at 2 o'clock. Music was furnished by the Philharmonic orchestra of Springfield. There was an invocation by Rev. Samuel Eaton of Brimfield, after which Mr. Charles made an address of welcome. He than introduced Dr. E. W. Norwood of

Dr. E. W. Norwood.

Spencer, president of the trustees and a former principal, whom Mr. Charles spoke of as the Mark Hopkins of the Hitchcock Free Academy. Dr. Norwood took for the subject of his address "The present opportunities of the Academy." He said that some years ago an agent of the state board of education had stated that the institution had no place in the educational system of the state. The agent was mistaken. Anyone familiar with the history of the school knows that this man could have had no knowledge of the situation. The school has given to a large district what it could not otherwise have had. The small towns in this section, such as Wales and Holland, could never have supported high schools. Their children have enjoyed the advantages of the school and many of them were present to-day to express their gratitude. In the larger towns and cities there are so many diversions that the value of school work is largely lost. This is not the case here.

An academy always has and does to-day occupy a unique position. It comes, to some extent, under the laws of the state, but it is no part of the public school system of the state. There is no political interference, which is felt to so large an extent in public schools. The purpose of the institution is to fit men and girls to meet well the conditions of life. The purpose is to build up character. Many boys and girls come from country homes and need to be led out of the narrow life which they have lived into the larger life before them. The largest liberty is given to teachers, and the principal is really in charge of the school. The trustees leave him to do his work, untrammeled, in his own way. This is not true of the public school. It is under the direction of a superintendent, or school board, and the principal often cannot do as he would like to do. Academies of this character are not in any sense reform schools. Many high schools are dominated by bad boys or girls, and the whole life of the school is affected by them. Efficiency is reduced. It is impossible to get rid of them. In an institution of this kind, if there is an objectionable pupil, out he goes. There is much work that an academy can do which a high school cannot do.

George F. Kenney, principal of the Academy, was the next speaker, and he talked on the needs of the Academy, explaining very fully what they were. He was followed by William W. McClench, president of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance company of Springfield, a former teacher of the Academy. He took for his subject "What the alumni owe to the Academy," and it was his suggestion that the time has come when the association ought to establish a fund which shall be a help to the institution.

After the remarks of Mr. McClench the audience arose and sang "Auld Lang Syne," and listened to a paper by Miss Clara P. Chase on "The Call of Alma Mater." She was followed by Judge H. R. Walker of Orange, who spoke of the loyalty of the alumni. Both were interesting. To conclude the program, the audience sang "America," and the business meeting was at once called to order. The records of the last meeting were approved and the treasurer's report was accepted. Officers were elected as follows: President, Harry E. Back; vice presidents, Reed H. Walker, George M. Hitchcock; secretary, Georgena J. Whitehouse; corresponding secretaries, Rebecca M. Lincoln and Lydia B. Hitchcock; treasurer, Charles S. Tarbell; executive committee, G. M. Hitchcock, E. P. Brown, Mrs. Martha E. Streeter, Miss M. Anna Tarbell, Miss Margaret E. Dunsmore; financial committee, Orus Parker, Miss Fannie Warren, C. B. Brown; historian, Miss Florence Chase; necrologist, Miss Julia Hitchcock.

At the close of the business meeting the company adjourned to a tent on the common, where a supper was served by Rohan of Ware. Mr. Charles presided at the table also, and kept things moving. There was interesting speaking and many entertaining reminiscences. In the evening the usual old-time "interview" was held in the town hall, with music and dancing.

Walter Lindquist has moved his family from the Keith house on Spring street to his farm which he recently purchased on the Brimfield road.

Flynt Company of Monson Have Contract For Palmer Structure.

The contract for the new bridge over the Quaboag river near the wire mill in Palmer has been awarded by the state highway commission to the William N. Flynt Granite Company of Monson. The structure is to take the place of the ancient and historic "Hastings" bridge, located in the towns of Palmer and Monson and cared for by the two towns jointly, and will be wholly within the town of Palmer. Both towns and the state will contribute toward the cost, after which it will be under the care of the state. On its completion the state road will be built across it to Main street in Palmer, doing away with a sharp curve and bad hill which have been dreaded by teamsters and autoists alike. Bids were asked for two styles of construction, stone arch and concrete, and the Flynt Company was the only one to submit bids for both styles. The contract was awarded for the stone structure. The price is $15,533. The bids for the concrete bridge were: William N. Flynt Granite Company of Monson, $14,866; P. A. Breglio Company of Springfield, $19,619; George W. Carr Company of Worcester, $18,781; R. F. Hudson of Melrose, $18,796; George M. Atkins Company of Palmer, $15,040.

Brutally Assaulted His Wife.

John E. Fitzgerald, a truckman, was brought before the district court Tuesday morning on a charge of an assault upon his wife, Celia, last Friday night. He pleaded guilty and was ordered bound over to the superior court at Northampton, which sits December 20, in the sum of $1000, and failing to recognize was committed to jail to await trial. The witnesses in the case were Mrs. Fitzgerald and Dr. M. W. Pearson, and in their testimony they told of a more serious assault Monday afternoon. It appeared that when a warrant for the arrest of Fitzgerald was given to Thomas H. Rennison, police officer, about 4 p. m. Monday, the latter located his man at the trolly express station on West street. The truckman ran away from the officer, who failed to pursue, and proceeded to his home on Williams street. There he unmercifully pounded his wife about the head, and she ran screaming into the street. A summons to the police station for help started the officer on his trail again. Fitzgerald was captured twice by Special Officer Henry N. Fisherdick, baggagemaster at the railroad station, the second time after a run past D. F. Howard's grain mill into some brush. He had nothing to say in defense in court, but said that when he found he was to be arrested for assault he thought it might as well be a good one, and admitted that the attack upon his wife was a deliberate one.

Blair—McNaney.

Miss Florence Blair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Blair of Maple street, and Philip F. McNaney of Mystic, Ct., were married Monday morning in All Saints' church by Rev. J. H. Murphy. Hugh McNaney, brother of the bride, was best man, and Miss Maud Blair, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride, followed by a reception. After a wedding trip of four weeks, the couple will make their home in Mystic, Ct.

Miss Ida Goodwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert F. Goodwin of Clinton street, and Cornelius Murphy Jr. were married last week by Rev. J. A. Riordan.

John Fairfield, who was injured by the cars in West Brookfield on the 3d, was able to leave the Springfield hospital last Friday and came home with his father, Rev. O. J. Fairfield. He will not be allowed to return to his studies in the high school until October 1.

The woolen mill of C. A. Stevens & Co. is closed for this week and next; work will be resumed on Tuesday, September 7.

Seriously Injured While Diving.

Harland Neff, the 13-years-old son of John H. Neff, superintendent of the George H. Gilbert Manufacturing company, was seriously injured last Friday at Buttonwood Beach, Providence, R. I., where the family are spending the summer. The boy injured his spine in diving and was paralyzed from the neck down. He underwent an operation at the hospital in Providence, and the clot of blood resting against the spine was removed and the fracture found, and the boy is now resting comfortably and will probably recover. The family will remain at the summer home until the boy has recovered sufficiently to be moved.

Mr. and Mrs. David Woolley and son Raymond are spending the week in Falmouth.

WAS IN BRITISH ARMY.

John J. Hopkins, Who Died Saturday, Had Served in India.

John J. Hopkins, 77, died at his home in Palmer Saturday evening from the effects of an apopoleptic shock. He was born in Roscommon, Ire., May 24, 1832, but came to this country 41 years ago and settled in Springfield. In 1870 he was married to Mary Collins, soon after which he removed to West Brimfield, coming to Palmer about 25 years ago, where for many years he was employed in the carpet mill. Mr. Hopkins served in the British army for 10 years, the greater part of the time being stationed in India. A good student, he possessed abundant information in regard to India and its people which was of great interest. He leaves besides a widow, five daughters, Mrs. J. W. Fitzgerald of Wiucheudou, Mrs. G. H. Haley of Ware, Mrs. Ernest Therieu of West Springfield, and Mrs. C. H. Burns and Miss May Hopkins of Palmer, also two sons, Edward H. of Hartford, Ct., and Michael J. of Palmer. He also leaves one sister, Mrs. Catherine MacGann of Meriden, Ct., and nine grandchildren. The funeral was held Tuesday morning in St. Thomas' church at 9.30 with a requiem high mass, Rev. F. A. Lane officiating. During the service John J. Donahue sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee." There were numerous floral offerings, among them being a set piece from the shopmates of the carpet mill. The bearers were Michael Curtin of New York, Michael Hart of Meriden, Ct., Patrick Connor of Worcester, Ernest Therien of West Springfield, George Haley of Ware and Charles Burns of Palmer. Burial was in St. Thomas' cemetery, Thorudike.

THEATER'S LAST WEEK.

Brinkley Girl to Return to Forest Lake For Rest of Season.

Next week will be the last of the season at the Forest Lake Theatre, and the attraction will be "The Briukley Girl," which was here a few weeks ago and proved so entertaining. There will be the usual afternoon and evening performances, with all the former songs, etc. The company will also remain over for the next Monday, Labor Day, after which the theatre will be closed until next season.

The program this week is sustaining the claims made for it as the best vaudeville bill of the season. The acts are all good and the crowds attending have been large. Wednesday evening every seat was filled and there were many standing. An unusually fine display of fireworks after the theatre performance was an added feature and attracted many.

THREE MEN TUMBLE.

Baseball.

PALMER TOWN LEAGUE.

Palmer 10, Monson 0.

The baseball artists from the south side of the Quaboag river came to Palmer last Saturday only to go back to Monson with a "white-wash" given them by their old rivals, Palmer. "Dick" Connor did the honors for Palmer on the slab, with only one hit and 13 strikeouts, while "Kid" McCormick did the receiving part. St. John's one-handed catch of a fly in the sixth, which constituted a double play, robbed Monson of its only chance to score. Rourke, who was in the box for Monson, was batted hard in the fifth, when he was taken out and replaced by Mydell, who was badly hit by the Palmer team. The score:

Baseball Briefs.

Wells is back with Thorndike again.

Drexler got a drive to center field that made the fans take notice.

"Pete" Brouillette is still stealing bases. Did he run? Ask the fans.

"Ben" Fitzpatrick made a star-catch of a Texas leaguer in the sixth.

Monson had 13 men fan the air Saturday, "Dick" Connor was the cause.

Faulkner tried to talk to the "Ump," hut Metzdorf wonldn't stand for it.

"Dick" Connor, who has been pitching for Palmer, has been signed by Bridgeport.

"Dick" Connor was there again last Saturday with a one-hit game. Nothing unusnal.

"Kid" McCormick, the new recruit for Palmer, showed his quality as a player Saturday.

Only two of Monson's men reached second in the game Saturday. It surely was "hard inck."

St. John's one-handed stah of a fly in right field robhed Monson of its only chance to score. It was a corker.

Umpire Metzdorf did a good job at the Palmer-Monson game, leaving no chance to kick on either side.

"Danny" Foley got a sacrifice in the 5th and McCormack went from first to third on it.

Belchertown was victorious over Enfield Saturday at Enfield by a score of 4 to 2.

Mayforth was credited with two stolen hases in Saturday's game. How did he get them?

A. E. Metzdorf has heen assigned to the Bondsville-Thorudike game, which means fair treatment to both sides.

"Zeke" Lamery did a slipping act on the grass in North Brookfield, which was the cause of Thorudike's defeat.

The Three Rivers team took a day off Saturday to attend the excursion to Boston, the association paying expenses.

"Tom" Clifford pitched a no-run-no-hit game and fanned 20 men at Bondsville against the Crescents of Holyoke.

The Hardwick Pond team defeated Gilbertville at Gilbertville in a ragged game Saturday by a score of 6 to 3.

Snow, the back-stop for the Three Rivers aggregation, was the star for Ware in the Ware-West Brookfield game Saturday.

"Grinnie" Brouilletto made the only error for Palmer Saturday, and that can he excused as the hit was a hard one to handle.

"Punk" Longtine was there with the stick Satnrday, getting three triples and a single off Pooray, the ex-Springfield pitcher.

With Wells on the firing line for Thorndike and Clifford, the slab artist for Bondsville, a hot contest is looked for to-morrow afternoon.

Monson nsed two pitchers in the game with Palmer last Satnrday. They will probably want another chance to get even with Palmer.

Colleton, the crack first sacker for Monson, didn't get a chance to hit the ball Saturday. "Dick's" beuders were too much for him.

A loyal crowd of fans from Monsou attended the Palmer-Monson game at the park Satnrday, only to see their team go down to defeat by their old-time rivals, the Palmers.

"Tommie" Clifford pitched a grand game last Saturday for Bondsville. Not a hit or a run was made off his delivery, and he also struck out 20 men. In the last 18 innings pitched by him only one hit has been made.

All roads lead to Boudsville to-morrow when Boudsville and Thorudike meet to battle for the peunant. The Bondsville managers have made all arraugements to handle the crowd and say "let everybody come." The game is called at 3.15

The Palmer Town League games to-morrow will he Thorndike at Bondsville with Wells and Mayforth the battery for Thorndike, and Clifford and Clifford for Bondsville, while Three Rivers will play Palmer at Palmer with Rogers and Snow the battery for Three Rivers and Sibley of Worcester Academy, Worcester, has her n secured to do the slah work for Palmer with "Kid" McCormick to receive him. Umpire Sheridan will officiate at the Palmer-Three Rivers game and Metzdorf will do the honors at the Bondsville-Thorndike game.

Never has Palmer and the villages been so enthused over baseball as during this season's series in the Palmer Town League, and it does seem as though everybody has gone baseball crazy. This is especially true of Bondsville and Thorndike. It has been announced that the stores in both of these villages will be closed to-morrow afternoon during the game, so as to allow everyone to go to Bondsville and witness the battle between the two leaders for the pennant. These two teams are tied for first place, each having won six and lost four games, and leaving but two games to play. Saturday's game is the first of these, and will be played in Bondsville. The last game will he played in Thorndike between the above two teams on Labor Day morning. Much depends on the outcome of to-morrow's game.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Cow Killed by Auto.

Max Alport, a Hebrew butcher who conducts a slaughter-house in East Wilbraham, lost a cow Monday evening. He was leading several cows behind his wagon toward East Wilbraham about 8 o'clock, when he met a large automobile When the automobile was passing the team, one of the cows jumped in front of the car and was instantly killed. The animal was evidently struck with considerable force by the two front wheels, both tires of which were put out of commission, which delayed the party for about two hours. The car, which was of a German make, contained a man and woman, besides the driver. The owner of the car offered to settle, offering Mr. Alport $45 for the loss, but the latter would accept nothing less than $60. The matter was finally left with Mr. Alport to settle with the company, who insured the machine against accidents, and a blank was filled ont to that affect.

Greene—Calkins.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mrs. W. S Greene near East Wilbraham Saturday evening, when her daughter, Ethel M., and Willis A. Calkins were married by Rev. Vernon H. Deming of Grace Union church. The ring service was used. Mrs. M. K. Chamberlin, sister of the groom, played the "Lohengrin" wedding march, and the flower girls were Phyllis Greene and Gertrude Wood, nieces of the bride. The bride wore a gown of white batiste, trimmed with lace, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. Many beautiful gifts were received. The bride has been a well-known nurse in and about Springfield and the groom has been engaged in the fur business for some time, and now has a position with Kakas Bros. of Boston. They will make their home in South Weymouth.

Blaze Interrupts Kitchen Dance.

Mr. and Mrs Eli Robidoux entertained about 30 of their friends at an old-fashioned kitchen dance at their home on Wilbraham mountain Saturday evening. Violin music was furnished by Mr. Robidoux and refreshments were served. Mr. Robidoux was presented with a sum of money by his friends. He has given up his blacksmithing in North Wilbraham and went Sunday to Canada, where he will open up another shop. He will move his family there later. The festivities were interrupted during the evening by a lively blaze, which started in a sofa, which probably caught from a lighted match which had been thrown down after lighting a cigarette. The blaze was quickly extinguished with hut little damage.

David Calahan has been spending a part of the week in Holyoke.

Miss Nellie Fuller is enjoying a week's vacation at Nantasket beach.

August Snider of Montreal, Canada, has been the gnest of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Kingsley.

Contractor E. N. Lyman has taken a position with Fred T. Ley & Co., and is working in Dalton.

The Maple street social clnb held a lawn party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hardy last evening.

Mr. Newell and Mrs. Nellie Blakeley of Southbridge visited friends in town Weduesday. Mrs. Blakely has been renewing old acquaintances after an absence of 40 years.

From every indication it would seem that Wilbraham is going to have an extra large crop of peaches this year. On accouut of the cold weather in the spring and the serions dronth, it looked rather duhions for a time, hut the fruit is large and plentiful. As yet picking has not started, bnt in abont a week the crop will begin to be gathered.

The Sunday school picnic of the First Congregational church was held at the residence of the superintendent, Ethelbert Bliss, Tuesday with a good attendance. A picnic dinner was enjoyed by 125. After dinner speeches were made by C. E. Peck, E. C. Howard, who is a high school teacher near Boston and son of Rev. M. S. Howard, who is away on his vacation, also F. A. Robbins. Sports and ball games were enjoyed and a pleasant day was passed.

Several houses have been visited during the week hy a snspicions looking character who told a sad story of a very sick wife, for whom he wanted to buy a chicken. One woman told him that under the circumstances she would sell him one, but when the chicken was brought forward, he said he had forgotten to bring his money, hut would take the chicken and return with the money in a short time. He was refused this privilege without the necessary funds to pay for the chicken, and he has not returned with the money since. He visited several places with the same story and insisted upon looking at the poultry.

Spur Track Laid.

The spur track for the accommodation of the trolley express was laid Saturday by the Springfield and Eastern street railway from the main line in front of Gage Brother's store to O. C. McCray's property, one building of which will be used as a station for the collection and delivery of goods. The spur track is the outcome of considerable disagreement between the road officials and the town. The road asked for an unlimited franchise and the selectmen refused, but after an interval of several months, during which the electric express was discontinued, an unlimited franchise was granted with the understanding that if everything was not satisfactory to both parties the railway commissioners should settle the differences. The road agreed to lay the spur track, establish a station, deliver goods from the cars only at places of mercantile business and to pave that part of the street where the spur track branched off from the main line. It is hoped that the electric express business may now be carried on without any dissatisfaction.

Elm Tree Spraying Beneficial.

The fact has been proven at last that spraying the elm trees this year did some good, although the time was far too late and the work was not thoroughly done. The trees in the yards of private individuals and the streets where no spraying was done are in a much worse condition than those which were sprayed. A prominent citizen stated at the spring town meeting that the elm beetles never killed a tree and only did them temporary harm, but they have certainly divested Mouson's shade trees from any vestige of beauty and usefulness so that the spraying is absolntely necessary. The katydids, which are nsually plentiful along the streets about this time of year, have not been heard this season and it is thought that the spraying killed these singing parasites as well as the beetles. Next year the citizens shonld demand an early thorough spraying of the town's elms unless they prefer to see the ranks of bare and sickly elms.

The prodnction comes to Monson from Brockton and is on a circnit of mnch larger towns than this, so that Monson people are fortnnate in being able to witness snch a first-class play. The tickets are on sale at Bradway's news rooms at 25, 35 and 50 cents as nsnal.

Up to Snuff.

A man in workman's garb one day called at a local dentist's, and the door was opened by a maid.

Workman—Is the gent in that draws teeth?

Servant—No, sir, but I expect he will be in shortly.

Workman (pausing on doorstep)—Does he give gas?

"Yes."

"What does he charge?"

"One dollar."

"What—one dollar! Do you mean to say, miss, a fellow's got to swallow over 1,000 feet of gas to have one tooth pulled out? No fear. I reckon I knows a bit about it, for I work down at the gas works myself. I'll go to another dentist and have it pulled out without gas."—Exchange.

Not Interested.

"I have called," said the book agent, "to see if I can interest you in a little work"—

"Young man," snapped the woman who answered the door, "just now I am interested in washing my dishes, dusting, cleaning up after the paperhanger, making six beds, polishing the hardwood floors, ironing my husband's shirts, getting two more meals today, darning nine pairs of stockings and stringing my sweet peas, and I might say that that's more work than you men ever thought of doing. No; you can't interest me in any more."—Detroit Free Press.

Getting an Early Start.

"Father, what do you wish me to be when I grow up?"

"The same as I am, my son—a lawyer."

"Then instead of wasting any more time on arithmetic, geography and such truck I'd better be getting at the hypothetical question, hadn't I?" —Judge.

MR. BAXTER'S ROBBER

By EDMUND COMPTON.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Mr. Benjamin Baxter never forgot that in college he had been the right (football) tackle of his time and had pulled stroke oar in the first university race in which his college had beaten after a long series of defeats. When, as a middle aged man with a bald head and somewhat pursy stomach, he visited Europe he maintained that if any sneak thief, robber or bandit could get away with him he was welcome to do so. This did not satisfy Mrs. Baxter, who dreaded that, in Italy especially, her husband might be kidnaped and held for a ransom.

Mr. Baxter had heard that one of the principal sights of Rome was a visit to the Coliseum by moonlight. One evening while in the Eternal City, when the queen of night was at the full, he proposed to his wife that they go and view the ruin thus illuminated. Mrs. Baxter refused. But he persisted.

Leaving his hotel on the Esqnaline hill, he strolled down a broad thoroughfare and soon stood on a height overlooking the eastern end of the enormous theater of the Caesars. He was surprised to note how immense it looked under the different light. The great pile, or the remaining two-thirds of it, built by slaves 1,900 years ago, where gladiators had fought and Christians had been torn to pieces by wild beasts, rose against the sky like the dark silhouette of a mountain. Going aronnd to the entrance, Mr. Baxter went within the walls and saw another sight—the moonlight throwing the upper portions of the interior into contrast with the shadowy lower parts. Many visitors were there, but as the hour was late they gradually departed.

Suddenly Mr. Baxter found himself alone. To go out through the main entrance was to increase the distance to his hotel. There were openings all aronnd the oval, but not lighted. Nevertheless the fearless American concluded to make his exit by one of them. It was very dark under the archway through which he passed, especially since that at that moment a cloud rolled over the moon. Suddenly he felt some one brush by him and a cloth fly against his face. He had heard that the members of the International League of Pickpockets were then working Rome and were used to covering their victims' faces with a newspaper when robbing them, and it flashed upon Mr. Baxter that he was suffering robbery. Clapping his hand to his pocket, he missed the portemonnaie he usually carried there. Throwing his arms aronnd the person who had passed him, he dragged him back into the arena. There he found that he held a priest.

"Ah, ha!" he cried. "So you thieves resort to the priestly dress to commit your depredations. But you can't fool an American. I'll get my money back or I'll break your back over one of these stone walls."

Then came a volley of words like an explosion of a Gatling gun, but since Mr. Baxter knew only two Italian words, "dove sta" (where is), they produced no effect upon him. He felt all over the man's body to find his portemonnaie, but found only 10 centessimi, or 2 cents. Then, after giving the fellow his opinion of him (in English), telling him that he had been very dexterous in passing his plunder to a dark figure whose footsteps were to be heard running away, Mr. Baxter remembered that, after all, there were only a few five lire bills in the portemonnaie. So he gave the thief a sound drubbing and a final kick and started out of the ruin quite pleased that he had lost none of his youthful strength or courage. The only fear he felt was at a possibility of having to appear in court against the robber. On arriving at his hotel he told his adventure to his wife.

"Why, my dear," said that lady, "I have your pocketbook locked in the trunk."

Thereupon Mrs. Baxter unlocked the trunk and took out the pocketbook.

"Well," said Baxter meditatively, "I downed him anyway."

There was a sharp rap at the door. Opening it, there stood two of the national police in swallowtail coats, white cord aiguillettes, cocked (Napoleon) hats and swords. Any one could see by the serious expression of their countenances that the dignity of the Italian realm had been offended. Behind them stood a delicate, intellectual looking priest, wiping scratches on his face and forehead with a bloody handkerchief.

Mr. Baxter, marching between the officers of the law, was taken to the police office, where, summoning his Italian vocabulary, he kept repeating: "Dove sta the Americano consulato?"

His plea was finally heard, and he was permitted to write a line to the consul, who came, but whose influence availed nothing but to secure for the American who had maltreated an inoffensive priest a fair trial. Baxter was locked up.

The next morning before the time arrived for calling the case the consul visited the priest who had been assailed, and who proved to be a man of influence. The matter was explained to the ecclesiastic, who listened attentively. When the consul had finished, the injured party said:

"Signore Baxter comes from a land where there are a great many devoted sons of the church. Whether your explanation is correct or not I do not know, but if the matter was a mistake I excuse it; if it was a wanton attack I forgive it."

A cab containing the consul and the priest soon after drove up to the law courts, and Mr. Baxter was released.

Awkward Compliment.

There is such a thing as being too persistently complimentary. A candid and well meaning professor who had witnessed the performance of a little play in a private house in which his hostess had taken the leading part met the lady as she came from behind the curtain.

"Madam," he said, rushing up to her, "you played excellently. That part fits you to perfection."

"Oh, no, professor," said the lady modestly. "A young and pretty woman is needed for that part."

"But, madam," persisted the professor, "you have positively proved the contrary!"—Pearson's Weekly.

In the Dark.

Uncle Joe—Yes, Teddy, it is quite possible that there are people in the moon.

Little Teddy—Well, what becomes of them when there isn't any moon?

Savage.

Caller—Sir, I am collecting for the poets' hospital. Will you contribute anything? Editor—With pleasure. Call tonight with the ambulance, and I will have some poets ready.—Judge.

PAINTING THE MEETING HOUSE.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

The village of Hicksville contained 800 inhabitants, and yet there was only one place to worship. In the earlier days the Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians had clubbed together, and as time went on the three denominations had agreed so well that no move had been made for the erection of another building.

From time immemorial it has been the privilege of the farmer's dog to accompany his master to church and take up his station on the front steps until time to go home again. The question as to whether this had made better dogs of them is not to be debated here. It is sufficient to say that on this particular Sabbath day there were seven dogs occupying seven different wagons and that when a lightning rod man's dog came along he was looked upon as an intruder and promptly attacked. Seven dogs pitching into one must soon confuse things. In this case after a moment it became a battle royal, and the racket stopped the sermon and was heard to the limits of the village. The worshipers came out of the church to see and to interfere and to take sides, and the affair broke up the services for the morning and left a good deal of acrimony floating around. Most of the blame was laid on the man of lightning rods, who was stopping in the town over Sunday. He repudiated it and had hot words and on Monday was arrested for using profane language and fined $7. Up to the moment he was fined he was defiant. Then he changed to humility, paid his fine and apologized all around.

There was no one in the town of Hicksville who really knew a lightning rod man's other side or who even suspected that he had a second side. If there had been, a note of warning would have been sounded when this man changed to humility. They accepted his attitude and his expressions, and some of them even shook hands with him and forgave him for having such a dog. He went away and was absent for three days and then returned to say that he felt like doing something for the church people to show that no hard feelings rankled in his soul. There was the old meeting house. It needed painting badly. Under its shadow his dog had raised a row and created temporary hard feelings and he would beg the privilege of paying for two fresh coats. The proposition fell like a thunderclap on the town. It beat the coming of a circus all hollow. All the church folks had to do, said the donor, was to get together and decide on the color and he would furnish the paints and the painters—simple as A B C.

A meeting of the church people was called for a certain night, and they were there to the last man and woman. All knew the issue, and all had come prepared. The question to be settled was one of color, and it was a dead easy one. The minister presided, as was eminently proper, and he arose to say that of course there could be but one color for a frame meeting house. That was white, to represent purity. The lightning rod man could be notified to have his painter on hand next day. Was there anything further before the meeting?

To the good man's surprise, there was. Deacon Tompkins arose to say that while art was in its infancy in this country a plain white meeting house did very well, but art had advanced. Meeting houses should also advance. Speaking for the Methodist contingent, his choice was chrome yellow for the body of the building, with dark brown for the steeple and the doors and window casings. He would move that those colors be adopted.

Deacon Williams arose to hope that no one would second the motion. Speaking for the Baptists, he would say that a pea green color for the body, with trimmings of darker green, would be more in harmony with the surrounding landscape and prevent strangers from taking the cider mill for the meeting house. He didn't advance pea green as symbolic of the Baptist faith alone, but of all faiths. It even took in the Adventists. He would move pea green as an amendment for chrome yellow. Deacon Jones said that he represented the Presbyterians in the congregation and that the Presbyterians had decided on lead color for the body of the building and dark blue for doors, casings and steeple. He would move his colors as an amendment to the last amendment and he hoped that no further time would be wasted over the matter.

But his hopes were disappointed. The lightning rod man was appealed to, but he replied that it was a question to be left entirely to the congregation.

It was left to them. Meeting after meeting was held, but no one gave way—the more meetings the more acrimony, the more acrimony the less neighborly feeling. When it had reached that stage, which it did in about four months, that not a Methodist would lend a Baptist his wheelbarrow and not a Baptist would borrow flatirons of a Presbyterian the good minister sent in his resignation, the meeting house was closed, and only last summer it was unroofed by a cyclone and left a wreck. The lightning rod man was about the only man that had nothing to say. He could afford to be silent.

A Philosopher's Fable.

Arthur Aull is responsible for this one:

"Folly, Genius and Common Sense once went walking and came to a stream. Genius, having his head in the clouds, naturally started to wade across, paying no attention to the depth. The waters soon went over his head, and he was drowned. Common Sense hunted for a safe way to get across, and finally he found a foot log. As he got out about the center of the stream the log swayed, and he fell into the water and sank to rise no more. Folly stopped at the bank of the stream to amuse himself by throwing pebbles into the water and watching the waves. He sat upon the moist, cold bank until he caught a cold which developed into pneumonia, of which he soon died. Moral.—It doesn't make much difference, after all, whether you are a genius, a sage or a fool. You'll get it sooner or later anyway." —Exchange.

Columbus' Oversight.

That was a wise schoolboy who when the master asked, "Why was it that his great discovery was not properly appreciated?" promptly replied, "It was because he didn't advertise, sir."

THE WOMAN WHO SUED

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

The Widow Colville of the village of Quincy had ever been known as demure and bashful. She was so as a wife, and she was so as a widow up to a certain date. One day three years after the loss of her husband she was going to the postoffice when she came across the village cooper and the village butcher engaged in a wrangle. The wrangle became a fight as she approached, and she was so frightened that she had to lean up against the fence and gasp for breath. The butcher brought an action against the cooper for assault and battery, and the widow was summoned as a witness. She took the oath and the stand, but that was all. She was so affected that she had to be removed from the courtroom.

A few days later Mrs. Colville was left a legacy of $5,000. Men, women and children rejoiced over it and congratulated her, but not for long, however. Within a month she developed an idiosyncrasy that soon surprised the whole county. She fell in love with the law—she who had never been a court of justice but once and then to be carried out in a fainting condition it was a thunderclap to the villagers to hear one day that she had sued Elder Johnson for trespass. For ten long years the elder had been in the habit of cutting across a corner of the Colville property on his way to and from the store. He was on good terms with the widow, and she had not warned him. She had simply applied for a summons and engaged a lawyer. The elder called to see her, summons in hand; but, while she was demure, she was also obstinate. She had long felt that she did not have her rights in law, and now she was bound to get them.

As the elder had not been warned personally and as there had been no notice to the public the widow's case was quashed. She was not a bit disappointed or cast down. She simply looked around for some one else to sue. In a couple of weeks she brought suit against a widower named Solomon Lee for breach of promise. Mr Lee lived at the other end of the village and was never in her house. On a certain occasion a year before the suit he was passing her place as she was trying to drive a strange hog out of the garden. The hog was an artful dodger, and the widower volunteered his services. He not only drove out the hog, according to the widow's testimony, but he patted her on the shoulder and observed that a little woman like her ought to have a husband like him to keep the garden clear of hogs.

In a breach of promise case there has got to be something more than a hog incident to nail the lid down. The widower denied the gentle words attributed to him, and no fond letters or other thrilling incidents were brought forward. The case was therefore dismissed. The widow seemed to revel in being called to the stand, and she paid the costs without losing her smile. Two weeks later came the turn of Deacon Tracy. He lived near the widow and had known her since her marriage. Wanting a hoe one day, he called to borrow hers. She happened to be out, and he took the hoe along. He hadn't returned it yet when a summons was served on him for trespass and unlawfully converting property to his own use. He hastened over to see the widow, but it was no use. She said she had come to just love the law and the suit must go on. It did go on, and the widow was nonsuited and had the costs to pay.

By this time the citizens of Quincy had begun to sit up and take notice. There were laws, and there was a widow. The query of whether she had had enough of it was soon answered. She hadn't. Half a dozen women had criticised her for bringing the suits, and so she brought half a dozen more. The local justice of the peace refused to issue the papers, but a justice over at Perry's Corners did. The six women asked forgiveness, and their husbands tried to fix things, but it was no go. The suits had to go on. They caused the defendants considerable trouble and anxiety, but when they came to trial the verdict was in their favor. They had criticised instead of scandalized. The widow, however, longed for more suits, and it wasn't long before fortune favored her.

She was buying some calico at the store when a clerk who was known for his humor expressed the hope that she would not sue him for breach of promise, as he was already engaged to three different widows and more coming. Next day she had him summoned for assault and battery. Under the law one can "assault and batter" with the tongue alone. Under the law undue levity or humiliating any person is a misdemeanor. The humorous clerk was haled into court and fined $5. The winning of that suit incited the widow's ambition. She sued the parents of children that stole her apples; she sued two farmers for throwing stones at her dog; she sued the cooper because her vinegar barrel leaked; she sued a woman for saying that her bonnet was ten years old; she sued the town for maintaining a mud puddle in front of the postoffice. As a matter of fact, she had twenty-one suits on hand at once, and as they came to trial she lost every one but that against the humorous clerk. The lawyers and the law got a good share of her money, and after two years had elapsed and there was no one else to sue she sold out and moved into another country, where, as she expressed it, things were lively and something going on all the time. Quincy was a pretty little town, but too sleepy.

An Independent Miller.

When Frederick built his famous palace of Sans Souci there happened to be a mill that greatly hampered him in the execution of his plans, and he asked the miller for how much he would sell it. The miller replied that for a long series of years his family had owned the mill, which had passed from father to son, and that he would not sell it for any price. The king used every solicitation, offered to build him a mill in a better place and pay him, besides, any sum he might demand, but the obstinate miller still persisted in his determination to preserve the inheritance of his ancestors.

Irritated at last by his conduct, the king sent for him and said in an angry tone:

"Why do you refuse to sell your mill notwithstanding all the advantages I have offered you?"

The miller repeated his reasons.

"Do you know," continued the king, "that I could take it without giving you a penny?"

"Yes," returned the miller calmly, "if it were not for the chamber of justice at Berlin."

The king was so flattered by this answer, which showed that he was incapable of an act of injustice, that he dismissed the miller without further entreaty and changed the plan of his garden.

Rose Colds From Paper Roses.

"A patient of mine is subject to rose colds," a doctor said. "She caught a bad rose cold last week from a bouquet of artificial roses. That often happens. It is supposed to show the mystic, psychological aspect of disease, but as a matter of fact it is just as natural to take a rose cold from paper roses as from the real kind. Why? Because the paper roses that bring on rose colds are always perfumed. It is the fad, you know, to perfume artificial flowers. The scent used is the essential oil of roses, and it is this oil in the natural flowers that causes rose colds."—New York Press.

A Keen Observer.

Ethel, aged three, had been to visit her cousins, two fun loving and romping boys. She had climbed upon her father's knee and was telling him of her visit. "Papa, every night John and George say their prayers they ask God to make them good boys," said she.

"That is nice," said papa.

Then, thinking soberly for a few minutes, she said, "He ain't done it yet."—Delineator.

Harry Royce of Springfield is spending his vacation in town and is making extensive improvements upon his cottage, Willeben, and upon his land. Mr. Royce intends to erect two or three more cottages very soon. Dr. H. G. Webber and family of Wilbraham will occupy Willeben next week.

A GREENLAND LEGEND

By MARK ANDERSON.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

That there have been great climatic changes in different parts of the earth is well known. But, though geologists can tell us that they have occurred, they do not tell us why. Some of them have possibly come to pass since man attained sufficient intelligence to hand down from generation to generation traditions concerning their origin. These traditions, arising when the human fancy was untrammeled by fact and when rude people spoke by natural symbols, are often very poetic. Here is one current among the Eskimos of Greenland accounting for a change they believe long ago took place depriving them of perpetual sunshine and substituting the dreary arctic night:

"Time was when the sun, which now hides himself beyond the southern ocean for many months in winter, circled always above the northern horizon. As it is now night for many months, it was then always day, for at midnight the sun still stood above the horizon. Then our mantle, instead of the white one it now is, was a perpetual green. Our people lived on luscious fruits that grew without culture and bathed in the tepid waves that danced lightly on the strand. In those days they knew only happiness.

"But one day when some were making merry under the green trees and others were sporting in the waves a canoe white as the snow amid which we now live was discovered far out at sea, now gently raised on the crest of a billow, now sinking out of sight, but slowly drifting toward the land.

"Awestruck, the people waited on the verge till the white canoe reached the sands, and there within it, infolded in a robe of ermine, lay a maiden whose skin was fair and whose hair fell over her shoulders like rivulets of sunshine. The chief stood where the canoe touched the beach and, stooping, took the maiden in his arms, carried her up to a grassy slope and asked:

"'What art thou, and whence cometh thou?

"'I am Delfa, the daughter of the Spirit of the Winds, and I come from his ice castle in the far north.'

"'And will you stay with us,' asked the chief, 'or will you, having gladdened our hearts by your coming, leave us to remember you as in a dream?'

"'I will not leave you. My home shall be with you forever.'

"Then was heard a far distant moaning in the north, rising as it approached till it became an awful roar. It was the voice of the Spirit of the Winds, and it commanded our people to return at once his daughter to her white home in the north. Terror stricken, the people flocked to their chief and besought him to give the maiden to her father. But the chief stood mute, pointing to his house, which was now a ruin. Entering there, they saw on a couch the maiden, her hands, white as marble, folded over her breast.

"Then an awe greater than that which had fallen on the people when the maiden first touched their land came to them, for they knew a great calamity was about to visit them. The King of the Winds looked down on the form of his daughter, now cold in death, and great was his wrath. The multitude knelt before him, supplicating him to spare them. But he heeded not their prayers. At his command his servant, the darkness, came and threw a black mantle over the land.

"And so, bereft of the light and warmth of the sun, the verdure whitened and died. The north wind blew snow from the clouds and the cold congealed the waters. The sun, whose track had been a golden circle in the north, went to the south and hid behind the ocean for many months. Then our ancestors, who had lived under the trees, fearing no frost, were obliged to build huts to protect them from the cold. The warm waves in which they had bathed became icy cold, then hardened. The people, bereft of the fruits of the earth exposed to the cold, died in great numbers. It was many months before the snow king relented sufficiently to permit the sun to show his face again and his warm breath to revive the frozen land even for a brief season.

"Since that period, every winter, the sun goes south and leaves us in darkness. The fruits which grew so plentifully for us have never flourished again. But the spirit that deprived us of them sent the white bear and the walrus, and we are obliged to hunt them in order to sustain ourselves with their meat and warm our bodies by burning their oil. The sun continues every winter to hide his face beneath the ocean and when he comes back in summer shines for so short a period that there is no time for the fruits of the earth to ripen."

Is this tradition based on some change in the plane in which the earth revolves, a new direction in the current of that mighty river we call the gulf stream, a shrinkage in the terrestrial crust, or is it an ebullition of that poetic constitution common among men when they first enter upon a civilized condition? Whether it is to be explained by the first or the second hypothesis, it is certainly a very beautiful conception. And it is to these conceptions of primitive people, groping in the unexplained universe, grasping for the truth, that the poet who interprets the world of romance is indebted. Without them he would have no song to sing.

Barrie and Kipling.

Mr. Barrie was one day at Waterloo station in a hurry to catch a train. He was hastening from the bookstall laden with papers, "a good many sixpenny ones among them," he dolefully relates, when, in rushing around a corner, he fell into the arms of Rudyard Kipling, equally in a tearing hurry. They turned on each other with scowling faces, then smiled in recognition and asked each other whither he went. Then Kipling, exclaiming, "Lucky beggar, you've got papers!" seized the bundle from Barrie, flung him some money and made off. "But you did not stoop to pick up his dirty halfpence, did you?" queried one of Mr. Barrie's hearers amusedly. "Didn't I, though?" returned Barrie, and added ruefully, "But he hadn't flung me half enough."—St. James' Gazette.

Shaving.

When asked whether Napoleon shaved himself Talleyrand replied: "Yes. One born to be a king has some one to shave him, but they who acquire kingdoms shave themselves." Dionysius, the tyrant of Syracuse, not daring to commit himself to a barber's hands, is said to have singed his own beard with glowing walnut shells.

Household Hints.

CHOCOLATE GLACE CAKE.

For a small loaf of cake cream one-quarter cup of butter and one cup of sugar together; sift one and one-half cups of flour and one and one-half level teaspoons of baking powder together and add to the sugar and butter alternately with six tablespoons, not mixing spoons, of milk. Fold in the whites of four eggs, beaten stiff and dry, and flavor with one-half teaspoon of almond or lemon flavoring. Bake in a sheet, frost and cut in squares.

Another good rule for a white cake, that may be used with the chocolate glace frosting, calls for two cups of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one cup of milk, two cups of flour, one cup of cornstarch sifted with four level teaspoons of baking powder, the whites of seven eggs beaten stiff and added last with one teaspoon of lemon flavoring.

For the frosting stir one-half cup of sugar and three tablespoons of water together in a small saucepan set over the fire until melted; let it boil five minutes without stirring. Cool until lukewarm, then add one-half teaspoon of vanilla; beat until white and thick. While beating melt one square, or ounce, of chocolate in a cup set over hot water, add to the frosting, rinse out the cup with one tablespoon of boiling water and add also. Stir until well mixed and pour over the cake.

Blamed the Planets.

In the middle of the fourteenth century in Paris a new ordinance enjoining the cleansing of the streets and the shutting up of swine was carefully neglected, as usual, and a terrible plague was the consequence. The faculty of medicine, called upon for a remedy by the king, sent to inform him after long discussion that the plague was the result of a hostile conjunction of the planets Mars and Jupiter.

The Cause of Drafts.

Why is it that windows and doors are frequently ill fitting? There is nothing wrong with the wood itself, nor with the workmanship, as a rule, nor with the fit, at the outset at least, but the whole trouble is due to the wood being unseasoned, or, rather, only partially seasoned, at the time it is made up.—Timber.

Told to Earn His Own Salary.

Commodore Vanderbilt discovered in James H. Rutter, then in the employ of the Erie railroad, a man he believed the freight department of the Central needed, says the Baltimore News. It is related that some time after he took charge of the Central's traffic office Rutter called on the commodore to submit a plan for improvement. When he had stated the case the president looked at him sharply and asked:

"Rutter, what does the New York Central pay you $15,000 a year for?"

The reply was, "For managing the freight traffic department."

And then the commodore said, "Well, you don't expect me to earn your salary for you, do you?"

Rutter went out and carried through his plan on his own judgment. The result was highly satisfactory. Rutter became president of the Central.

A WOMAN DUELIST.

By HAROLD OTIS.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Serane, fencing master at Paris, when dueling was not only more common but more serious there than now, prepared the way for the killing of many men by teaching his art to the Parisians. It was generally understood that a pupil of Serane was sure to kill his man. If his lessons were really so valuable it must have been partly owing to a special confidence given the pupil and a corresponding loss of nerve on the part of the opponent. At any rate, those whom Serane had taught usually had little trouble in settling their disputes without recourse to the foil.

One evening Serane was sauntering down the boulevard and on reaching the opera concluded to go in and attend the performance. One of the singers on the stage was a woman named Maupin. Though she was not singing an important part, Serane's gaze was constantly fixed upon her. Why one woman's personnel will appeal to one man when another woman is the chief attraction for other men is an insoluble problem. We only know that the fact exists. In Maupin, Serane saw that which appealed to him strongly. At the close of the performance he sent his card to her and received an invitation to call upon her behind the scenes.

"M. Serane," she said as soon as he appeared, "I deem myself fortunate in your desiring to make my acquaintance. You are well known to me by reputation as a splendid teacher of fencing, and I wish you to give me lessons."

Serane found the singer as fascinating in the greenroom as on the stage. She was young, fairly good looking, and about her was a certain abandon which when not too pronounced is attractive to men. Serane fell desperately in love with her, and she permitted him to love her in order that she might get out of him all the skill in fencing he was capable of imparting. She was an apt pupil and, taught by a lover became the most skillful fencer that had ever been turned out from his academy.

No sooner had Maupin acquired the art than she began to attract attention as a duelist. At first her affairs with the sword leaked out as mere rumors. One report was that a young nobleman who had been devoted to her had fallen by her hand; that, disguised in men's apparel, she had insulted him and killed him without his knowing of her identity. Again it was rumored that she had fought and killed another woman. That she was applying her skill in affairs of this kind there was no doubt, though some that were attributed to her had no foundation in fact.

She liked to have Serane with her both on account of his devotion and because his presence gave her additional eclat as a swordswoman. But he came to understand that she craved blood or the excitement of taking it, and he endeavored to dissuade her from her course.

One night Serane and Maupin were dancing at a students' ball in the Latin quarter when Maupin jostled the belle of the evening, and upon the girl's looking at her resentfully Maupin was rude to her. The insulted girl was dancing with an intimate friend of Serane, Gustav Grammont. Grammont, supported by two other men, ordered Maupin to leave the room. She said that she would do so provided they would go with her. They did so, and before morning she had killed them all.

Serane in this affair refused to support Maupin. Indeed, she was obliged to call on another man to act as her second. The day after she had killed Grammont and the others Serane received a note from her accusing him of cowardice in having deserted her in the hour of need and challenging him to mortal combat. Stung to the quick by her ingratitude, he sent a hasty reply accepting the challenge.

The man who had been a lover and had taught the object of his love to kill people, filled with a mad remorse, resolved to kill her, thus punishing her and stopping her career of bloodshed. They met in his academy, the doors of which had been bolted and the windows screened. Maupin stepped out on to the floor with as much composure as a mother would administer food to a babe. She looked at Serane with a stony stare and said:

"Serane's pupils always kill their opponents."

There can be no doubt but the woman said this to fill her antagonist with a superstitious dread that would take away his nerve. If it had any such effect. Serane gave no evidence of it. A revulsion of feeling had come over him. Had this not occurred, had he opposed Maupin as a lover, as she had presumed he would, there would have been no chance for him. As it was it was a fair fight between them.

But with Serane in full possession of his faculties there could not be a fair fight between them. As soon as Maupin saw that she had lost her power over him she knew that, if he chose, her punishment had come. The moment they crossed swords she saw in Serane's eyes not only a determination to kill her if he could, but a perfect confidence of being able to do so.

Singularly enough, this woman who had conquered men with men's weapons no sooner discovered that her womanly influence over the man who had furnished her with her power had ceased than every particle of her confidence deserted her. She gave her opponent a mute look of appeal. He answered it with a sword thrust to the heart.

A Question of Color.

The enormous difficulties of color terminology are illustrated by a customer's "exact statement of her requirements" in a large Deansgate establishment one day. "Something in blue taffeta silk, please. I don't want anything as dark as navy blue nor anything as light as Cambridge blue, but something darker than Eton blue and yet a little off from an electric blue and hardly a sky blue—more like a robin's egg blue and yet not quite so light, but not an indigo blue, but something like this tint; I think they call it morning glory blue, which is something like a turquoise blue and yet not quite so light as that and yet not so dark quite as this aquamarine blue nor so light as baby blue. Now, if you have anything in the shade I have described, please show it to me." The intelligent assistant unrolled a length, a cross between the blue devils and the deep sea, with the remark: "This is the shade of blue you require, madam. It is called 'London milk!'"—Dyer and Calico Printer.

"What is the old saying about a fool and his money?"

"Ah, yes. A fool and his money are soon discovered."

THE REBEL'S RUSE.

By EUNICE WINSOR.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

During the American Revolution a regiment of Continentals were placed in Westchester county to "observe" the British then occupying New York. Denton Woodworth, a bitter Tory, living near the patriot force, discovered that his daughter Evelyn and one of the captains, Elderkin, had fallen in love with each other. Woodworth was so horrified at his daughter marrying a rebel that he decided to leave his place in Westchester county and take his family to New York city. The evening before their departure Evelyn and Elderkin met clandestinely in a wood near the house, then and there plighted their troth and before parting arranged a method of correspondence. The next day the Woodworth family crossed the Harlem river, were admitted within the British lines and occupied their town house near what was then and is now Bowling Green.

It was not long after their settlement in their new quarters that Evelyn received a letter from an intimate friend of hers, living near her home in Westchester county. It had been sent to with a number of others under a flag of truce. Her father, thinking that the missive might contain some word from Elderkin, opened and read it before giving it to his daughter. It was written in a woman's hand and contained no mention whatever of the rebel captain.

Amelia Woodworth, a sister of the head of the family, was as bitter a Tory as her brother and as deeply interested in breaking up the love affair between her niece and the young rebel captain. The evening of the reception of the letter from beyond the lines, when Evelyn was in bed, Aunt Amelia concluded to do a little detective work. Going into Evelyn's room, she asked her if she would let her read the letter. Evelyn's heart stood still; but, outwardly retaining her equanimity, she told her aunt where to find it, and the old lady sat down by a candle to read it. After trying for a long while to discover some code in it she fell asleep. When she awoke the candle had burned down to the socket, the letter lay near the flame scorched, and across its face was the fragment of a sentence that had evidently been written in green ink—"That old cat, your Aunt Am—."

Indignation struggled with joy at the discovery for a time; then the old lady extinguished the candle and stole away with the letter. Evelyn was awake and saw what she did, but did not dare oppose her. Mr. Woodworth had gone out to Fraunce's tavern for a tipple and to learn if there was any news of the military situation. His sister waited patiently till he returned, then showed him the letter. To her surprise the green letters had disappeared.

Now, the old man loved his daughter, but did not get on with his sister. He looked the letter over carefully, then told Miss Woodworth that she might be in better business than in spying—that she had in her mind a belief that she would make a discovery and, suddenly awakening, had seen the writing only through her distorted imagination. Then he ordered her to take the letter back to Evelyn's room.

Evelyn knew that something had happened, but what she was not sure, since her aunt kept her own counsel. Evelyn dare not destroy the letter for fear of making matters worse. She left it in her writing desk, and a few days later, when the rain was pouring down and the air laden with moisture, the old woman, rummaging in the desk, came upon another surprise. There was the letter, and this time it was covered with pink letters. Indeed, she read a love letter written across the other from Captain Elderkin to her niece, in which he warned Evelyn to beware of "that old cat, your Aunt Amelia."

Taking the letter into her own room, she sat down before a warm fire on the hearth, laying it on a table beside her. She was rejoicing at the prospect of convincing her brother that she had been right after all. Then it occurred to her to copy the pink words lest they fade like the green ones. Turning to the letter, what was her surprise to find that they had already disappeared.

Defeated again, she replaced the letter where she had found it. Thinking to discover some means for bringing back the secret missive, she went there next day for it, but Evelyn had meanwhile concluded to burn it.

A month later another batch of letters was sent into the British lines and among them one for Evelyn from the same friend who had written her before. Unfortunately for the lovers, it fell into Miss Woodworth's hands. Meanwhile she had confided her secret to a friend, a professor in King's—the name was at that time changed to Columbia—college. The second letter she took to him. He heated it and moistened it with no effect. Then he tried the application of chemicals, and a solution of iodide of starch brought out another love letter, this time in blue.

Soon after this the British evacuated the city, and Captain Elderkin marched in with the patriots. Evelyn finally overcame her father's opposition and married her lover. Then the method of their correspondence was explained.

The first love letter was written with ink mixed with gum arabic and a chloride of cobalt, making pink letters, which disappeared when the ink dried and reappearing green under heat. It again disappeared under cold and became pink again when dampened. The second love letter was written in rice water, the ink of which, after being brought out, will disappear forever.

An Apt Answer.

The dangers associated with the fishing industry on the Newfoundland banks are many and grave. Foremost among them is that the dories may be upset while fishing, which involves almost inevitable loss of their occupants. Callous captains, secure themselves from the necessity of going, frequently order their men out when the weather does not warrant it, and disastrous are the results. One of these brutal skippers was aptly answered once by a bank man of whose courage or capacity there was no question.

"Out with you!" shouted the captain. "Hurry up there! It's a fishing day!"

"Oh, no, skipper!" replied the dory man. "It's too stormy today for a boat to fish."

"Nonsense, man!" rejoined the skipper. "If my old grandmother was here today she'd get her dory out."

"Then, skipper," said the man, "if her grandson will come out with me now I'll haul my trawl."

It is needless to say no dories were launched from that schooner on that date.—Philadelphia Ledger.

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R. F. D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

The Oriental Mind.

Frederic S. Isham, the author, told the following to illustrate the double dyed duplicity of the oriental mind. Mr. Isham was in Pekin. Passing the arch to the Baron von Kettler, supposed to be an arch of contrition for the foul assassination of that brave official, the novelist asked a Chinaman who spoke a little English:

"You know why this monument was erected, I suppose?"

"Oh, yes," was the ready reply in dialect, "to commemorate a triumphal deed, the death of a very powerful forelguer!"

"Commemorate! And is that" in amazement—"what the people generally think was the purpose of this monument?"

"Why not?" The Celestial's face was immovable, but a suggestion of sardonic humor seemed to flash from his slant eyes. "Chinese people much likee monument."

And, indeed, they seemed to bask in the shade of it with much satisfaction.

Venetian Coffee Houses.

The first cup of coffee was drunk in Europe at Venice toward the end of the sixteenth century. The Venetian chronicler Morosini in his records of the events in the year 1585 mentions the beverage called "cavee" drunk by the Turks and noted for its antisoporific qualities. In the year 1591 a Venetian doctor introduced the berries from Egypt, taught his countrymen how to crush them and brew the beverage, and the use of coffee soon became general—so much so, in fact, that Venice was full of coffee houses where the people idled away their days drinking the aromatic beverage. A peculiarity of the Venetian coffee houses was that their patrons did not pay for each cup of coffee they drank, but settled their bills for all the coffee consumed at the end of each year. The regular price of a cup of coffee was 5 soldi, about 2½ cents, and in some of the old cafes of Venice today the same price is still charged.—New York Sun.

The Antalgica

Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Coughs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do you good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle by The Quinby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

HUSBAND IS MISSING.

Left Two Weeks Ago to Attend Firemen's Muster.

NO TRACE OF ROBERT BARTON SINCE.

No Trouble in Family and No Known Reason for Disappearance. Leaves Wife and Children.

The family of Robert Barton,—consisting of a wife and two little girls, three and five years of age,—living at the wire mill, are willing to learn of the whereabouts of the husband and father, who has been missing since the morning of the 21st of August, since which time nothing has been heard from him. Mr. Barton was employed at the mill of the Wright Wire Company, and on the morning of Aug 21 left home to attend the firemen's muster at Indian Orchard. He said goodby to his wife and children as usual, and there was nothing in his manner to indicate that he was not to return. Since then no word has been received from him nor any trace of his whereabouts discovered. He had about $25 in money in his pockets. Barton is about five feet 11 inches in height, weighs about 160 pounds, dark hair, black eyes, dark complexion, small dark moustache. He was dressed in a dark mixed suit, black soft hat and black shoes. There was no trouble in the family and Mrs. Barton can give no reason for his continued absence.

FAIR ATTRACTIONS.

Sports for Boys and Girls; Stage Show; Reserved Seats Now Ready.

The sports committee of the Palmer Fair held a meeting this week and decided on the various events to be contested by the school pupils, as has been the custom in recent years. The relay race for high schools—one mile, a quarter for each of four men—will be held on Friday, as usual. The usual fine silk banner will be given the winning team, with solid gold medals suitably inscribed to each of the team members. On Saturday there will be the usual high school athletic meet, when ten events will be run off in charge of a man experienced in handling such contests. Gold and silver first and second prizes will be given in each event. The relay race for members of the ninth grades of the schools, which was inaugurated last year and proved so attractive to the youngsters, will be run again this year; it will be on Friday and will be 800 yards—200 yards for each of the four members of the team. A fine silk banner will be given the winning team, while the members will be presented with handsome sweaters. There will also be the usual program of contests for boys and girls below the high school grade, all of whom will be admitted free, as for some years past. Tickets of admission will be distributed later.

The amusement committee has arranged for a variety of acts on the stage, the best collection that has ever been offered at a fair in Palmer. While none of them are "thrillers" or wildly sensational, all are of a high order of merit. The list includes the Stubblefield trio, two comely young women and a man, who do some exceedingly clever high trapeze "stunts." There are seven acts in all, and others are in contemplation. Enough will be furnished to keep "something doing every minute." Applications for space on the Midway are already being received, and the prospects for a big variety there are unusually good. The society will adhere strictly to its policy of barring everything which has any flavor of gambling, and will allow nothing of the kind on the grounds.

Work on the grounds is rapidly going on, and much is being done to add to the comfort and safety of patrons. A large amount of new fence is being built, the bleachers changed to make them more comfortable and not obstruct holders of seats on the grand stand, and many other improvements and changes. The grand stand seats have been painted, marked into sections and numbered; reserved seats in the stand may be engaged at any time now at 50 cents each, the ticket entitling the holder to the seat for all day. Tickets may be procured of the secretary, L. E. Chandler.

SENATORIAL TIMBER.

Jonas Bemis of Charlton After Nomination in Worcester-Hampden District.

Jonas Bemis of Charlton is to contest the candidacy of Walter B. Mellen of Worcester for the Republican nomination for senator in the Worcester-Hampden district. Mr. Bemis was in Palmer last week looking over the ground and calling on some of his friends. The Republican town committee of Charlton has issued the following appeal in behalf of Mr. Bemis: To the Republican Voters of the Worcester-Hampden Senatorial District:

Mr Bemis was born in Charlton October 27, 1872 where he has always lived and where, since his early manhood, he has been successfully engaged in farming.

Mr Bemis attended the public schools of Charlton until the age of thirteen, after which he attended Brimfield Academy.

Mr. Bemis has served his town as Assessor, School Committeeman, and is at present Selectman of his town, also president of the Spencer Farmers and Mechanics' Association, and treasurer of the Boston Co-operative Milk Producers' Co.

Mr. Bemis is well known throughout the district by the position he took for the farmers against the contractors of Boston in the autumn of 1907

"WHITE" CHURCH'S SITE.

Exact Location of Congregational Building Erected in 1847.

It has been suggested that years hence the question of the exact location of the original "White" or Congregational church, which was burned on February 1, may arise, so it has been deemed best to have the matter put on record while all the facts are available.

The land for the church was given by Capt. Alonzo N. Dewey, and the corner stone was laid May 20, 1847. The site was at the easterly end of Church street where it intersects with Pleasant street, and was 18 feet easterly of the outside curb on Pleasant street and 70 feet northerly from the outside curb on School street, from which point it extended 48 feet northerly, parallel with Pleasant street and 70 feet easterly from said point on Pleasant street.

The building presented a gable front to Pleasant street, supported in part by two graceful Corinthian pillars, between which was the main entrance, with a smaller door on the outer side of each pillar. The gable end of the building was about 50 feet in height, surmounted by an octoganol tower from which sprang a single spire to the height of about 80 feet, forming a graceful complement to a well-proportioned building.

The vestry occupied the entire lower floor with the exception of the vestibule, and was lighted by four large windows on each side. The auditorium occupied the entire upper floor and was about 20 feet in height, lighted by four windows on each side and a double window fronting on the street. The choir occupied a slightly raised gallery over the two front stairways, in the rear of the audience. The pulpit and pews were plain and in the usual style of the time.

In 1870 the building was remodeled. The pillars were removed from the front and an extension 15 by 44 feet was built on the rear; this was two feet less in height than the main building, and gave a kitchen and a room for the primary department of the Sunday school on the lower floor, and on the upper floor a choir and organ loft in the rear of the pulpit, with two small anterooms and a rear stair connection between the vestry and upper floor. The old choir gallery was removed and the walls and ceiling were tastefully frescoed. A few years later the unsightly vestry was remodeled so as to form two parlors, a room for the library and a storeroom, and leaving a pleasant and commodious room for prayer and conference meetings. In 1907 the old windows were removed from the auditorium and replaced by memorial windows of stained glass of beautiful design at a cost of about $1100, paid for by individuals in grateful memory of departed members of their families. Of course the belfry was furnished with a bell, and in 1876 a pipe organ was placed in the organ loft. O. P. ALLEN.

INJUNCTION ISSUED.

Monson Woman Enjoined From Transferring Stocks in Her Possession.

A temporary injunction was issued by Judge Henry A. King of the superior court in Springfield yesterday, restraining Mary L. Coburn of Monson from transferring stocks in the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the Pullman Company and the General Electric Company that she may own, and also restraining those corporations from transferring said stocks on their books, awaiting the outcome of a bill in equity filed by the Ware National Bank, in which Mary L. Coburn and the three corporations named are the defendants. It is stated in the bill of complaint that M. L. Coburn made a promissory note payable to the Ware National Bank for $5350, and that amount is due the bank, with interest at 6 per cent from March 25, 1909. It is further claimed that M. L. Coburn indorsed another note, made by W. E. T. Fitz, payable to the Ware bank, for $425, and that the defendant Coburn accordingly owes the bank $425, with interest from April 29, 1909. The bank has brought suit against the defendant Coburn in an action of law, and the suit is now pending in superior court. It is stated that the defendant Coburn has not sufficient attachable property to be taken in execution in the suit at law, and the bank accordingly prays that the shares in the three corporations be reached in an action in equity, to be applied to the defendant's indebtedness to the plaintiff's bank. The injunction issued by Judge King also restrains the defendant corporations from paying dividends or interest now accrued or accruing on the shares to the defendant Coburn or to any one else.

The William N. Flynt Granite Company of Monson, which has the contract for the new bridge over the Quaboag river near the wire mill, has begun work.

BOY IS DISCHARGED.

Found Not Guilty of Setting Fire to Park Fence.

WITNESSES THOUGHT HE WAS THERE

But Evidently Case of Mistaken Identity, Boy and Parents Tell Convincing Story.

Charles E. Johnson Jr., a 13-years-old boy living at Blanchardville, was before the district court Tuesday morning on a charge of having been responsible for the fire which burned about 100 feet of the agricultural park fence on the morning of Sunday, August 22

Frank I. Brown, who lives directly opposite the spot where the fire started, testified to sitting on his piazza the morning of the fire and seeing the Johnson boy come from the direction of his home until he put his foot through the hole in the fence under the bleachers, where the fire started. His attention was distracted for a moment, and when he glanced back the boy was not to be seen, although there was a clear view for several hundred feet in the direction the boy had been going. Edward G. Braman, who lives next to Mr. Brown, testified to seeing the boy ahead of him as he went to his home about 1.45 in the afternoon; the boy went about as far as the lower end of the grand stand and stopped; about five minutes after Braman went in the house he was notified that the fence was on fire, and in running past the park gate for assistance saw the boy come out. This was all the evidence tending to connect the lad with the blaze.

On his part the boy stated that he had gone on his bicycle to the railroad station about 11 o'clock to meet a cousin who was coming from the West; he did not find him and returned home; his father sent him to the station again and he started a little before 1 o'clock, going on foot; on his way back he found the fence on fire and was stopped and questioned by Assistant Engineer Fuller of the fire department. He denied having been in the park at any time Sunday. A postal from the cousin announcing his intended arrival in Palmer was put in evidence, and the boy's father and mother testified as he did regarding his movements about the house. The lad told a straightforward story with no evidence of attempting to hide anything, and appeared frank and honest.

Judge Kenefick held that, while there was no question of the opportunity of young Johnson to start the fire, nothing had been shown that he had the exclusive opportunity; the park had been open and there have been many boys in and about the place. He accordingly discharged the lad.

HIGHWAY CENSUS.

Number of Wagons and Automobiles Passing Over Them in One Week.

Sumner Blodgett, who has charge of the repair of state highways in this section and had charge of the vehicle census last week, reports some interesting figures. The count was taken at three points covering four sections of road; at the Cooley Crossing on the Warren road count was kept of those passing on the main line and also those passing on the Brimfield road; there was a count at the creamery on the Monson road and one on the Springfield road just west of the station at North Wilbraham. Wagons and automobiles only were counted; there was no tally on motorcycles or bicycles or men with wheelbarrows. The largest count was at North Wilbraham, where 364 wagons and 1439 autos passed within the week; on the Monson road there were 457 wagons and 201 autos; at the Cooley Crossing 396 wagons and 1018 autos were counted on the main line, while on the Brimfield section there were 175 wagons and 111 autos. Mr. Blodgett thinks that if the count had been made during the first week in August the record on the main lines would have been at least 50 per cent greater. The state roads under his care are all in pretty good condition, a little gravel now and then being all that has been necessary so far. The big cars traveling at high speed suck up the loose fine surfacing of the roads and the wind blows it away. Traveling autoists tell Mr. Blodgett that Massachusetts has the finest roads of any state on this side New Jersey, but that New York roads closely approach Sherman's definition of war.

BIG DAY FOR GRANGES.

Rally Day to be Held at Charlton Saturday, October 2.

What promises to be one of the most noteworthy Grange events of the year in Massachusetts will be a great Rally Day at Charlton on Saturday, October 2, with sessions morning and afternoon. In this rousing gathering all the subordinate Granges will unite that are included in these Pomona districts: Worcester East, Quaboag, Borough, Worcester and Norfolk, Worcester Central, and Worcester Southwest, which will mean a great number of Granges represented, and probably at least 500 patrons.

A fine program will be arranged for both sessions, and the special attraction of the afternoon will be the presence of and address by National Master N. J. Bachelder, ex-Governor of New Hampshire. First-class music, papers, readings, and other addresses will complete one of the most attractive Grange days ever held in Worcester county. Already the members of the order are enthusiastically discussing the coming event and preparing to attend in large numbers.

Charlton Old Home Day.

The thirteenth annual Old Home Day of Charlton will be held at Charlton Center next Monday. The program begins Sunday at 3 in the afternoon with exercises in Memorial Hall; on Monday there will be a varied program, including band concerts, family reunions, illustrated lectures, old-fashioned dances, etc.

WILBRAHAM.

The public schools will reopen Tuesday.

Earl M. Milliken of Cambridge was the guest of friends in town Monday.

Mrs. G. A. Downey occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church Sunday in the absence of the pastor.

Adelbert Corwin has returned from a two-weeks' vacation and has resumed his duties as carrier on route No. 2.

Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Howard, who have been guests of their father, Rev. M. S. Howard, have returned to their home in Amherst.

Mrs. Sarah Adams Coe and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Moore, who have been spending a few weeks at the Adams Homestead, have returned to their home in Amsterdam, N. Y.

CONNECTICUT FAIR.

Many Fine Attractions to be Shown at Hartford Next Week.

Preparations for the great Connecticut Fair, which will open its second season at Charter Oak Park in Hartford on Labor Day to run for a week following, are now practically complete and need only the minute of opening to set them off. For a whole year—ever since the close of the last fair—the manager, Walter J. Snyder, with his corps of department heads, has been busy planning, arranging and executing the details which were to make the second fair a far larger exposition than its predecessor.

"The largest in New England" is a phrase which can be applied with perfect honesty to almost every department of the fair. The cattle show at the Connecticut Fair will have over 600 head of cattle in the four dairy breeds: Jersey, Guernsey, Ayreshire and Holstein. From the north, east, south and west are coming the finest stock to make up this total which will be, by all odds, the largest herd of its kind ever seen in New England. The poultry show will also be the largest ever seen in New England in connection with a fair, over 3000 birds of every variety which will be shown in their native state as far as possible, the land fowl being seen in grounds built like a country estate, while the water fowl will be shown in a pretty little artificial lake.

The cat show will be larger than the annual cat show in New York; the display of vegetables—including entries from almost every state along the Atlantic seaboard—will again be the largest ever seen in New England. Apples from Maine, market produce from Long Island, fruit from Maryland, Delaware and the orchards of New York will be seen in this gigantic exposition of fruit and vegetables.

In the industrial show for women over 5000 articles have been entered. In the bee and honey exhibit will be not only entries from the finest apiaries in the East, but the demonstrations of the making of honey and its preparation for the market.

Of the exhibit of sheep and swine it can only be said the now oft-repeated phrase,—the largest in New England, over 1000 head being represented by this department.

In addition to all those shows will be the more exciting features—the horse racing, the exhibit of blooded animals in the horse show and all the popular amusements such as automobile acts and the wild west show. The Grand Circuit trotting and pacing races of the Connecticut fair will be much better this year than last, which is saying a great deal. Still more exciting to some minds are the running of thoroughbred races with their rush of hoofs and the flashing colors of their whipping jockeys, which this season are promised to be the fastest held outside of the New York tracks.

In purely amusement features there will be shows of the highest class which money can bring, the Greggs in their somersault act. "Dare-Devil-Dash" is another one of the hair-raising features; a man shoots down an incline on a bicycle, leaves his machine in mid air, turns a double somersault and plunges into a tank of water. The flying Dordens will also be seen in one of the most daring trapeze acts ever exhibited, while greatest of all will be Kemp's Wild West Show.

WALES.

Miss Flora Clark of Franklin is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. A. A. Hubbard.

James T. Patterson of Lawrence has been spending a few days with friends in town.

Rev. J. C. Harding of Three Rivers supplied the pulpit of the Baptist church last Sunday.

Frank Taylor of New Haven and his son and daughter are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. E Needham.

Mrs. William B. Whittemore entertained the Baptist Ladies' Aid Society at her home on East Hill in Monson on Wednesday. There were about twenty present.

Henry C. Needham lost one of his valuable pair of driving horses this week. The horse broke its leg in the stable. Dr. Pugh of Southbridge was summoned, but it seemed best to kill the horse.

The body of John P. Hogarth of Holyoke was brought here for burial last Saturday. Mr. Hogarth was born in Yorkshire, England, 41 years ago, and came to this country about 20 years ago. He was employed in the mills of this town until about five years ago when he went to Holyoke. During the past year he has been suffering from tuberculosis and other ailments. He spent the month of July and most of August with friends in this town, returning to his home just a week previous to his death. He leaves a mother and one brother, George Hogarth.

HAMPDEN.

Mrs. Ellen Gilligan of Rochdale is the guest of relatives here.

A number from here attended the Chaffee reunion at Forest Park Wednesday.

Zina Harris has moved into the tenement lately vacated by Julius Gottsche.

William R. Sessions of Springfield was the guest of his son, William J. Sessions, Sunday.

Mrs. Shute and son have returned from Clayton, Ill., where they have been visiting.

Mrs. Lydia Sessions of Clinton, Ct., has been the guest at the home of W. J. Sessions.

Mrs. Lydia Woodworth of Bridgeport, Ct., is the guest of her cousin, Miss Harriet Sessions.

Mrs. Elsie Parkes has returned to her home in Dayton, O., after a visit with Mrs. Frank Moore.

The report of the condition of Mrs. Lyman Smith, who is ill in Springfield, is very unfavorable.

Herbert W. Hicks of Springfield and Miss Edith Cook of Hartford are guests at the home of Thomas Ingham.

Rev. C. B. Bliss is taking a vacation, a part of which he is spending in New York. He will occupy his pulpit next Sunday.

Miss F. Louise Stockton has returned to Morgantown, West Virginia, where she is supervisor of music and drawing in the public schools.

Rev. James W. Casey of St. Joseph's church, Worcester, and Matthias Casey of Somerville have been recent guests of their father, Matthias Casey.

The following teachers have been appointed for the town schools: No. 1, advanced, Emma F. Griffin; No. 1, primary, Ada G. Green; No. 2, advanced, Alice N. May; No. 2, primary, Jessie M. Lowe; No. 3, Edith C. Johnson; No. 4, Jennie M. Horr.

Mrs. William J. Sessions entertained 16 of her "young" friends last week and their aggregate ages came nearly to 1200 years. It was a very pleasant gathering, some of the participants not having met for many years, and after an hour or two spent socially, a bountiful tea was served on the lawn.

Court Palmer, F. of A., will meet next Tuesday evening.

PALMER NEWS.

LAST SHOW AT LAKE.

Three Shows Monday, Which Will Be The Last For This Season.

"The Brinkley Girl" is the attraction at the Forest Lake Theatre this week, and will remain over until next Monday, when the last performances of the season will be given in the theatre at 2 and 4 in the afternoon and 8.15 in the evening. During the week "Dare Devil Couture" has been giving free open-air performances on the unicycle, and does some very clever feats. There will be the usual attractions at the Lake next Monday, Labor Day, with dancing afternoon and evening.

The season has proved a very satisfactory one at the Lake, and the management feels gratefni to the public for the cordial way in which the various companies playing there have been received by the public. The outdoor amusement business is a hazardous one in many respects, and requires the management of a trained man; such a one is Mr. J. W. Gorman, who has furnished the attractions for the past two years. These have been of a higher order than formerly, and their increased excellence bas brougbt a corresponding increase in attendance; it has been impossible to get seats at times. Mr. Gorman hopes to cater to the peopie of this section another season, and they will be sure to give him and his attractions a hearty welcome. Mr. Gorman's representative at the Lake this year has been Mr. Sanford Wailin, a man of wide experience in matters theatrical, who has ahiy seconded the efforts of his superior to piease the amusement seekers, and for whom everyhody has a pleasant word.

IS WILLING TO RUN.

Monson Man Might be Induced to be Legislative Candidate.

It is quite likeiy that, before the Republicans hold their convention to select a candidate in the first representative district, there will be no dearth of material from which to make selection. With the withdrawal of Dr. Robert V. Sawin of Brimfield, who was supposed to he the logical candidate, there was a scarcity of names for a time, but that of Clarence B. Brown of Brimfield was bronght forward. He stood alone for a time, but now another possible candidate has been brought forward. He is Samuel Closson of Monson, well known in his own and the towns of the district as an earnest advocate of the best kind of roads and fearlessly outspoken in his convictions. Mr. Closson's name has been mentioned in connection with the representative nomination, and it is understood he is willing to make the running if he should be selected. Should he be elected Mr. Closson proposes to work for an investigation of the patent medicine business in Massachusetts with a view to taxing it, believing that the state should receive at least a million dollars a year income from this course.

Pomona Grange Meeting.

Springfield Pomona Grange held a meeting in Masonic hall Wednesday, with abont 60 in attendance. The district comprises the granges in Chicopee, East Longmeadow, Granby, Springfield, Ludlow, Palmer, West Springfield, Wilbraham and Suffield, Ct., representives being present from each of these.

Worthy Master F. M. Graves of Granby presided and the literary program was in charge of Mrs. George S. Wood of East Longmeadow. It was voted at the business meeting to hoid the 15th anniversary exercises at the October meeting with Wilbraham Grange; that all past masters and past lecturers are to assist in the carrying out of the program. A committee of three, W. O. Parmenter, C. B. Bennett and E. J. Streeter, was appointed to draft a set of resolntions on the death of Dudley C. Perkins, a member of the Pomona and a past master of North Brookfield and Palmer Granges, these resolntions being nnanimonsly adopted. It was also voted to send a letter of sympatby to Mrs. J. H. Baldwin of Chicopee, whose father died snddenly at her home Wednesday.

After the business meeting, the lectnrer gave a report of a tonr through the West, which she had recently taken. The snbject for discussion at the morning session was "In what ways are the present game and trespass laws of Massachusetts deficient?" Among those who took part in the discussion were J. T. Geer of Three Rivers, C. B. Benuett of Ludlow, W. O. Parmenter of Springfield, E. J. Streeter, G. D. Hntchinson and Mrs. Walter Green. Dinner was served at 12 30 by the members of Palmer Grange, and the afternoon session opened at 2. Resolntions were passed, thanking Palmer grange for their hospitality. A mnsical program was given, in which Miss Pearl E. Woods of East Longmeadow, G. C. Keep of Mouson, Stephen Clark, F. L. Jones, J. T. Geer and Walter and Ernest Carpenter took part. There were also readings by Ernest Carpenter, F. E. Davis and Rnth Backns. The subject of the afternoon was "Shall agriculture be taught in onr pnblic schools?" E. E. Chapman of Lndiow opened the question, and he was followed by D. L. Bodfish, O. P. Allen and Lee T. Grey. The session closed at 4 15.

Elite Moving Picture Palace.

The season at the Elite moving picture palac will open this evening, when these pictnres will be shown: "Before and After," "The Antomatic Monkey," "How They Propose," "The Child's Prayer," "Professor Fix Fixed," "The Empty Sleeve," and "He Conldn't Dance But He Learned;" the songs will be, "Dear Old Dear," and "Tiperary." The same pictures and songs will be given to-morrow evening. Beginning next week the Elite will go on its regular winter schednle, whicb will be four evenings a week—Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday—with Satnrday matinee, except that there will be no performance next Monday evening. Tuesday and Thursday evenings have always been light, and the managers have decided to cnt ont those performances for a time at least. Some important changes bave been made dnring the summer, one of them being the rearrangement of the cnrtain so that it can be removed instantly if for any reason the stage is wanted for other than picture uses.

Converse House Changes Hands.

The management of the Converse Hotel passed Wednesday morning into the hands of John B. Dawson, who will be the landlord in the fnture, he having bonght the bnsiness and farnishings of D. F. Dillon, the administrator of the estate of E R Pierce, the former landlord. Mr. Dawson is a native of Palmer and has lived practically all of his life here; he has been associated with the late Mr. Pierce in business for a nnmber of years and is well known in Palmer and vicinity.

Boy Loses Toe.

Henry Crosby, employed as a teamster by E. A. Bnck & Co., is minns one toe as a result of getting it canght in the gearing of a gasoline engine yesterday. The engine is used for pnmping oil into the large tanks at the plant near the Boston and Albany freight honse, and in working it Crosby got bis foot in the gearing, crnshing one toe so badly that it was necessary to ampntate it. Dr. S. B. Carsley attended him.

Horse Races at Palmer Fair.

The committee on speed classes for the Palmer Fair have arranged a program which they are sure will attract a large field of horses and insure good racing for those who love that sport. In addition to the 2.19 pace stake, in which an even dozen horses are entered, there will be five other races, the full program being as follows:

Friday, October 8.

2.26 pace 2 30 trot,	Purse $200
2.15 pace 2.18 trot,	200
2.19 pace stake,	500
Saturday, October 9.
2.20 pace 2 24 trot,	200
2.27 trot,	200
Free for all, trot or pace,	200

This will give three fine races each day. The Palmer track and fair have gained much in reputation in the last few years, and the large list of entries last year will undoubtedly be exceeded next month, as requests for entry blanks and stall accommodations have been coming in for some time; one owner is to bring a string of four fast horses.

That North Main Street Sewer.

Notices have been posted announncing a hearing to be held at the Point of Rocks on Thursday of next week relative to a location of the North Main street sewer across land of the Ware River railroad leased by the New York Central. The outlet of the sewer — or at least one of them —will cross land of the railroad company, and it was supposed that there would be no opposition, but the road's officials have declined to grant permission or to make a contract as formerly with the town. It is not nnderstood that there is opposition to the sewer on the part of the railroad, but that, instead of granting permission for such or similar purposes, a rule has been established to decline all such propositions, at all points along the line. Under the conditions there must then be a layont and public hearing, and a procednre exactly the same as where a new highway is laid out and the land for it taken.

Health Inspector Appointed.

Gov. Draper on Wednesday appointed Dr. James V. W. Boyd of Springfield state inspector of health for the 14th district, the position being made vacant by the recent resignation of Dr. Emerson of Springfield. The appointment was a disappointment to the many friends in this vicinity of Dr. Samuel O. Miller of Three Rivers, whose friends were urging his fitness for the position and were hopeful that he might be selected for the place. That he was favorably considered is shown by the fact that his was one of the three names from which the final selection was made. Dr. Miller has had a wide experience in the crowded conditions surrounding mill tenement life, and if there is any place where health regulations receive a severe test, that is one.

Corner Stone Laying To-morrow.

The formal exercises at the laying of the corner stone for the new building of the Congregational church will be held to-morrow, Saturday, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The order of service will be as follows: Scriptnre lesson, Rev. Frank W. Gibbs of St. Paul's church; hymn by the congregation, "How Firm a Foundation;" statement and depositing the box, Rev. Frank S. Brewer, pastor; prayer, Rev. Charles W. Williams of the Baptist church; children's "Builder's Hymn," Junior department of the Sunday school; address, Rev. George S. Rollins D. D., of Hope Congregational church, Springfield; hymn by the congregation, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord;" benediction.

Excursion to New York.

The Central Vermont railroad announces an autumn excursion at low rates to New York, the fare for the round trip being only $3 from Palmer? Excnrsionists will leave Palmer on the 6 45 p m. train Wednesday, September 15, arriving in New York via New London and the steamer "City of Lowell," the next morning early. Ticket holders may leave New York at any time up to and including September 22, arriving at home on the 23d. Staterooms on the steamer may be secnred in advance of W. J. Phillips, ticket agent, New London, who will reserve them in the order of application.

Services at St. Paul's church will be resnmed next Snnday.

Most of the stores in this village will close all day next Monday, Labor Day.

This is the month with an R in its name, and the oyster season has opened again.

A regular meeting of the Veteran Firemen will be heid next Wednesday evening, when officers will be nominated.

The millinery store of Mrs. M. S. Langewald will be closed the first of next week while she is attending the openings.

There was a hnrdy-gnrdy party at Forest Lake last evening, with music for dancing furnished by an instrnment from Worcester.

Rev. F. S. Brewer of the Congregational church will be one of the speakers at the Old Home Week celebration in Charlton next Monday.

Undenominational services will be held every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. O. C. Marcy on the corner of Wainut and Pleasant streets.

Francis B. Barton, a graduate of the Palmer high school, and for the past two years a teacher in Concord, is to sail the 23d for Paris, where he will further fit himself for the teaching of French.

The temperature took a sudden drop Monday, and the night was as cold as is nsually fonnd a month later. Frost is reported from nnmerons sections, especially to the east, corn in Brimfield being sbarply nipped.

Rev. F. S. Brewer of the Congregational church will supply the pulpit of the church in Warren next Sunday for Rev. T. C. Richards, who is in a Worcester hospital after a serious operation. Mr. Richards is well known in Palmer.

With the closing of the theatre season at Forest Lake next Monday will come a change in the rnnning time of the electric cars on the Ware line. The half hour car in the afternoon will be discontinued, and the cars will leave at 15 minutes past the hour only.

Calvin W. Johnson of Palmer won two heats in the 2 30 trot at the Oxford fair yesterday with "Electric," taking the second and third beats in 2 28 and 2 26¾. The race will be finished this afternoon. In the first, fonrth and fifth heats he finished 4th, 5th and 2d.

W. W. Converse has had his house on Park street covered with a new roofing, the material being ashestos shingles, which are fire and water proof and are said to wear a long time, being practically indestrnctible. The work was done by Fenton & Ferry.

Sumner Blodgett has brought to the Jonrnal office a bunch of nnusually fine asters of various hues. The blooms are of fine color and large size, some of them measnring 3½ inches across. Mr. Blodgett says "they are the finest in town," and that is easily believable.

Miss Margaret McCoy of Dorchester, a former teacher in the pnblic schools here, and Michael R. Sullivan of Bondsville were married in Dorchester Tnesday by Rev. F. Holloran. After a wedding trip they will live in Bondsville, where the groom recently bought out the store of O. A. Parent.

Inquests were heid in the district conrt this morning on the deaths of Howard I. Moses, found dead in the yard of the Boston and Albany railroad east of the village of Palmer on the morning of July 21, and on the death of Richard Besont, who was killed by the cars in North Wilbraham June 19

The first attraction of the season at the opera house will be next Wednesday evening, when Joseph King's version of "East Lynne" will be presented. The piece is an old one but one of the best and always attracts a generous and sympathetic audience. Tickets are on sale at the Bay State Drug Store.

The services of the Baptist church, in the Advent chapel Snnday will be: Prayer meeting at 10.15 a. m.; worship and sermon at 10 45, subject, "A Vision and a Reality;" Bible school at 12; Y. P. S. C. E. at 6; evening praise service and sermon at 7, when Bro. George H Damon will preach. All are cordially invited.

James Cullen of Springfield and Mrs. Julia Abare of Lowell were married in Lowell Wednesday by Rev. E Willette, brother of the bride Mr. and Mrs. Cullen both formerly lived in Palmer and are well known here. After a wedding trip they will reside in Springfield, where Mr Cullen has a position as engineer.

Tax Collector Hawkes gives notice that he will be at the counting room in Bondsville on Friday, the 17th, from 1 to 3 p. m. to receive taxes; at Thorndike on the same day from 4 to 5 30 in the afternoon; at Three Rivers on Saturday, the 18th, from 8 45 to 10.15 p. m., and on Saturday, the 25th, from 8 45 to 10 15; at the selectmen's room in Palmer on Friday, October 1, from 2 to 6 p. m.

The car which leaves Palmer for Bondsville at 11.15 p. m. struck the wagon of a Polish baker from the villages when in the vicinity of B switch abont 11 o'clock last Friday evening. The driver had left the team standing and the horse had wandered on to the track. The wagon was slightly damaged and the horse cut but not seriously injnred. The fender of the car was broken off and the brake rod bent. No blame is attached to the crew of the car.

The services of the Congregational church will be held next Sunday in the afternoon. Sunday school at 2 o'clock; preaching service at 3, subject of the sermon, "Tested." The communion service will also be observed. The usual song service and Christian Endeavor prayer meeting will be held at 7 o'clock. All are cordially invited to attend these services. Owing to the repairs being made in the main auditorium of St. Paul's building, all services will be heid in the vestry.

The schools of the town will begin their fall term on Tuesday of next week. There will be some new teachers, but the full schedule is not yet complete as some of the vacancies are yet to be filled; the committee will hold a meeting to-morrow evening, when, among other matters, will be decided the question of opening the Mason district school. While the addition to the high school building is not yet completed, it is expected that the old part will be ready for occnpancy next Tuesday.

The public and parochial schools will open next Tnesday. Nathan R. Smith, principal of the high school, and Mrs Smith have retnrned from a vacation in Maine and Superintendent G. W. Cox and Mrs. Cox have returned from Nova Scotia, where they have spent the snmmer.

John Desforges, 64, died last Friday morning at his home on Aspen street after a long illness. He was a native of Canada, but had lived in Ware for many years. He leaves a widow, four sons, John, Telles, Adelard and Henry, and four daughters, Mrs. Frank Lavalette, and three younger unmarried, all the children living in Ware He also leaves three brothers, Louis in Canada, Telles in Lowell and Henry in South Manchester, Ct., and two sisters, Mrs. Daniel Leclair of Northampton and Mrs. Alphonse Nareau of Ware. The funeral was held Monday morning at 8 in Mount Carmel church.

Peter Filip was arrested Tnesday afternoon on a charge of larceny from the Otis Company of cotton fabric for making plush underwear and of unfinished cotton underwear. The arrest followed the seizure of the fabric from Filip's home on Water street. Filip has worked for the Otis Company for 16 years and always bore a good reputation. He had certain work to do dnring the noon honr each day, which would have given him an opportunity to take the material, hut none was ever missed. The proceedings Tuesday were the result of information from an ontside source. In the district court Wednesday morning Filip pleaded not guilty to the charge of larceny. Chief of Police Manrice Fitzgerald told of serving a search warrant on Tnesday at the honse of Filip on Water street and produced the property seized, which was identified by Frank H. N. Gates, an overseer of the company, as fabric manufactured in his department of the cotton mill. Filip had said when arrested that he had taken the pieces for the pnrpose of cleaning floors with them. Mr. Gates testified that most of the pieces found were far too large and too valuable for snch nse, and said the nnderwear cut from the fabric was not excelled in quality hy any in the world. James E. Clark, a snperintendent of the company, declared that no snch pieces were ever sold or given to Filip or conld be, a certain concern having the exclusive sale of all made by the company of one kind exhibited. Frank Bryda, a tailor, told of Filip bringing some of the fabric to him to be made into garments, and although Filip testified in his own behalf declaring that he was innocent he was fonnd gnilty. A jail sentence was considered, but as Filip has four small children dependent npon him, and had never been arrested before the court imposed instead the maximum fine of $15, which was paid by a sister of the defendant. The fabric, some five pounds in all, was ordered restored to the Otis Company. John H. Schoonmaker appeared for the commonwealth.

CARD—We wish to extend onr sincere thanks to all those who were so kind during our recent bereavement.

Baseball.

PALMER TOWN LEAGUE.

Three Rivers 14, Palmer 3.

The game played Saturday on the driving park was won by Three Rivers by a score of 14 to 3. The game was the punkiest and most disconraging game of baseball that has ever been played in this town. Errors and poor base running were the principal faults for Palmer, while the hitting of the Three Rivers team was the only thing that kept the fans interested, they getting 15 hits for a total of 26 bases. Umpire Sheridan was off on some of the decisions he rendered. The score:

Baseball Briefs.

"Zeke" Lamery got another hit Saturday.

"Kid" McCormack caught a good game for the Metropolitans Saturday.

Mayforth added two more stolen bases to his list Saturday. He will be surprising the fans.

Graham's throw to the plate from center field that caught Drexler made the fans wake up a little.

All crowd records were broken last Saturday at Bondsville, there being a few over a 1000 present.

"Archie" Rogers was there with the stick again Saturday, getting four hits for a total of nine bases.

"Gibel" Sullivan of the Ponies is still stinging the ball, getting four hits in four times at bat Saturday.

"Grinnie" Brouillette played the star game for the Metropolitans, getting 12 chances and accepting 10.

Umpire Metzdorf did a good job at the Ponies-Indian game Saturday, there not being a kick dnring the whole game.

"Dave" Belisle's misjndgment of a fly ball Satnrday was the cause of the Indians getting three runs in the eighth inning.

"Ted" Longtine got three two-baggers at Bondsville Satnrday, which was responsible for some of Thorndike's runs.

"Sam" Cole was credited with only one hit Satnrday, but it was a good one, going over the center fieid fence for four sacks.

The Poules will try their luck again next Monday forenoon at Thorndike against the Indians, and a hard-fought contest is assured.

The Whittall Carpet Company baseball team of Worcester will play the Whittalls of Palmer on the driving park Saturday, September 11. Each team has won one game; this being the rnbber a hot game can be expected.

Palmer will go to North Brookfield to play the strong team of that place tomorrow, leaving here on the 1 07 train. The team will be strengthened for the occasion with "Mike" Grandfield and "Gene" O'Leary for a battery.

The Tri Streamers have strnck their gait now, having won the last five games. If the Ponies win against the Indians Monday and the Metropolitans fail to make good at Three Rivers in the afternoon they will have a good chance for first place.

The Palmer Town League games Monday, Labor Day, will be Bondsville at Thorndike in the morning at 10 o'clock, with Clifford and Clifford battery for Bondsville and Wells and Mayforth for Thorndike. Palmer will go to Three Rivers in the afternoon, where they will meet the team of that place; Rogers and Snow will be the battery for Three Rivers, while Grandfield or Connor and Lesry will do the honors for Palmer.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. Annie Marshall is seriously ill with neuralgia of the heart.

Miss Hazel Warner of Springfield has been the guest of her sunt, Mrs. B. B. Green in East Wilbraham.

Dr. William Rice Newhall, a former principal of Wesleysn Academy, will preach in Grace Union church Sunday morning.

Monson News.

Night Police Needed.

Since the resignation of Night Police Officer Murray, which occurred about two weeks ago, the town has been without night police service, with the exception of three nights a week, when there has been an officer on duty until midnight. Officer Murray was to have a month's time in which he could return and resume his duties as police officer again, if he so desired. He was well liked both by the public and by the town officials, and the position should be held open for him, but it is the opinion of the public and more especially of the business men that a temporary officer be appointed to be on duty every night until the position can be filled permanently either by the return of Officer Murray or the appointment of a new man. Money was appropriated at the town meeting last spring for this purpose, and if the public want police protection they should have it.

Death of Mrs. Olive L. Gray.

Mrs. Olive L. Gray, 59, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Clark on North Main street Wednesday morning about 6 o'clock. She had been in good health, but was stricken with heart disease and died before a physician could be called. She was born in Maine, but had lived in the West until three years ago, when she came East, and lived with her sister in Danvers. About six months ago she came to Monson and had since made her home with her daughter. One sister, Mrs. Mugridge of Danvers, and one daughter, Mrs. John Clark, are all that survive her. The funeral was held this afternoon at 2.30, Rev. G. A. Andrews officiating. Burial was in No. 1 cemetery.

Attempt to Burglarize Store.

The store of A. R. Brown & Co. on Main street was broken into some time early Saturday morning. An attempt to enter was made by breaking the glass in the door, but the door is boxed up and barred inside, so they were unable to enter this way. The glass in the window was then broken, but access could not be gained this way, as the window is securely boxed in. The burglars then evidently became discouraged and did no further damage. The contents of the window were somewhat disturbed but nothing was taken. No clue as to the identity of the parties could be obtained.

LOVE AND DEAFNESS.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Fergus MacAlister, a Scotch Presbyterian minister, having lost the power of speaking distinctly, became a burden on his congregation. In order to get rid of him they suggested that he go to a more salubrious climate and build up another church. There were many English speaking tourists in southern Italy, and the pastor was packed off to Naples, where, instead of succeeding in establishing a church, he supported himself and his family by entertaining said tourists in what is called in Europe a pension, in America a boarding house.

There came to Mr. MacAlister's pension an American party consisting of Mr. Blobson, an old gentleman deaf as a post; Mrs. Harker, a widow, deaf as Mr. Blobson, and Alice Harker, her daughter, aged twenty-five, a confirmed globe trotter. Miss Harker was especially anxious that her mother, whom she found it inconvenient to drag about with her, should in some way be soothed. The Harkers had met Mr. Blobson in Paris, and they had all traveled together to Naples. On the way Miss Harker had conceived the idea of marrying her mother to Mr. Blobson, though how the two were to get on together, both suffering from the same physical defect, she did not consider.

The beginning of the party's stay with the MacAllsters was not auspicious. Mr MacAlister at dinner, after his guests had been seated, bent his head and began to speak in a low tone.

"What's that?" asked Blobson.

The host paused, somewhat disconcerted, then, without noticing the interruption, began again.

"Speak louder. I'm hard of hearing," persisted Blobson.

The Scotchman raised his head and spoke as loud as his impaired voice would admit. But it was no use. Blobson drowned his words with his demands for louder speech.

"Ye irreverent mon!" MacAlister exclaimed angrily. "I'm saying grace."

It seemed as though all the deaf tourists in Europe were destined to meet at MacAlister's boarding house.

Sir Douglas McCracken, born deaf and dumb, an old friend of the dominie, was expected to visit Naples and during his stay was to be a member of the household. Alice Harker, who was used to talking with her mother by the finger sign language, was asked to assist in entertaining him. One morning on coming in from sightseeing she was told that Sir Douglas had arrived. Entering the drawing room, she saw a man with a young face and a bald head reading a guidebook. Seeing a pretty girl, he rose deferentially. She addressed him in the sign language, and he replied in kind.

Now, it happened that this meeting involved a case of love at first sight. For an hour the two plied their fingers in mutual entertainment, and Miss Harker began to think how singular it would be if she succeeded in marrying her mother to the deaf Mr. Blobson and she herself should marry the deaf and dumb Sir Douglas. Presently the dominie came in with a man as old as himself and introduced him as the real, original and only Sir Douglas McCracken.

"And this gentleman?" Alice asked, pointing to the man she had been conversing with.

"He's Sir Douglas' son, Angus."

"And I've been talking to the young lady," said Angus, "supposing her to be a deaf mute."

There's nothing like sightseeing excursions for lovemaking. Angus McCracken and Alice Harker walked together on the hills overlooking Naples and its picturesque bay, sailed to the island of Capri, spooned in its celebrated blue grotto and drove from Sorrento over the most beautiful drive in the world to Amalfi. Proposals often come at opportune moments, and in this case the declaration was made while the two were looking down into the crater of Vesuvius. However, Alice was ready for it, and while giving her reply she was meditating upon a plan to bring about the union of her mother with Mr. Blobson.

She told Angus McCracken that while her mother was on her hands she could not marry, but she hoped to make a match for the old lady, after which she would be pleased to become his wife. Angus, realizing that his happiness depended on the success of the scheme, forthwith devoted himself to Mr. Blobson, sounding all the while Mrs. Harker's praises and suggesting what a fine thing it would be for him if he could secure her for a wife. Blobson was finally convinced and told Angus that he would propose. Angus communicated the news to Alice. Alice in turn confided it to her mother.

Angus McCracken and Alice Harker, although they had plighted their troth coughing up the fumes of a volcano, considered that a romantic situation would be most effective in closing the matter between the elder lovers. The party were at Sorrento at the time. On a road winding up the cliff a short distance from their hotel is a house of entertainment with a square open cupola overlooking the enticing bay and surrounding mountains. The youngsters drove their elders there one moonlight evening and pushed them up into the cupola, Angus giving the old man the tip that he had better make his proposal then and there. When the couple descended Alice drew her mother away and asked her if the proposal had been made.

"I suppose so," said the old lady, "but I couldn't hear what he said."

Mr. Blobson told Angus that he had "told his story." Angus told Alice, Alice told her mother, and the affair was settled.

Not Built That Way.

For the first time the old lady was about to make a railway journey, and when she arrived at the station she did not know what to do.

"Young man," she said to a porter, who looked about as old as Methuselah, "can you tell me where I can get my ticket?"

"Why, mum," he replied, "you get it at the boking office through the pigeonhole."

Being very stout, she looked at the hole in amazement, and then she burst out in a rage:

"Go away with you, you old idiot! How can I get through there? I ain't no blessed pigeon!"—London Answers.

An Arrangement Approved.

"So they have reduced the number of trains that stop at your station?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Crosslots. "There are only two a day at present—one to take us to town in the morning and one to bring us back at night."

"It must be a great disappointment."

"Not at all. When we get a servant now she's obliged to stay at least one day."—Exchange.

ONLY ONE "BEST"

Palmer People Give Credit Where Credit Is Due.

People of Palmer who suffer with sick kidneys and bad backs want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon. The best is Doan's Kidney Pills, a medicine for the kidneys only, made from pure roots and herbs, and the only one that is backed by cures in Palmer. Here's Palmer testimony:

Mrs. C. J. O'Leary, living at 63 Park Street, Palmer, Mass., says: "My husband is forced to do a great deal of heavy work in his occupation and this together with exposure to the weather often brings on an aching through his back and across the kidney regions. When these attacks are at their height, it is difficult for him to lift anything and when he attempts to straighten, severe pains pass through his loins. Doan's Kidney Pills removed the lameness and pains from his back when suffering in this way, and have always proven very satisfactory. He says Doan's Kidney Pills is the best remedy of the kind he ever used."

THORNDIKE.

Death of Daniel Crowley.

Daniel Crowley, an old and highly respected citizen, died last Friday afternoon at his home in Thorndike, after a brief illness. Mr. Crowley was born in County Kerry, Ireland, in 1821 and came to Thorndike in 1851, where he had made his home most of the time since. He was married in 1855 to Joanna O'Connor of Thorndike, who, with his five daughters, Mrs. Katherine O'Connor of Winchester, N. Household Hints.

MACARONI TIMBALE.

Put two qnarts of boiling water into a kettle with one level teaspoon of salt. Select some unbroken lengths of macaroni and put one end in the kettle. As it softens coil the macaroni round and cook uncovered for thirty minutes or until it will cut when pressed by the tines of a fork against the side of the kettle. Drain in a colander and pour cold water through to rinse off the starch; lay on a clean cloth to absorb the moisture. Butter a mould generously and line it with the long pieces of macaroni. Begin at the lower edge of the mould and coil the macaroni round, pressing it against the buttered side, which will hold it in place. Sprinkle the bottom of the mould with fine crumbs.

Make a filling of one cup of milk, two cups of bread crumbs softened in milk and sifted through a wire strainer, one level tablespoon of flour, four level tablespoons of Parmesan cheese and one-quarter level teaspoon of salt. Fill the mould and set in a pan a little larger and filled with hot water. Bake thirty minutes.

Make a tomato sauce with two cnps of strained tomato, two level tablespoons each of flour and butter, one-half level teaspoon of salt, five drops of onion juice and a dash of pepper.

Turn the timbale onto a plate and surround with the sauce.

BRISBAIN'S LESSON.

By HARRISON SMITH.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

A young gentleman in a neat traveling suit alighted from a stagecoach in a frontier town. His baggage was handed down from the "boot," and he entered the office and bar of the tavern. Taking out his gold watch, he glanced at the time, then went out on the porch and looked about as though expecting some one. Not seeing what he wanted, he returned to the barroom, took a cigar out of a case, lighted it, tilted a chair up against the wall and sat down and smoked.

On one side of the bar stood the landlord, on the other a red faced, stubble bearded man in a flannel shirt and a revolver slung to his hip. From a back room came the occasional sound of "Keno!" indicating that a game was in progress.

"Tenderfoot!" remarked the stubble bearded man.

"Reckon," replied the landlord.

"Wonder what he's goin' to do in them fine clothes out yere?"

At that moment a man who may be similarly described as the one at the bar, except for two revolvers instead of one, each a foot long, staggered out of the gambling room and was about to walk up to the bar for a drink when he caught sight of the stranger. He stopped short and ran his eye from the golf cap at the top of the picture down to a pair of "toothpick" shoes at the foot. The stranger, apparently all unconscious of the attention he excited, sat in his chair, tilted up against the wall, his cigar standing straight out before him. The man from the gambling room seemed paralyzed with indignation that any such specimen of gentility should desecrate the spot. Raising one of his revolvers, he aimed deliberately at the stranger's cigar, fired and knocked it into small fragments.

The landlord dodged behind the bar, and the stubble faced man now ducked. The stranger took another cigar from his case, put his hand in his trousers pocket, fumbled for something, took out a silver match safe, lighted his cigar and proceeded to smoke as though nothing worthy of notice had happened. The man with two revolvers stood staring at him with a look of blank astonishment. That a tenderfoot from the effete east should disregard his warning not to insult the place with his effeminate presence, cigar case and Havana cigars was too much for his emotional nature. He raised his weapon and fired a second shot, removing the offensive cigar in the same manner as the first.

The equanimity of the stranger remained still unruffled. He did not even glance at his instructor in western manners. For a third time he drew forth his cigar case, selected another cigar, replaced the case and put the cigar between his lips. The landlord and the stubble faced man looked at him with an intensity of interest far greater than they had thus far shown, marked as that interest had been. They felt sure that if the young tenderfoot again disregarded the kindly warning given him as to what the wild west would accept he would pay for his obstinacy with his life. The man who had done the firing after each shot replaced his revolver at his hip, having no idea that this girl man, as he considered the stranger, was armed.

The stranger stretched out his legs, let his chair down square on the floor and thrust his hand in his trousers pocket as he had done before for his match safe. The landlord and the stubble faced man changed position so as to be farther from the line of fire of the man who was giving instruction in western manners. The pupil drew his hand from his pocket, inclosing as it was supposed his match safe, but no one saw what it was, for there was no time. In a fraction of a second a "bulldog" 45 caliber revolver barked, and the professor of western manners fell dead.

The surprise of the lookers-on was not that somebody had got killed, but that it had been the wrong man. They looked at the victim, then at the stranger, then at each other. Then the stubble faced man said:

"Would y' mind, Mr. Tenderfoot, showin' me that weepon?"

The tenderfoot displayed a short, ugly looking pistol.

"Who mought y' be, stranger?" asked the landlord, eying the owner of the gun curiously.

"I'm Brisbain, owner of Brisbain's ranch. I've been down east on a visit to my folks. Just got back. Expect to find my man here about now with a horse. Seen anything of him?"

At that moment a mounted man and a led horse darkened the door of the cabin. Mr. Brisbain returned the salute of his man, mounted the led horse, and both rode away, leaving the instructor in western manners lying on the floor to be attended to by the landlord and the stubble faced man.

"Reckon," said the latter, scratching his head, "y' can't most always tell by a man's clothes how safe it is to fool with him."

"Specially if y' don't know the kind of gun he carries. Them 'bulldogs' is turrable dangerous at short range. D'y' know who the feller is?"

"Brisbain he said his name was."

"And do y' know who Brisbain is?"

"No."

"He's a chap as come out yere a matter o' five year ago from Chicago to start a ranch—black sheep or sumpin of a rich family. Served an enlistment. He shoots to kill. Come, help me out with this."

And they removed the corpse.

SOME GOOD ADVICE.

By T. BLAIR EATON.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

When I left the law school with a diploma and a fine standing in my class one of my preceptors, who had taken an interest in me, said:

"Tom, you have learned a lot of law here, but in the world you don't want to practice law. You want to practice common sense. At least common sense is three quarters of the fight. There are all sorts of things in the profession that certain lawyers set great store by, such as decisions, delicate differences in law principles, expert testimony, etc. Such men, if they have any success, usually land on the bench, while the practical attorney gets rich."

Soon after entering upon my professsion a Mr. Arbuckle, a very rich man, gave me one of his small cases, involving $300. Peter Whitfield had sued him for the amount as part of an account due, and Arbuckle claimed that he had never ordered the goods it represented. Whitfield was a small dealer, Arbuckle a prominent capitalist. When the case came to trial all I could do was to ask for a voucher. To my surprise, plaintiff's counsel produced a letter from Mr. Arbuckle ordering the goods. When I informed my client of the fact he was as much surprised as I. He did not remember writing such a letter and was sure he had not written it. After consultation we became convinced that it was a forgery, and I claimed in court that it was a forgery. Whitfield thereupon hired the best handwriting expert to be had, who pronounced the document genuine.

"How do you know that it is genuine?" I asked the expert.

"The question," replied the expert, looking at me patronizingly, "involves a statement of how I reach my professional conclusions. When the document was submitted to me I sought to determine its dissimilarities from a conventional standard. Every person writes with one of a class of movements we call forearm, wrist and finger movements. I can tell at a glance under what general system the writing has been penned.

"I analyzed the letter before the court, dissected every letter and noted each departure from the standard. Such dissimilarities are invariably found to be characteristic of the writer. He cannot depart from them. After analyzing the letter I took up other bits of writing of his as furnished by my client and dissected them just as in the case of the letter submitted to me for my opinion. I found in every one of these other specimens the characteristics of the letter before the court."

"How about disguised writing?" I asked.

"In such cases the difficulty is not greatly increased. A person may successfully disguise a few letters, but in the main his natural variations from the accepted standard will be unmistakable. In cases of disguised handwriting I must first determine the method of the disguise, separating the real from the unreal features of the disguiser's natural handwriting. Having determined this, the rest is easy."

I took from my pocket a package of letters.

"Here are specimens of chirography," I said, "presumed to have been written by my client. Will you please examine them and tell me if they are genuine?"

The expert asked for time and was given till the next morning. Then he came into court and testified that of three letters I had given him one was genuine and two were not. I asked him to mark the letters, and he did so. I took them and, selecting the one that he had pronounced in Arbuckle's handwriting, examined it carefully. Then I called Henry Harley.

"What is your profession, Mr. Harley?" I asked.

"Engraver."

I handed him the letter I held, told him to examine it and asked him if he wrote it.

He replied that he did.

The court, the jury and the spectators pricked up their ears.

Dismissing the witness, I called Jacob Untermeyer.

"What is your business, Mr. Untermeyer?" I asked.

"Paper manufacturer."

"Examine the paper on which that letter is written and tell me if you recognize it."

"It is from a small lot we have had in a loft for many years, an old watermark of our firm not now used. I furnished it to you a week ago."

"That will do. Call Stephen Munger. Mr. Munger, did you see Henry Harley write that letter?"

"I did."

"When and where?"

"Three days ago in your office."

"That will do. Gentlemen of the jury, hearing of an engraver who could imitate any one's handwriting, I found Mr. Harley and employed him to write this letter, which has been pronounced by the expert for the plaintiff as having been written by my client. To clinch the matter I secured some paper not in the market for years and the die of which has been destroyed. I have shown you how much reliance is to be placed on the expert's opinion."

The jury gave a verdict in Mr. Arbuckle's favor, and the case was closed.

My client was so delighted at the practical manner in which I had handled the case that, instead of giving me in future only his trivial cases, he gave me all his business, and I owe my success to the advice of my preceptor, which I never forgot and which brought it about.

Vulture and Rattler.

An odd battle between a California vulture and a rattlesnake was witnessed in the Cocopah mountains of Lower California. It was in the early morning. The big bird had seized the snake behind the head and was struggling upward with its writhing, deadly burden. The snake's captor appeared aware that its victim was dangerous. The burden was heavy, as the reptile was nearly five feet long.

The grip of the bird on the snake's body was not of the best. The snake seemed to be squirming from its captor's talons, at least sufficiently to enable it to strike. His triangular head was seen to recoil and dart at the mass of feathers.

It did this once or twice, and then with a shriek the vulture dropped its prey. The bird was probably 500 feet or so above the observers. The astonished men were then treated to a spectacle seldom seen. Few birds but a vulture could accomplish such a feat.

The instant the snake escaped from the bird's clutches it dropped earthward like a shot, and like a shot the bird dropped after it, catching it in midair with a grip that caused death. At any rate, the snake ceased to wriggle, and the vulture soared away to a mountain peak to devour its hard earned meal.

THE BEST REMEDY

For Women—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Noah, Ky. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from headaches, nervous prostration, and hemorrhages.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me well and strong, so that I can do all my housework, and attend to the store and post-office, and I feel much younger than I really am.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most successful remedy for all kinds of female troubles, and I feel that I can never praise it enough." — Mrs. LIZZIE HOLLAND, Noah, Ky.

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

For 30 years it has been curing women from the worst forms of female ills — inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and nervous prostration.

We never publish a testimonial without the special permission of the writer, and then only when we are sure it is genuine. Such testimony should create confidence in all suffering women.

Bartlett; primary, Katherine Sampson; Franklin grammar, Nellie G. Shea; Franklin primary, Nellie B Sullivan; Liberty, Catherine Moynihan; Washington, Edith Towne; Chestnut Hill, May Carmody; Holyoke, Victor A Blackmer; Federal, Myra L. Merriam, substitute; Lake Vale, Libbie Gothlberlet; Union, L. Louise Brown; West Hill, Mildred Grant; Laurel, Ellie Witt; Blue Meadow, Florence G. Gould. Mr. Ventura, the new teacher in the grammar school, is a graduate of Hyannis Normal School. Miss Sampson is also a normal school graduate from Bath, Me. Miss Sampson will have charge of the primary school. Miss Myra Merriam, in charge of the Federal-street school, is from Leominster. Miss J Louise Brown, in the Union district, is also from Leominster, a graduate of Fitchburg Normal School, having had three years' experience in teaching.

Miss Elizabeth Nichols left this week for Minneapolis, Minn.

Mrs. A. M. Baggs has been the guest of friends in Brockton.

Robert L. Bridgman Jr. has returned from a trip to Europe.

Miss Dorothy Holland has returned to her school duties in York, Pa.

Mrs. D. F. Shea and children are spending their vacation at Prince Edward Island.

Frank Towne has returned to New York after spending the month with his father, Nelson Towne.

Miss Lucy D. Thompson of New York city will visit her parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. F. Thompson over Sunday. Miss Thompson is connected with the Atterbury firm of architects in New York city.

Statistics for the week have been kept as to the number of vehicles on the state road on Depot hill, and have resulted as follows: August 22, 156; 23, 264; 24, 196; 25, 246; 26, 150; 27, 185; 28, 281. This includes vehicles of all descriptions, including automobiles.

Mrs. Andrew Sawyer of Bridgeport, Ct., has been the guest this week of Mrs. Naomi Howard. Mrs. Sawyer is the daughter of the late Humphrey Filer, an old-time citizen of Belchertown, who with his family lived on the site of the house now owned and occupied by L. W. Dillon. Mr. Filer was in the carriage manufacturing business when that was the industry of Belchertown.

The marriage of Miss Ruby Hope Fletcher of Minneapolis, Minn., and Prof. Charles Washburn Nichols, son of Prof. and Mrs. W. F. Nichols of New Haven, Ct., took place in Minneapolis Tuesday evening. Mr. Nichols is a native of Belchertown and a graduate of Yale college; also a post graduate of Harvard college. Miss Fletcher is a graduate of the University of Minnesota in the class of 1908.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

CORNER STONE LAID.

Interesting Exercises at Congregational Church.

FINE ADDRESS BY REV. G. S ROLLINS

Large Number Present. Former Members From Other Places Attend The Ceremony.

Last Saturday afternoon about 250 people assembled in the shade of the trees at 3 o'clock on the northwest corner of the church grounds on Pleasant street, to witness the interesting exercises connected with the laying of the corner-stone of the new church building. The weather conditions were all that could be desired. Among those present were Mrs. Mary S. Brown, the oldest living member of the church, Mrs. Mary L Robinson and James Knox, who were present at the laying of the corner stone of the old church in 1847, Mrs. C. L Gardner and Mrs. O.W. Studley of Springfield, and Mrs L B. Warren of Hampden, former attendants of the old church, and others from out of town.

The services were in charge of Rev. F. S. Brewer, pastor of the church, and were opened with Scripture reading by Rev. F. W. Gibbs of St. Paul's Universalist church, who read Psalm 24 and a portion of Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple. A hymn, "How firm a foundation," was sung by the audience. Rev. Mr. Brewer then placed the box within the cavity prepared for it in the stone The copper box was the gift of Miss Mollie Allen Barton, granddaughter of Mrs. Mary S. Brown, the oldest member of the church. The box is five by nine inches and five inches in depth. The corner stone is the gift of the William N. Flynt Granite company of Monson. Mr. Brewer then announced that the box had been sealed in the presence of himself and O. P. Allen, and contained these articles: The contents of the lead box, consisting of a 25-cent piece dated 1834, a 10-cent piece dated 1836, a 5-cent piece dated 1847, a solid silver plate 3 by 4 inches and weighing 2½ onnces, bearing this inscription: "Erected by an association of individuals for the use of the 2d Congregational church and society of Palmer, for the worship of Almight God, Father, Son and Holy Ghost. This stone was laid May 20, 1847, by the Rev. Alfred Ely, D. D., of Monson." On the reverse of this plate was added this inscription: "The church was burned Feb. 1, 1909. The corner stone of the new building was laid Sept. 4, 1909;" a copy of the Palmer Sentinel date of Dec. 17, 1846; the two manuscripts found in the old box were not returned because they had become nearly unreadable, save just enough to indicate that one was a copy of the deed given by Capt. Alonzo N. Dewey, and the action of the church building committee in relation to the deed. The new contents are as follows: A Lincoln cent of 1909; copy of the church history and manual published in 1895; official ballot for 1909; church and Sunday school statistics as given by the clerk, L. H. Gager, Jan. 1, 1909; card of the giver of the copper box, Mollie Allen Barton; card of Francis L. Jones, builder of the new church; copy of the program of the 60th anniversary; copies and clippings of the Palmer Journal as follows: The 60th anniversary of the church with addresses, date of May 17, 1907; memorial wiudows described, date of Dec. 2, 1907; list of church officers for 1909, date of Jan. 1, 1909; account of the burning of the church, date of Feb. 5, 1909; unearthing of the old corner stone, with list of contents, date of April 16, 1909; plans for building new church, date of July 16, 1909; description of the original and remodeled church, date of Sept. 3, 1909; clipping from Springfield Republican, date of July 29, 1909, showing front elevation of the new church, made from a drawing by Elisabeth Bodfish; clipping from Springfield Union, date of Feb. 2, 1909, giving account of the burning of the church; clipping from Worcester Telegram, date of Feb. 2, 1909, giving an account of the burning of the church; list of contributors toward the building of the new church, with this added resume by the pastor, "There are 114 contributors to the new church whose names appear on the solicitors' lists, and 218 names from the Sunday school after deducting the duplications, thus making a total of 332 who have a share in the new building up to date, a very gratifying number; we are making a collection of papers that have accounts of church matters and trust that the collection we hereby present to the future will be preserved intact and can be read whenever the box shall shall be opened; this list was written on a specially prepared paper made at Dalton by the Crane Co. with the water mark of 1909, and state record ink was used to insure its durability. The box was doubly sealed with hard solder.

Rev. F. S. Brewer, in laying the corner stone said, "In the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, I lay this corner stone for the house of worship of the Second Congregational church erected for the worship of Almighty God." The stone was then formally sealed by L. H. Gager, chairman of the building committee. Prayer was offered by Rev. C. W. Williams, pastor of the Baptist church. The junior department of the Sunday school then sang the "Builders' Hymn."

The address of the afternoon was then delivered by Rev. George S. Rollins D. D. of Hope church, Springfield, and was an eloquent presentation of the two-fold Spiritual and Social mission of the church of to-day. Mr. Rollins said in part:

The church's mission is twofold—spiritual and social. Its spiritual mission is first to proclaim a gospel of moral recovery from the habit and hurt of sin. Christian salvation is present as well as future. It includes the whole man and the whole of his life experience. This is the glad news of the gospel. God hates sin because it is sin and because it destroys the child he loves. Mercy and forgiveness for all who will accept it is the message of the cross. Sin need not enslave the soul and debauch society. Just so far as men accept Christ's gospel as salvation, so far will righteousness, peace and love rule in human society. But the church is also engaged in the heavenly work of developing Christlike character. The graces and virtues which constitute Christian character are developed from the new life within. This is the object of religious instruction and training in Christian activity. The church message includes cheer, consolation and encouragement. The strain and speed of life are terrific. They exhaust energy and courage. Sickness, worry and suicide are frightfully common. People need rest, peace, trust. Where can they find these? Nowhere but through faith in God. The church undertakes to hold men true to God. To make men realize that God is in this world and with his children; that all their interests and needs are his concern. People run to cheap, inane amusement for respite from cares and troubles, when what they need is the peace of mind that follows upon refound faith in the heavenly Father. Hearts are breaking with sorrow and trouble. Minds are confused by cares. What they need is re-creation, not recreation. Re-creation of faith, peace and joy is what they need The church through her ministration brings people into touch with the living Christ. Men and women need to be saved from themselves, from their sins, their sicknesses, their worries, their restlessness and false ambition and abnormal notions of life. They can be thus saved by turning to Christ and his complete salvation. Then, too, men must be inspired by high and righteous motives. In the highly complex civilization of our time, temptations are numerous, gigantic and subtle. Men are not tempted to sell their souls for a mess of soup, but are tempted by millions. Said an officeholder to me recently: "It's harder to be honest than to get rich." Wealth and its power have outstripped our moral development. Humanitarianism we have in abundant spasms, but the heroic virtues of truthfulness, honesty and chastity are too weak to resist the allurements and protection of vast wealth. Unless we can evolve conscience and courage to match our colossal wealth, power and luxury, tragic ruin awaits us. The church is the business of developing and educating conscience. She is also creating moral energy. She is undertaking to make a character that can stand wealth and its power and use these for the good of mankind.

But the church's mission is also social. We are social beings. The social instinct is taking on a wider range. Cities grow with incredible rapidity. Christianity is a social institution. It exists because our religion is social and we are social. Only a socialized religion is worth anything to the world. Now the church has to meet these changed social conditions. She must socialize her work or be superseded by other forms of Christianity that will do so. There is an immense amount of Christian idealism outside the church. The church herself has been the cause of it. She has spread ideas and awakened longings which people desire to see realized. The great masses know that they have to live and work under conditions which are unChristian, cruel, unjust. There are many economic and social problems which are at bottom moral. The tenement-house problem, ordinarily, regarded as economic, is at bottom moral. The very poor cannot live in overcrowded, filthy tenements and be virtuous. Poor who by necessity are compelled to rear their families in slums in disgusting intimacy with saloons and brothels cannot furnish a high class of citizens to the community. Plenty of saloonkeepers would not think of living and rearing their children in the neighborhood of their own saloons. Yet many of their customers are compelled to do so by reason of high rents in respectable neighborhoods. The church is profoundly concerned in this economic-moral problem. City slums damn souls faster than the church can save them. The same reasoning applies to the child labor question and is emphatically true of the liquor problem, which on one side is a menacing economic problem, while on the other a terrific immoral peril. The church is being defeated by these conditions. The church is not the state. She cannot usurp the functions of the state. Yet the state looks to her to permeate the community with spiritual, moral ideals. It is impossible so long as the state promotes slums and evil conditions of life and toil. The church ministers to social life. There are localities where she ought to provide wholesome amusements and recreation under moral oversight. She can also minister to physical and intellectual culture where there is need of either. Good music, good fellowship, means of service to the community ought to be provided by many of our churches. And this can be done, is done without detracting from the more distinctively spiritual activities. The church must be cosmopolitan. She must minister to all classes about her doors. If she does not, she is recreant to her master. She must give what she has. The best she has is life, service, sacrificial service. This is better than silver and gold. After all men are not asking alms. They only ask for a fair chance. They need not charity, but life, the clearer heart and courage. The church must try to realize Jesus' ideal of life and brotherhood. She must connect God and the life of men. She must transmit God's life and power to the world.

The service closed with singing of the hymn, "I love thy Kingdom Lord" and the pronouncing of the benediction by Rev. F. S. Brewer.

Mansion House Changes Hands.

F. F. Gilmore, for the past 22 years proprietor of the Mansion House, has sold the hotel business to A. A. Joslin and J. A. Morse of Boston. Mr. Gilmore has no immediate plans for the future other than the management of the casino near the hotel, where he will continue to direct the moving picture exhibition. Mr. Gilmore is in company with J. J. Foley, now ill in Worcester, and must continue in the management of the casino until Mr. Foley's return.

Frank Hannum will act as janitor at the Unitarian church until John Fairfield is able to resume work.

Miss Sadie Maloney of the telephone exchange is spending two weeks in Amherst and at the Boston beaches. During her absence Miss Nellie Sheehy is acting as night operator.

Miss Ina M. Calef of Danvers has been elected teacher of drawing and sloyd work in the public schools. Miss Calef is a graduate of the Boston normal art school and is highly recommended.

Alfred Brunell, 35, died at his home on Cherry street Sunday morning after a long illness. He leaves a wife and six children. The funeral was held in Mt. Carmel church Tuesday morning, with burial in Mt. Carmel cemetery.

A party of 12 young men, including John T. Storrs, James Harrington, Livingston Moore, Francis X. Ryan, Arthur L. Davis, Robert Greenwood, Philip W. Robinson, Paul S. Bassett, Edward Haley, Harold Sjostrom, William H. Clark and Robert Kelleher, are camping on the shore of Lake Wickaboag, West Brookfield, this week.

The schools opened Tuesday. The enrolment in the 24 grade schools was 962, an average of nearly 40 to a room, and slightly more than last year. The number is divided as follows by the school buildings: New South, 198 in six rooms; Old South, 172 in four rooms; North, 179 in four rooms; high, 177 in four rooms; West, 157 in four rooms. The high school started off with 126 or a few more than last fall. The entering class numbers 40. The school at Ware Center has 41 pupils for its one teacher, the eighth and uinth grade scholars being carried to the graded schools as last year.

MAY HAVE BEEN MURDER.

Bones of Human Found in Woodlot in Holland.

GRUESOME DISCOVERY OF TEAMSTERS

Nothing But Bones Remaining, Clad Only In Shirt. Have Been There For Months.

The finding of a body—or more properly the bones of what was once a human being—in a remote section of the town of Holland Wednesday has stirred every inhabitant of that town, and to-day all are asking whence the victim came and who he—or she—was and the cause. For the conditions are such as to give reasonable ground for the theory that there has been foul play. In fact, there seems no good reason for believing anything else, with the one possible exception of insanity.

Wednesday afternoon two teamsters engaged in hauling wood to Southbridge from a woodlot about two miles from the village of Holland and only about 100 yards from the Connecticut line near Mashapaug, discovered the remains of a human body lying on a heap of brush. They notified the police of Southbridge, who in turn notified the selectmen of Holland, who in turn notified Medical Examiner Jacob P. Schneider of Palmer. He went to the place Wednesday evening, arriving at the spot where the body lay just at midnight after a hard climb over brush heaps and fallen trees. As thorough an examination as possible was made, though there was little on which to work. Practically nothing but the bones was left, and they were picked clean; there was a very small amount of flesh under one thigh, but that was all. The bones were apparently those of a male, but even that could not be determined accurately under the conditions existing at midnight in the midst of a woodlot. The body had lain on the right side, with a limb of brush between the legs; the skull was separated from the rest of the skeleton, but evidently the result of decay and not force. The only clothing to be found was a white or gray undershirt on the bones, over which had been a dark blue knit shirt or cardigan jacket. There was no hat, no shoes, no coat, no trousers; the two shirts were all that could be found in the way of clothing. The skull did not appear to be fractured. The bones lay on top of the brush, so that no attempt at concealment had been made. A more thorough search of the spot and locality was made yesterday by the selectmen of Holland, but nothing new was learned. There were no signs of a struggle and nothing in the shape of a weapon was found—no revolver, knife or other instrument which could have caused death.

The spot where the bones were found is a lonely one. The nearest house is a mile away. The timber was cut from the tract last winter, and the choppers had a shanty about a quarter of a mile from the spot where the remains were found. The question of how they came there is puzzling the authorities A man would hardly be expected—even in the wildest moments of a Saturday night drunk—to wander out with such a scant supply of clothing, and it is evident that the body has been where it was found from six to nine months, probably since some time in the winter. A demented person might have wandered there, but hardly in such scanty attire. The more the case is studied the more it looks as though somewhere, at some time, a tragedy had taken place and the evidence of the fatal outcome of the quarrel, or accident, or whatever it may have been, deposited where it was found day before yesterday. The gang which cleared the lot last winter was employed by Chaffee Bros. of Oxford, and they are looking up the records of the job to see if any of the men employed at that time are missing. The district police have been notified, and Detective Bligh of Pittsfield has been on the ground this afternoon with Medical Examiner Schneider, but up to the time of the Journal's going to press (3 o'clock) nothing new had been learned.

BELCHERTOWN.

Miss Florence Johnson will teach in the Bridgeport schools this year.

Mrs. F. B. Purdy has returned from a month's visit in Middletown, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Israel Blodgett celebrated the 50th anniversary of their marriage August 30 at Downer's Grove, near Chicago, Ill. Both Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett are natives of Belchertown, where they were married. Mrs. Blodgett is recovering from a serious illness, but was able to receive her friends for a few hours.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Sept. 8, 1909.

James H. Vahey and Chairman McDonald of the Democratic state committee went out to lunch together this noon. Vahey had just returned to the city after a little absence. This is supposed to be in preparation for the meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic state committee to-morrow afternoon to arrange the important details of the Democratic state convention. According to the understanding to-day the permanent chairman will be Charles S. Hamlin, who was not an original Vahey man last year, and has always represented the conservative Democrats with the element of progressiveness. Hamlin has been a pretty advanced man for the conservative wing and gets more to the popular side of current issues than most of the Back Bay Democrats. He does not stand at all for the same set as William A. Gaston and the party might go further and fare much worse than to take Hamlin for candidate for governor. But this will not occur this year. Hamlin and Gaston are both understood to be for Vahey this year, leaving candidates after the expected defeat of Vahey to care for themselves To-day the talk about Mayor Coughlin of Fall River as candidate against Vahey is at the vanishing point. Whatever mention is heard of a conference between the supposed rivals is credited to the Coughlin men, for there is no reason why Vahey should want to confer with any candidate against him, as far as can be seen from his office or from the Democratic headquarters What Vahey is counting upon is the disappointment of the men who expect to see him snowed under—perhaps helping in the process—and, with the help of the anti-Draper labor movement, of becoming the governor of the Commonwealth. Vahey men figure out very flattering possibilities, but the Republicans cannot see that they are probabilities and refuse to become alarmed.

At the Republican headquarters they are quietly enjoying the advertising they are getting for nothing for the party and its distinguished leaders by the Yale dinner to President Taft and by the meeting of the Essex club at Danvers to-morrow when they will be addressed by Secretary Nagle of the department of commerce and labor and by Secretary Meyer of the navy. Meyer is a member of the club personally,—at least he was not long ago, and it is to be presumed that he retains the membership, for it is to be noticed that the leaders of the party, although they attain high places in Washington, are scrupulous to retain their membership in these political clubs which gives them personal footing, a chance to get into contact with their constituents upon common ground, and to be invited to deliver a speech before them occasionally. This Essex club, next to the long-lived and well known Middlesex, is the leading political club in Massachusetts, and these two counties have more politics to the square foot than any other two in the state, with the exception of Suffolk, where it is the city offices, as the spoils of office, which keep the parties continually on edge. Chairman Doty of the Republican state committee is in Maine with his young man son, and is expected back about September 20. That will bring him here just before the canouses, and there will not be anything difficult requiring his presence even then.

Mayor Hibbard has at last come out with a statement that he is a candidate for renomination for mayor of Boston once more. He has been credited with this purpose for months and has been charged with shaping his administration so as to get the support of the politicians. But, from present indications, he has lost more than he has gained. The new finance commission, for instance, which is the successor in law of the original commission which made the investigation which caused the new charter, has made its public attack upon him as using the departments for the promotion of his ambition and generally of not keeping the tone of his administration up to the standard of tolerability. But, worse than this, politically, the Republican city machine continues hostile to him. It is not long since one of the foremost Republican party officials of the city said that very likely Hibbard would not get a single delegate in the city. With the independent element represented by the finance commission, or the old mugwump element, and the regular party organization both hostile to him, what can he expect. It is noted to-day that many heads of departments in the city hall assured him that they would stand by him to the end. But if it is to be an officeholders' campaign against the people, with the city normally Democratic by a large majority, where does the chance of Hibbard's success come in? Perhaps he can manipulate things so as to get more party harmony later, but, even then, what chance can he have of winning.

By the death of Henry B. Blackwell Boston loses one of her most distinguished and conspicuous citizens in his personal appearance. He was frequently seen on the streets. Owing to his advancing years, his form had become much bent, but his mind was as keen, apparently, as when he was in his prime. His lifework was the conducting of the Woman's Journal, which his daughter, Alice Blackwell, had edited for many years. The endowment of the paper assures its existence, and it supports the cause with undying energy, in spite of the failure to make apparent headway in Massachusetts. Mr. Blackwell was one of the vigorous opponents of biennial state elections when that critical issue was decisively settled by a majority of 50,000 in favor of the present system, and he not infrequently said afterward that he wished that woman suffrage could make such a winning fight as the cause of annual elections did. He was also an active participator, three and four years ago, in the movement inside the Republican party which had its center in Boston against the Dingley tariff. He was a firm believer in reciprocity with Canada and in breaking down the tariff restrictions generally materially. He was a tariff reformer from principle, and his other political positions he took as matters of principle. He was never an office-holder or a candidate of any degree, if ever, but he gave his strength to working for the public good from the purest unselfishness. Precious few such men are in public life to-day and when a leader as he was drops off from the stage, the public misses him and suffers a material loss. His wife, the late Lucy Stone Blackwell, was a woman of as firm and aggressive opinions as he, and they worked in complete harmony for many years of service in editing The Woman's Journal, in public speaking, and in presenting their arguments before committees of the Legislature.

Peary's discovery of the pole will be likely to bring him a warm welcome to Boston, where he has been popular by reason of his former voyages. A dozen years ago he could fill well the large Music

PALMER NEWS.

SCHOOLS BEGIN.

Large Registration. Mason District Not Opened. List of Teachers.

The schools of the town opened Tuesday with a large attendance, the total enrollment being about 1300, divided approximately as follows: High school, 130; Palmer grammar, 400; Three Rivers, 240; Thorndike, 200; Boudsville, 200; Wire Mill, 50; Forest Lake, 25; Shorley, 9. The freshman class in the high school numbers 51.

The school committee, after a careful investigation, has decided not to open the Mason district school, and has awarded the contract for transporting the pupils to the Palmer grammar school to W. E. Kenyon at $650. Charles W. Robinson has been appointed janitor of the high school building. On account of the large number of pupils and the unfinished state of the addition to the building, two sessions of the high school are held daily, from 8 to 11 and from 1 to 4.

Some changes have been made in the teaching force of the schools, some of the teachers selected declining to serve and their places being filled by others. The list as it now stands, outside of the high school, is: At Palmer grammar—Principal, Elizabeth I. Heenehan; Susette Gravenstein, May Dillon, Lillie M. Sullivan, Jennie C. Roche, Mildred M. Hartwell, Edna Flanders, Agnes Mahoney, Helen Henderson and Rena S Oliver. At Thorndike — Principal, Katherine M. Twiss; Annie E. O'Connor, Flora Morey, Ina D. Babb, Natalie Jackson and Mary E Murdock. At Three Rivers—Principal, Martha Buzzell, Lucy B. Twiss, Harriet J Wilder, Florence M Phillips, Julia G Daley and Florence Heenehan At Bondsville — Principal, Jennie C Twiss; Cora B. Clark, Annie E. Bradford, Una L. Bangs, Lucy Fitzgerald and Mary I. Fussell. Districts —May Mahoney, Mollie R. Felton, Maud Foley and Margaret E. Scannell.

UNREQUITED AFFECTION.

Loss of Girl He Loved Unsettled Reason Of Bondsville Man.

Leon Knill of Bondsville was adjudged an insane person in the district court, and sent to Northampton. He was taken by Officer Collins of Bondsville and Deputy Sheriff Bills of Palmer, and the two officers had an exciting experience with their man at the union station in Springfield yesterday.

After leaving Palmer Knill became violent and after smashing a car window with his fist attempted to jump through himself. At Springfield he was more violent, the officers having a hard time in keeping him under subjection. Knill's trouble is said to have resulted from disappointed affections. A year ago a girl whom he loved and was engaged to left Poland for this country; Leon followed last April expecting to marry the girl here, but found that she was the wife of another. Soon after he began to act strangely and grew worse until he had to be taken care of to prevent possible injury to himself or others.

PAVING THIS YEAR.

Work on Main Street to Begin Very Soon. Selectmen to Do Job.

It is understood that the rails for the new street railway track through Main street have been shipped and they are expected to arrive in a few days. Announcement is also made that the job of paving will be started this fall, in a short time, as soon as the preliminary arrangements can be completed, and that as much of the work as possible will be done this year; the east side of the street will be done first and there is little question but that this can be finished before cold weather; if the season remains open a sufficient length of time the whole will be done this fall. This will be particularly agreeable to all who have occasion to use the street for any purpose.

"Hands Across the Sea."

In connection with the building of the new Congregational church come these two items from England and Scotland, showing the strong bond of sympathy which exists between the members of the Congregational churches of the old and new world:

Mrs. Aitken of Edinboro, whom Rev. and Mrs. Brewer visited while in that city last year, has sent a contribution of two pounds—about $10—for the building fund.

The ladies of the large Congregational church in Ealing, West London, have sent an order with cash, for 18 copies of the May Breakfast Cook Book No. 3, to be sold at their church fair. Mr. Brewer preached in their church while in London last year.

Want to Know About Abandoned Farms.

The assessors have received a request from the State Board of Agriculture for information concerning abandoned farms, or those which are not being worked to their full capacity and are for sale. The board has authority from the Legislature to publish information of this nature, the thought being that by such means the farms may pass into other hands and be made of value to the agricultural interests of the state. The assessors will be glad of any information along this line which may be sent to R. E. Cummings of Palmer.

House Burned.

The house on the "Maxwell" place in Silver Street in Monson was burned Monday, the fire catching from a defective chimney. The blaze was discovered by men who were at work shingling. The loss is about $1500, partially insured. It was owned by Pearl S. Wright.

A number of the Veteran Firemen attended the muster at North Adams Monday.

Roy E. Crofton has secured a position in the Johnson bookstore in Springfield, and began work Monday.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a meeting next Tuesday afternoon in the reference room of the public library.

A meeting of the Palmer Grange will be held this evening in Masonic hall, when a literary program will be rendered.

The Republican town committee organized last evening with E. W. Carpenter chairman, E E Hobson secretary and B. F. Emery treasurer.

The contract for the desk, chairs and teachers' desks for the addition to the high school has been given to the American Seating Company of Boston.

Undenominational services will be held every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs O. C. Marcy on the corner of Walnut and Pleasant streets.

The half hour electric cars to Monson, which ran at 15 minutes past the hour for several weeks during the latter part of the summer, have been taken off.

A meeting of the Republican district committee of the first Hampden representative district will be held at the Converse House next Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

The foreign missionary branch of the Ladies' Society of the Congregational church held its first meeting of the season yesterday afternoon with Mrs. J. C. Wing on Central street.

The women of the Baptist church held a mystery social at the parsonage Wednesday evening and netted about $28, which will be used toward the purchase of carpets for the new church.

Pictures of the Thorndike, Three Rivers and Palmer baseball teams will be shown on the screen at the Elite moving picture palace next Monday evening; that of the Thorndike team will be a colored slide.

Miss Jennie Brainerd brought to the Journal office last Saturday a bunch of handsome asters which measured four inches in diameter. Possibly there are larger ones, but it hardly seems possible.

The addition to the Four Corners cemetery is being graded and improved by the cemetery commissioners. Roads have been laid out and the lots relocated and permanently marked, and the whole tract seeded.

Charles Alger had his hand caught in the picker which he was at work on Wednesday in the Ford & Hawkes shoddy mill, the fingers and forearm being badly torn. He was cared for by Dr. S it. Carsley.

The hearing on the North Main street sewer yesterday afternoon developed several unforeseen complications, and a special town meeting is called for Saturday afternoon of next week to adjust the matters.

An oil stove in the tenement in the Cross block on Main street occupied by Mrs. Herbert Morgan caught fire Tuesday evening, and before it could be carried out by some of the boarders a rug and a coat hanging near had been badly burned. No serious damage was done.

Regular services of the Baptist church in the Advent chapel next Sunday as follows: Prayer meeting at 10 15, morning worship and sermon at 10.45, subject, "The Greatest Living." Bible school at 12, Y. P. S. C. E. at 6, evening praise service at 7, sermon subject, "The New Testament View of Salvation."

At a meeting of the Ladies' Society of the Congregational church yesterday afternoon it was voted that the society provide an organ for the new church, now building. The society has a portion of the necessary funds, but will install the instrument and assume the responsibility of payment of the balance.

There will be a union meeting of the Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church in the chapel of the Universalist church Sunday evening at 6.30. Rev. Mr. Lupien of the Bondsville Methodist church will speak on "Temperance in all things." There will be special music, and the public is invited.

What ought to be a game of ball worth watching will be played on the park grounds to-morrow afternoon between the Whitall carpet mill teams of Palmer and Worcester. Each team has won one game and this will be for the championship. A set of uniforms goes to the winning team. The battery for Palmer will be Nelson and Rice.

An excellent opportunity to visit New York is offered for next Wednesday by the Central Vermont railroad, when an excursion will be run to that city. The fare for the round trip is only $3 from Palmer, and excursionist will take the regular train at 6 45 in the evening. The tickets will be good returning until September 22, arriving at destination the 23d, giving a full week in the metropolis.

A gang of men was employed last Sunday putting in new rails at the crossing of the Boston and Albany and the Central Vermont railroads, necessitated by the proposed removal of the south track of the B. and A. road 12 inches to the south. New rails have also been placed through the yard the past week; they are of a new pattern, 100 pounds to the yard instead of 90, as were the old ones, and are one inch higher, being six inches from base to face.

A meeting of the Hampshire and Hampden County Association of Women's Relief Corps will be held in Palmer the 22d, the visitors being entertained by the members of L L Merrick corps of Palmer. The morning session will be at 10.30 in Odd Fellows' Hall; dinner will be served at 12 30 by the local corps in Memorial Hall, and in the afternoon there will be an open session, with an entertainment as a part of the program.

A little excitement was created Saturday afternoon at the laying of the corner stone of the Congregational church when Henry Graves, a well-known resident of Baptist Hill, was stricken with a fainting spell and for a few moments serious consequences were feared. He was taken to the home of O. P. Allen, across the street, and attended by Dr Cheney, recovering in a short time. The attack was caused by indigestion, from which he soon recovered however.

The graduates of the Palmer high school last year—those who attend school elsewhere—will be widely scattered. An unusually large proportion of the class is taking advanced courses, as follows: Ruth LeGro goes to Smith College, Maud Fillmore to Mount Holyoke, Gladys Paine and Bessie Roche to Brown University, Beatrice Dillon to Bridgewater Normal, Ethel Rich to Fitchburg Normal, Rose Duffy, May Fitzgerald, Mary Quirk and Florence Sampson to Westfield Normal, James Holden to the Massachusetts Agricultural College, James Heenehan to Boston University, John Foley to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Warren Roper and Ethel Hall to the Bay Path Institute at Springfield.

"Every man's task is his life preserver," will be subject of the sermon by the pastor of the Congregational church next Sunday afternoon. Sunday school meets at 2 o'clock; preaching service at 3.15; union young people's service at 6 30 All are cordially invited to all these services. The first meeting of the Men's Club for the season will be held Wednesday evening, September 29. It is planned to have an open meeting, and subjects of vital interest will be discussed by members of the club.

WALES.

James Lucy and family of Monson were in town for Labor Day.

A party of Monson people were at the pavilion for the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson of Springfield have been spending a few days at Mrs. C. M. Thompson's.

J. H. London has returned to town and is having repairs made upon the engine, preparatory to starting his mill.

Mrs. George Lanphear has returned from Westfield, where she has been spending a few days with her son, Charles Parker.

George Damon of Three Rivers preached in the Baptist church last Sunday morning and will occupy the pulpit again next Sunday.

EASTERN HAMPDEN LEGISLATORS.

What the People Down East Think of Senator Norcross and Representative Hobson.

The biographical number of "Practical Politics" of Boston, a weekly devoted to political matters of the state and particularly the doings at the state house, issued last Saturday, contained cuts of various men in the public eye in national and state politics, as well as every member of the Legislature, with a biographical sketch of each. The members from Eastern Hampden were given the following commendatory words:

Hon Arthur D. Norcross of Monson is one of those whose familiar presence will be missed from the Senatorial circle of 1910. The Senator is not coming back next year, his being a district, the Worcester-Hampden which abides by the two years' rule for its Senators. Mr. Norcross is one of those who deserves well of his constituents. He has been most loyal in his service, and at the same time thoroughly independent and free in the exercise of his opinion according to his convictions. He has been chairman of water supply, as well as a member of public service and banks and banking this year, but has been chiefly interested in the Legislation before the committee on water supply which he has helped to shape. Sturdily conscientious, Sen. Norcross is not a man who is ready to flop on anything and especially is opposed to any "monkeying" with the law. He showed this in the Lynn fight to get a repeal of the water act of 1907, which obliged the city to proceed with an enlargement of its works. They got an extension down there from the Legislature of last year, and this year came up with a request to have that act repealed. Norcross wouldn't stand for that, and as a result, there will be no repeal, and the city gets an extension of seven months only, instead of two years because Chairman Norcross believes that when the Legislature tells a municipality to do a thing within a certain time, that thing has got to be done. He also straightened out the Fall River water works bill and a number of other important measures. Sen. Norcross took strong ground against the proposed change of date for levying taxes from May to April 1 in behalf of the small towns, and surprised the Senate when he informed it that upward of a hundred small towns hold their meetings in April, and would have to come to the general court for further Legislation to adjust their by-laws and whole machinery of government, which for ages has centered round May 1. Though he was beaten he stood up well for his constituents. Sen. Norcross has shown his strength of character in many other ways. When the Governor vetoed the bill to raise salaries of the deputy secretaries in the secretary of state's office, Sen. Norcross did not hesitate to say that His Excellency was wrong not to lead the fight against his veto. He is in his 61st year, tall and of striking presence, to which his coronal of white hair adds not a little. He came to the House in 1904, serving for three consecutive years on the committees on relations between employee and employer, on prisons, labor and public service. On his promotion to the Senate in 1908 he was made chairman of the committee on labor and was on insurance, water supply and towns of which committee he was chairman. He will be one of those greatly missed, as being a man whose sense of right was superior to political subserviency.

The retirement of Representative Ernest E. Hobson from the Legislature, if the brilliant young lawyer from Palmer adheres to his announced intention, will cause more genuine regret than any retirement in recent years. Not yet 31 years of age, Rep Hobson in his three years' service in the House, has made a record of surpassing brilliance. But with all his acknowledged ability, his many brilliant victories and the many flattering words said of him on and off the floor of the House, he has remained the same quiet, unassuming, level-headed young man that first came down from Palmer in January, 1907. Always unruffled, courteous and affable, no matter how heated the debate, and displaying the same characteristics off the floor as on the Palmer man, it is safe to say, can count more loyal friends among the men who have served with him during the past three years than can any of the "big" men of the House. Hobson is a "big" man He came pretty near being the biggest in the House of 1909. Four times during the session he dissented from the reports of his fellow attorneys on the committee on judiciary, the biggest committee of the House. And each time the House followed the Western Massachusetts man and overturned the committee's report. Such a record is probably not appreciated as highly by the ordinary man as it is by the person familiar with Beacon Hill who realizes the weight a report from this committee of eminent attorneys carries.

On "Honest Tom" Hisgen's bill to prevent discrimination between different communities in the prices charged for commodities in common use, Rep Hobson had with him as dissenters from the adverse committee report, Rep Patrick J. Duane and Senator Tessing, both Democrats. Hobson led the fight for the bill and had all the rest of the House members of the committee, except Mr. Duane, speaking against it. The House followed Hobson to the tune of 132 to 51. On the bill of ex-Senator Vahey to allow juries to qualify a verdict of murder in the first degree by adding thereto the words, "without capital punishment." Rep. Duane was in charge of the committee's favorable report. The House killed the bill after listening to Rep Hobson in opposition. So brilliant was his effort that Rep Duane, then and there, amid the plaudits of the House, nominated his victorious antagonist as district attorney for the Western district of Massachusetts. Again the Palmer representative was compelled to oppose his committee on the Dow bill to provide for a commission to investigate the delays in the administration of justice in civil actions. Powerful influences were at work to kill this bill but Rep. Hobson, advocating the cause of the poor who are often compelled to settle their cases against large corporations for insignificant amounts, because they can't stand the expense of repeated delays, put the bill through the House against a majority of his committee. It went through the Senate, and the commission is now at work. Rep Hobson's speech on the bill to allow judges to charge juries on questions of fact in regard to expert opinion evidence was, as this paper said at the time, "one of the most masterly ever delivered in either branch of the Legislature." The bill had been reported by the committee on judiciary but after Rep. Hobson's speech there was nothing left for the House to do but kill it, which was promptly done. Such a law as was proposed would have undermined the whole jury system of the commonwealth.

Rep. Hobson had the distinction of being called to the chair to preside more often than any other member. Such a brilliant presiding officer did he make and so readily did he dispatch business that a large number of members began to talk him up as the successor to Speaker Walker. That distinction he could undoubtedly secure if he would remain in the House. His retirement is indeed a misfortune. He has been a legislator for all of the people all of the time.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
HAMPDEN, ss.

To either of the Constables of the Town of Palmer in said county, Greeting:

In the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts you are hereby directed to notify and warn all the inhabitants of the Town of Palmer qualified to vote in town affairs to meet at the Town House at Four Corners in said Palmer on Saturday the 18th day of September A. D. 1909, at 2 o'clock p. m., then and there to act on the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. To choose a Moderator to preside at said meeting.

ART. 2. To hear and act on reports of Committees.

ART. 3. To appoint Committees and give them instructions.

ART. 4. To see if the town will accept and allow a common sewer, as laid out by the selectmen in the Depot Village, described as follows: Beginning on land of Fred H. Smith on the northeasterly side of the Quaboag river at a point six feet easterly from a stone bound, thence running N. 33° 45' E. in land of said Smith about two hundred and ninety feet to land of the New London Northern Railroad Company, thence in the same course across the location of said railroad company and the location of the Ware River Railroad Company to land of Rose Boyd and Kate I. McMahon, thence on the same course across land of said Boyd and McMahon about forty feet to North Main street at a point one hundred and fifty-five feet southeasterly from a stone highway bound set to mark the southwesterly side of said North Main street near the line between lands formerly owned by Clara Holbrook and Seth W. Smith, and thence running in the same course to a manhole near the centre of said street (the line described marking the centre line of location of said sewer); and extending easterly from said manhole in and through said North Main street to a point opposite Holbrook street; and extending westerly from said manhole in and through said North Main street to a point about two hundred feet westerly from Randall street. Said sewer to be constructed of tile pipe eighteen inches in diameter from the Quaboag river to said manhole near the Point of Rocks, twelve inches in diameter from said manhole easterly to Holbrook street, and fifteen inches in diameter from said manhole, westerly to the westerly end of said sewer.

ART. 5. To see if the town will authorize the taking of private land of the owners above named, or of any right therein, for the construction of said sewer and give any direction to the Selectmen relative thereto.

ART. 6. To see if the town will reconsider the vote passed at the last annual meeting under article 28 of the warrant, whereby $1800 was appropriated for the construction of a sewer in North Main street, and on the road to Three Rivers, or take any action relative thereto.

ART. 7. To see if the town will raise and appropriate money for the construction of the sewer described in article 4 of this warrant and for the payment of land damages in connection therewith.

And you are hereby directed to serve this warrant by posting up attested copies thereof at the different public places designated by the vote of the town, seven days at least before the holding of said meeting, and cause this warrant to be printed in the Palmer Journal at least two issues before the holding of said meeting.

Hereof fail not and make due return of this warrant, with your doings thereon, to the Town Clerk, on or before the holding of said meeting.

CUSHMAN STREET HEARING.

Relocated According to Plan Presented. Town to Pay Methodist Society $100.

The county commissioners held a public hearing in the selectmen's room in Memorial Hall Tuesday morning for the purpose of hearing arguments for and against the relocation of Cushman street, as petitioned for by E. J. Hughes and others.

The meeting was called to order by C. C. Spellman, chairman of the commission, at 10.15 a. m. Mr. Hughes was represented by Attorney D F. Dillon of Palmer; Rufus Cushman represented S. F. Cushman & Sons, and Frank King and William Underwood appeared for the interest of the Methodist church. Mr. Dillon spoke first and referred to old maps, dating as far back as 1830, to prove that there never has been any definite boundaries established and that the present layont of Cushman street has been used since that date. He also stated that twenty-one years ago, when the Methodist society moved its curbing back to its present location, they donated to the town a strip of land eight feet wide and the depth of their property on the north side of Cushman street. Mr. Dillon said that the interests of the petitioners were only on the south side of the street.

William Underwood spoke in behalf of the church and stated that the curbing was moved back only to accommodate S. F. Cushman when he presented the town with the fountain, and that the church did not donate the land to the town; also that they have fulfilled all the requirements of the law to hold possession of the property. Rufus Cushman, representing the Cushman interests, said that the present layout of the street is agreeable to them and that any change in the location would inconvenience them; he hoped that the commissioners would decide to leave it in its present position.

O. C. McCray, chairman of the board of selectmen, spoke, representing the town. He stated that the street in its present condition is as it should be and is agreeable to the selectmen. Mr. McCray thought that the damage to the Methodist society, if the street is left in its present location, should be borne by Mr. Hughes, who would be the most benefitted. Mr. King spoke in behalf of the Methodist society, giving more in detail the facts in connection with the strip of land. He said that it was still the property of the church and had not been donated to the town; that it was fenced in only a few years ago to fulfill the requirements of the law. Rev. Mr. Gage of the society next spoke, his contention being that the trustees of the church had no power to donate any of the property of the church to anyone without authority from the conference, which they did not have.

H. C. Norcross stated that the present layont of the street was satisfactory to him and that any relocation would damage his property. He hoped the commissioners would make no change. Mr. Underwood, when called upon by the commissioners to give what he considered a fair amount of damage to the church, placed the amount at $300. William Anderson, a former assessor and selectman, said that he had heard several state their opinion as to the value of the strip of land, and he considered $50 was a fair price. Charles Smith, one of the petitioners, said that when S. F. Cushman built and gave the fountain to the town it greatly increased the value and appearance of the church property to have the street in its present location, and that the opinion of the public, both at that time and the present, is that the church property and town are so benefitted that the church should donate the strip of land to the town. Mr. Smith stated that that was what the church intended to do at the time the fonntain was bnilt, bnt had not given a permanent deed.

The commissioners then called for an adjournment to go and look the street over and return for a final hearing. On the retnrn Rev. Mr. Gage said that the interest of the church was not for money alone, and that the sum of $100 would reimburse the church for land damage. Attorney Dillon then withdrew his argument that the land had been donated to the town and said that he considered Mr. Gage's proposition a fair one. No one else cared to make any statements and the meeting adjonrned.

The commissioners later voted to relocate the street according to the plan prepared by the engineer who had made the measurements, and awarded the Methodist church $100 land damage, to be paid by the town. Mr. Hnghes, being the abutter, receives the land on the sonth side of the street and will continne the building of his new block.

CHANGES AT THE ACADEMY.

New Courses of Study Adopted. Athletics Likely to Take a Boom.

A meeting of the committee of Monson Academy was held Monday to consider changes in the conrses of study recommended by the new principal, Mr. Dewing. The changes will affect all courses and will bring the Latin-scientific and the classical np to the college entrance preparatory requirements. The acaedmic conrse is changed so as to give those who do not intend to go to college a broader education. The changes were accepted as recommended.

The school has opened this year with renewed interest, and Cushman Hall has a number of new students. The new schedule is greatly appreciated, the hours of study being from 8.40 in the morning nntil 12, and from 1 30 in the afternoon to 2.40. Mr. Dewing is greatly interested in the athletics of the school, as shown by his talk to the members of the athletic association at their first meeting Wednesday afternoon. He found the athletic association in poor condition; there were no officers and no managers or captains of any of the teams, the various branches being at a standstill. A new method of obtaining funds for athletics is to be inaugurated, Mr. Dewing's plan being to interest the alnmni in the association, having a graduate president and treasurer and selling season tickets to all games to the alumni, the tickets making them members of the association. The alumni will be canvassed as soon as possible, and their hearty cooperation is expected. The new method will avoid the always nnpleasant subscription paper and will be safer and saner. New officers of the association were elected, as follows: President, Joseph E. Kerigan; vice president, Harold E. Shaw; secretary, Earl Taylor; treasurer, Robert Taylor; football manager, John Leahy; track team, Robert Fuller; basketball, Carl Sweet; baseball, Edward P. Dewing. New schednles for the season will be arranged at once. William M. Lee (Dartmouth) of Malden has charge of all athletics, and is also physical director. He is an able man in this line, and the life of athletics in the school now depends much on the snccess of the new plan for obtaining funds.

UNIQUE WHIST PARTY.

Miss Holmes and Miss Wingate Royally Entertain at Golf Clubhouse.

The souvenir bridge party given by Miss Holmes and Miss Wingate Wednesday afternoon at the Quaboag clubhouse was a delightful as well as a very unique affair. The attendance was larger than at any previous party this season, there being forty-four in all. Gnests were present from Washington, D. C., Hartford, Ct., and Springfield, as well as from Palmer and Monson.

Upon arrival the guests were greeted by the unusual sight of a bona-fide Christmas tree in September, which completely filled the huge fireplace in one end of the room. The tree glittered and sparkled with the many decorations, while from its branches came tantalizing glimpses of packages wrapped in vari-colored papers and tied with ribbons to match. A profusion of golden-rod all about the room lent a distinctive touch of color in pleasing contrast to the Christmas green.

After playing a stated time a delicious lunch was served consisting of sandwiches, cakes, candies and punch, this being under the direct personal supervision of Mrs. Ralph Tucker, who is rapidly winning recognition as Monson's foremost caterer. The name of the lady with the highest score was then read, and she was asked to step forward and choose from the branches of the tree the gift which most met her fancy from among the fascinating and many-hued packages of every size and shape which greeted the eye. The winner in this instance was Mrs. Harold Brainerd of Palmer. The other names were then read until each lady bore off a prize. There were no duplicates, and each lady seemed to think her own quite the best.

Celebrated 83d Birthday.

William Sutcliffe celebrated his 83d birthday at his home on the Brimfield road Sunday. A large number of relatives and friends were present and the occasion was enjoyed by all. Mr. Sutcliffe was born in England in 1826, but came to this country when he was 16 years of age. He lived a short while in New Jersey, and then went to Warren, from which place he came to Monson in 1846, where he has since lived. He was employed for a time in the North Monson factory and in the Lyons mill, bnt he soon engaged in farming and moved on a farm on the Brimfield road, where he has lived for 51 years. Mr. Sutcliffe was a student of Monson Academy in the old building which was rebuilt and later burned down. He was a member of the school committee for over 20 years until he resigned eight years ago. In 1863 he married Miss Sophy Pratt of Belchertown; he has one son, Harry Sutcliffe of this town and three daughters, Mrs R. G. Shumway and Mrs. Fred C. Letter of this town and Mrs W. S. T. Fitz of West Brookfield, and several grandchildren, all of whom were present Sunday. Mr. Sutcliffe is well known and well liked. For a man of his years he is well preserved, being able to do the regular duties about his farm.

Firemen's Annual Clambake

The seventh annual clambake of the Monson fire department was held at Gibbs' Crossing, near Ware, Labor Day. It was attended by the entire fire department and several invited guests. Chief Needham acted as toastmaster; ex-Chief Murphy, Selectman McCray and several members of the department spoke briefly. Senator A. D. Norcross, the oldest living chief of the department, gave an exceedingly interesting speech on the "Commonwealth of Massachusetts." The dinner was served by William Rohan of Ware and all present agreed that it was an excellent bake. It is hoped another will be held next year.

Death of Mrs. Ellen McEwen.

Mrs. Ellen McEwen, 73, died Wednesday morning at 5 30 at the home of her son, Wilbert O. McEwen, on Bridge street of old age. She had been in poor health for some time. She was born in Enfield, Ct., bnt had lived in Monson for 16 years. Her husband, James McEwen, who was a veteran of the Civil War, died in this town 11 years ago. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Carrie T. Green of Hoboken, N. J., and Mrs. Ada Hyde of New York city, and one son, Wilbert O. McEwen of this town. The funeral was held this morning at 10, Rev. J. M. Gage officiating. Burial was in the Springfield cemetery..

Received Painful Injuries.

Thomas Lynch, who is employed by Contractor J. N. Graves on the new Norcross block on Main street, had a narrow escape from serious injury yesterday morning Mr. Lynch was at work on the ground floor, and in some way lost his balance and fell backwards, landing on a pile of granite stones about 10 feet below. He was removed to his home on Park avenne, and was attended by Dr J S. McQuaid. No bones were broken, and no internal injuries were found. Mr. Lynch is resting comfortably but will be confined to the house for some time.

Rufus C. Murray, who resigned his position as night policeman a few weeks ago and took a position in Boston, will return to Monson and resume his duties here. Mr. Murray's work has always been satisfactory and the public is pleased that he has decided to return.

"The Final Settlement" will be the attraction in Memorial Hall next Monday evening. This is a drama, which is said to be a simple, terse and rational presentment of social conditions among the highest classes of present-day American life. It will be presented here with an excellent cast.

Mrs. Margaret Kallaugher, who was employed as cook at the Century Hotel, suffered an attack of paralysis last week and died from its effects Sunday afternoon. The body was removed to her home in South Hadley Sunday night. The funeral was held from her home Wednesday afternoon at 2 30.

Arthur S. Graves left yesterday for Sharon, Penn., where he has taken a position as physical director and assistant superintendent of the P. H. Bnhl Club, which has a membership of 900 and a bnilding of $250,000 cost. Mr. Graves is an '05 graduate of Monson Academy and an '09 gradnate of Springfield Training School.

The town has been without street lights for the past week and much dissatisfaction has been expressed by the public. The reason for leaving the town in darkness as given by the electric light company is that they are unable to get the proper kind of globes, and that the high power carried by the Monson circnit has burned out so many that the company is fearful of bnrning ont all of them. This difficulty will be overcome as soon as the company can get more globes.

The new concrete bridge on Bridge street, which was under construction from July 15 until Sept. 4, has been opened to traffic, but in its present condition is far from satisfactory. The finish is very rough and not at all like the plan called for. The contractors, P. A. Breglio & Co. of Springfield, were notified by the selectmen that the bridge was unsatisfactory, and P. A. Breglio came and looked the bridge over, informing the selectmen that he would guarantee to put the bridge in first-class condition, strictly according to specifications. The town has not yet paid anything on the bridge and will not do so until it is put in satisfactory condition.

WARREN.

Death of Homer A. Tidd.

Homer. A. Tidd, 63, died Monday morning from heart failure, after a long illness with Bright's disease. Mr. Tidd was born in Warren, where he had always lived. He early learned the trade of wheelwright, which he followed until about a year ago, when ill-health caused him to give up active work. He was married in 1870 to Louisa C. [illegible] of Sandridge. Wh n the First Congregational church caught fire in 1874, Mr. Tidd, who was janitor, was terribly burned and for some time his recovery was doubtful. He always carried scars from his burns. He was a member of the First Congregational church, and a past regent of Knowles council, Royal Arcanum. Besides his widow, he is survived by a brother, Samuel E Tidd of Northampton and a sister, Miss Mary Tidd of Taunton. The funeral was held at the house Wednesday afternoon at 2 and burial was in Pine Grove cemetery.

The Hitchcock Free Academy has commenced with a good attendance. There are two new teachers, Mr. Arey of Lynn, a gradnate of Harvard, and Miss Caldwell of Maine, who is a graduate of Colby College.

The regnlar meeting of the grange was held Tnesday evening. There was a piano solo by Mrs. Garmes, readings by Miss May Moore, Fred Lawrence and Herman Sprague, songs by Miss Lillian Stanton and Miss Maud Bedell, and a paper by Miss Tarbell.

Mrs. Brackett entertained the Wednesday afternoon club of Fiskdale at a golden tea this week. The tea-table was beantifully decorated with white and gold, the flowers being goldenrod, and favors were distributed from a Jack Horner pie artistically made of yellow paper.

"Now I lay me" is a goner. The West end mothers' committee of Chicago has condemned it. One of the West-end mothers quoted the lines: Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray the Lord my soul to keep; and if I shonld die before I wake, I pray the Lord my soul to take. "The idea of death during the night is horrible and I never use it," added the West-end mother, amid applause from the other mothers. It is high time the lines were modernized, for although lullabies and such trifles are not approved by scientific mothers they are still used here and there Children might be tanght to repeat: Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray all germs outside to keep; If any come before I wake, some disinfectant I will take.

hall, and to-day he could well fill even Mechanics', presumably. Meanwhile, tradesmen promise to utilize his exploit for the sale of their goods. One enterprising paint dealer posts to-day a bulletin in his store window that Peary found the north pole in good preservation because it had been painted with So and So's paint, and if he does not have a new brand of cigars or a prize bull named for him, he will be fortunate. It will be noticed that there is not the rigid scrutiny of Peary's statement of discovery that there is of Cook's, which illnstrates the high standing which Peary already has won in the estimation of the American people. Bnt then he has been at it a long while and Marie Ahnighto Peary, his daughter born inside of the polar circle, is 16 years old As a New England college man (Brnnswick-Bowdoin), Peary has a local hold whichjhas always helped him.

It by no means follows from the non-observance of Labor Day on Monday by a labor parade that the labor cause is losing its strength. At the same time, it is true that the virnience of the attack of the spirit of organization has declined. If the contest were to be forced at the state house before the committee on labor the labor men would show up as strongly as ever. But when it comes to a demonstration of their strength by tramping through the streets, the freshness has worn off, just as it has from the St. Patrick's Day parade and the members believe that they can render the canse just as much service in a less laborious way for their muscles. At first there was a belief that the public would be impressed by the sight of their large nnmber, and there is no donbt that the idea was sonnd. Bnt familiarity has worn off the first impression. If any parade falls below its predecessor in nnmber of men marching, then it can be said that interest is declining. On the other hand, to keep above the high water mark of the preceding year every year, is an almost impossible task. So it is nothing against the labor movement that it had no street parade this year.

Councillor Bemis of the second district, who is chairman of the new commission on rural homes for city people, has not begun the public work of his commission yet. It is not likely that there will be any soft clerkship for anybody. The genuine work of the commission will probably begin soon. LANDON.

Flight of the Spirit.

A case recorded by Plutarch would seem to support the theory that during periods of protracted insensibility the spirit of the sleeper, freed from the body, wanders away to realms and scenes not conceivable by the ordinary senses. A man named Thespius, he tells us, fell from a great height and was picked up to all appearances dead. There were no external wounds about him, but the physicians were satisfied of the fact of the decease. Arrangements were made for his burial, but on the third day after his fall he revived, much to the consternation of his friends. In a short time it became quite evident that the whole tenor of the man's life had changed. Previously his character was that of a reprobate and a vicious man, but after his insensibility he ever followed after virtue. On being asked the reason of the change, Thespius related that during his long sleep his spirit had been liberated from his body and had soared away to a strange land, where it had joined a whole company of other spirits. His past life was disclosed to him in all its hideousness, and the glorious capabilities which were before him were revealed in such a manner as to make him ambitious of attaining them.

The Hearts of Sam Houston.

In the "Memoirs of a Senate Page" Christian F. Eckloff recalls the years just prior to the outbreak of the civil war, when Sumner, Wade, Douglas, Hamlin, Houston, John P. Hale, Breckinridge, Thomas and Jefferson Davis were debating the great questions upon which the north and south were at variance. They were an imposing body of men, mostly clad in black broadcloth and wearing high silk hats.

But there was one senator who refused to be dignified—Senator Houston of Texas. "Day after day," says Mr. Eckloff, "during spare moments he sat there in his seat carving hearts out of soft pine wood. They were pieces about the size of the hand. When he had completed one of these works of art he would summon a page and, pointing toward some fair spectator in the gallery, would say, 'Give this to that lady up there with General Sam Houston's compliments.'"

Mr. Eckloff remembers Houston as one of the gentlest and kindest of men.

Hard to Choose.

"Why can't she make a choice between her suitors?"

"Well, one of them is a press agent. His language is very attractive. But the other is a traveling salesman, and he treats her as if she were a big buyer."—Kansas City Journal.

Going Some.

"Yes, sir," said old man Braggard, "as soon as I see them birds I went into the house and took down the old blunderbuss and pegged at 'em, and, by gorry, I brought down thutty birds to one shot. Can ye beat that?"

"Ya-as," drawled Uncle Si Peavey. "You know Bill Wiggins' frog pond?"

"Yes," said old man Braggard.

"What of it?"

"Waal, I went down there the other night after sundown to shoot a couple of bullfrogs with my old shotgun," said Uncle Si. "There was 5,000 of 'em settled on them there lily pads, and I just lifted that there gun to my shoulder and let her go."

"S'pose you did," said old man Braggard. "How does that affect my bird story?"

"Beats it all holler," retorted Uncle Si. "The minute my gun went off them bull derned 5,000 bullfrogs croaked."—Harper's Weekly.

Take Life Like a Man.

It is a pitiable thing to see a young man whining over his lot in life and excusing indifference and inaction because of hard luck or some cruel fate which has put stumbling blocks in his way.

No matter what your environment or what you may be called upon to go through, face life like a man, without whining. Turn your face to the sun, your back to the shadows, and look the world in the face without wincing Make the most of your situation. See the beauties in it and not the ugly features. This is the way to improve an unfortunate environment.—Success Magazine.

Old Time Salutations.

It was the custom in France in the seventeenth century to kiss a lady when saluting her and continued in common usage in England for a hundred years later. Royal salutations in France required extreme formality. One saluted the bed on entering the royal bedchamber, and in approaching the apartments of the king all bend covering, the skullcap of priests included, had to be removed. In saluting queens and princesses one kissed the hem of the robe.

One Trouble Less.

"I have had indigestion all day," complained the man with the bay window to the poet. "Do you ever suffer from indigestion?"

"Indigestion is largely due to eating, isn't it?" asked the poet wistfully.

"Yes," said the bay windowed man.

"No," said the poet, "I never have it."—New York Press.

GIVING OUT.

The Struggle Discourages Many a Citizen Of Palmer.

Around all day with an aching back;
Can't rest at night;
Enough to make any one "give ont."
Doan's Kidney Pills will give renewed life.
They will cure the backache;
Cure every kidney ill.
Here is Palmer proof that this is so:

Mrs. J. M. Barton, living at 10 South Main St. Palmer, Mass., says: "My faith in Doan's Kidney Pills is just as strong to-day as it was when I recommended them in 1896. Before this remedy came to my attention I was troubled a great deal and had been for a long time with severe pains through my loins. When going up or down stairs, and when I sat in one position for any length of time or did any extra work, my suffering would be acute. I finally began nsing Doan's Kidney Pills and received great relief from the first. I continued taking them and it was not long before all signs of kidney trouble had disappeared."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

25,000 Pairs of Blankets

On Our Shelves and in Our Stock Rooms Are the Foundation Upon Which We Start

A Great September Event

No store depending upon its retail outlet alone could hope to dispose of so enormous a stock. That is where our large wholesale business works to the advantage of our customers. Where other stores buy a hundred blankets we buy a thousand. As a consequence of such quantity buying we secure the lowest prices manufacturers will sell to anyone for. The prices we quote below are based on this lowest cost and are special for this event. It needs no argument to show that now is the time to buy all the blankets you need for the winter.

Our Leader for This Event is Our $5 Blanket

It is the best blanket we ever sold for five dollars. Made of fine soft wool, with cotton warp—It is a fact that a little cotton makes a blanket wear better and clean better—This quality cannot be bought anywhere else in Springfield—nor in the United States, so far as we know—under $6.50.

A Great Variety of Styles and Qualities Are Included in the Following Prices

All in standard weights and sizes, and all at from 10 per cent to 25 per cent less than usual prices for the same qualities.

THORNDIKE CELEBRATES THE VICTORY.

Champion Baseball Team Given Rousing Sendoff After Winning Deciding Game on Labor Day.

The Thoradike Baseball Club and its friends celebrated Monday's victory over Bondsville in the Palmer town league, which gave the Thorndike team the title of "Champions," with a rousing bonfire and lots of red fire in the evening. Every person in Thorndike was interested in the outcome of the last game, and the satisfaction over the home team's victory was plainly manifest. Everybody turned out to the celebration, and the square in front of the Exchange block was a mass of humanity, cheering, singing, etc. Each player on the team received an ovation from the crowd as he happened to be recognized.

The team may well feel proud of the outcome of the series. It held the lead from the start, and the players showed that they were the fastest in the bunch. Of course they had their off days, like many of the other teams, but as a whole they played winning ball from the start This season's venture has shown that a local league can be successful; all that is needed is to live up to the rules regarding local players, and play good clean ball. The Thorndike team has been well supported financially, the attendance at the games being very large, and the association has a neat sum in the treasury which will be divided among the players with the exception of Wells and Mayforth, who will be presented with a purse. There has been an unusual attendance at games on the part of the ladies, and they have been among the most enthusiastic supporters of the team. There has been some suggestion that the Thorndikes play a series of games with the Bondsville and Three Rivers teams for a purse of $100, but it has been decided to keep money out of the game and play for sport only.

It would be a hard matter to select any individual player as a mark for special credit; all have played the game for all they were worth, and all are entitled to a share in the credit of winning the top place in the league. The outlook for another season is good, and the plans now are to put a team in the field in 1910 on the same basis as that of this year. The members of the team and many of their friends have objected to the title of "Indians," which was at once accorded them when the league opened, but there is no occasion for any ill feeling, as the title was not given in disparagement, but simply as a nickname.

Household Hints.

CURRY OF MUTTON. POTATO BORDER.

Boil potatoes in salted water and press through a ricer round the edge of a heated platter. Or press the potato into a bowl, season with butter and then lay round as a border. Form the potato in a circle or a square, using a silver knife for modeling it. The white flakes of riced potato look appetizing but most people agree with the man who said he would as soon eat excelsior when taste is considered, hence it is better to season it.

While the potatoes are boiling cut one pint of cold meat cubes or thin, small slices. Prepare a sauce by creaming two level tablespoons each of butter and flour and adding one cup of boiling water. Cook five minutes then season with one-half teaspoon of salt and one level teaspoon of curry powder. Heat the mutton in the sauce and turn into the centre of the potato; serve hot. Curry is a favorite seasoning in hot climates and is especially good for summer dishes. Do not spoil this dish by having the potato half cold. Set the platter in the hot closet or oven if it cannot be served at once.

Certain rules for temperature of food hold good in dog days as well as midwinter and no one should be given excuse to repeat the old plaint that everything was hot but the soup and everything cold but the ice water.

Thorndike Lands Pennant.

The Palmer Town League closed Monday a successful aeason with Thoradike on top and Three Rivers "runner up," while Bondsville and Palmer took third and fourth places respectively. The attendance at the games has been good and each team has quite a little sum in the treasury, with hopes of starting the league again next year Although there has been some poor hall playing, there has also been some fine work, and the people in the town are satiafied with home talent haseball snch as haa prevailed in the past season. The standing of the teams for the season follows:

Clubs.	Won.	Lost.	P. C.
Thorndike,	8	4	.666
Three Rivers,	7	5	.583
Bondsville,	6	6	.500
Palmer,	3	9	.250

Baseball Briefs.

Smith got a hit Monday.

The Thorndikes land the pennant.

The crowds at the Monday gamea were record breakers.

Bowler's wild heave to first in the third was the cause of the Thorndikes three runs.

"Sam" Cole and Lalave each got a home-run Monday; this is the second for Sam.

The Brouillette brothers of the Metropolitaus lowered the fielding average again Monday.

Umpire Melz lorf officlated at both games Monday with perfect satisfaction to the teams and fans.

Belchertown defeated Indian Orchard, 13 to 8, Saturday in a loosely played game in the latter place.

"Gibel" Sullivan of the Ponies, who hit so hard in the previona game, didn't get a hit Monday. Hard luck.

Snow didn't get a hit Monday, the only man in the Tri Streamers-Metropolitan game who failed to connect.

Mayforth was the atar of the Thorndike-Bondsville game Monday, getting two hits, two runs and two stolen bases.

Leary, the new recruit for the Ponies, had his second finger split while in practice but showed his nerve in catching the game in good style.

Dr. Cook's North Pole Trip

DR. FREDERICK A. COOK, the conrageous explorer who has gained undying fame by his discovery of the north pole, is a resident of Brooklyn. For years he has given his attention to arctic explorations and in 1891-2 was surgeon of the Peary arctic expedition and in 1897-9 surgeon of the Belgian arctic expedition. He has received numerous decorations from the geographical societies of Europe for his research and writhings in the polar field.

Dr. Cook started on his present expedition in the summer of 1907, sailing from North Sydney, C. B., on board the schooner John R. Bradley, built by John R. Bradley of New York, who financed the expedition.

The party was reenforced with sledges, dogs and arctic equipment at Etah, Greenland, whence it sailed March 3, 1908. Dr. Cook's plan was to set aside all tradition by making the dash to the pole during the winter months, when the elements are considered least advantageous for an advance northward.

Without a big ship, without the company of a single white man, Dr. Cook's dash for the north pole was made under incredible hardships, and he had not been heard from in more than a year and had been practically given up for lost. But his indomitable courage carried him through where whole ships' companies have come to grief.

The one man who started with him, Rudolph Francke, was left to guard the supplies at Annootok, twenty miles north of Etah, west Greenland. This man remained alone for several months and then seized the first opportunity to leave, when Commander Robert E. Peary arrived with his expedition on board the ship Erik. Cook had sent one letter to Francke by Eskimo messenger before Peary arrived, but if he sent any more or returned for supplies after Francke left it is not known. According to Francke, Peary insisted on obtaining a large number of valuable blue fox skins and narwhal horns which had been left at the supply station by Dr. Cook and which were expected to defray the cost of his return from the arctic.

There was some mystery about this affair when the news of it came out on Francke's arrival in New York, and charges and countercharges flew back and forth with increasing bitterness between the Cook adherents and the friends of Peary. As month after month passed without further sign from Cook there was talk of a relief expedition. Admiral Winfield S. Schley, the hero of the Greely relief rescue, was named as one of the leading figures in rasing the money necessary for the movement to find Dr. Cook, and a short time ago an expedition started to seek the missing explorer.

Until recently no word was received from Dr. Cook since March 17, 1908. He was then on the polar ice north of Cape Thomas Hubbard, about 560 miles from the pole. He was the only white man, with several Eskimos and a big equipment of dogs, sleds and supplies. He was then on the eve of making a desperate dash for the pole over the ice. He was making a straight course for the pole and said that if he were lucky he might reach his supply station at Annootok by the end of May.

Dr. Cook's dash was hastily conceived. He started on a hunting trip in the spring of 1907 with John R. Bradley, a wealthy New Yorker who had hunted game in all corners of the world except the polar regions. Mr. Bradley bought a Gloucester fishing schooner with an auxiliary gasoline engine and in this vessel went north. Dr. Cook being in command.

The hunting trip ended in the latter part of August, 1907, and on Aug. 26 the schooner stopped at Annootok, on the northwest coast of Greenland. Almost up to the last it was thought that Dr. Cook would return to New York, but he decided to remain and make a one man attempt to reach the pole. One of the crew of the schooner, Rudolph Francke, a young German American, volunteered to stay at Annootok and guard the supplies.

The first week the two men began building a house for the long winter's habitation. Then they hunted for a month, laying in a stock of meat. The thermometer went down steadily with the approach of the long arctic night, and while they were hunting it was constantly between 30 or 40 degrees below zero.

They spent the winter preparing the sledges and the supplies for Dr. Cook's trip and discovered a way of preparing dog food which gave Dr. Cook a great advantage in weight over all previous explorers. During January the thermometer registered 73 degrees below zero, but Dr. Cook and his man went out to look for some people who were supposed to have been shipwrecked in Flagler bay, but found nobody.

The last two weeks were spent in testing out the sledges, the dogs and the supplies, and on Feb 26 Dr. Cook started for the farthest north. Francke went with him as far as Flagler bay, and then Dr. Cook sent him back to Annootok on March 3, 1908, to guard the winter quarters. It was nearly a year later that Peary reached the neighborhood of Annootok, where Francke was keeping his lone vigil and who claims that Dr. Cook had ordered him to go back by one of the whalers' ships at the end of the preceding June.

It is no new thing for Dr. Cook to attempt difficult and extremely hazardous feats of exploration. In every case in which he has set out to discover new paths in the wilderness of uncharted seas or mountains he has displayed a dash and resourcefulness which marked him as extraordinary even among explorers. It was this valiant courage and resourcefulness, added to a very vigorous physique, which his many friends in Brooklyn had in mind when they assured anxious inquirers that Dr. Cook would appear somewhere in Norway or Greenland alive and well.

Dr. Cook is a married man and has a home in Brooklyn, where his wife and two children live. He is not often home, having been engaged in exploration work on and off for the past eighteen years. Dr. Cook was born at Callicoon Depot, a very quiet little hamlet in Sullivan county, N. Y., on June 10, 1865. He received his early education in Brooklyn and graduated with the degree of doctor of medicine from New York university in 1890. He was married in 1902 to Mary Fidell Hunt in Brooklyn.

Exploration at both ends of the earth and near the top of its highest mountains has attracted Dr. Cook for years. In 1891 and 1892, just after his graduation from the medical college, he served as surgeon of the Peary expedition to Greenland. In 1897-9 he was surgeon of the Belgian expedition to the antarctic. He tried to ascend Mount McKinley, in Alaska, the highest peak on the North American continent, in 1903 and failed. In 1906 he tackled M was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Coughs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do you good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1 00 per bottle by The Quinsby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

FOUND DEAD ON TRAIN.

Man Taken From Car at Palmer Monday Morning.

WAS WALTER A. FOX OF DORCHESTER

Heart Failure the Cause. Had Been in Apparent Good Health a Half Hour Before.

Walter A. Fox of Dorchester, a traveling salesman for the Wadsworth-Howland Company of Boston, died on the Boston and Albany train due in Palmer from the east at 10 50 Monday morning. Fox had a ticket for Pittsfield and was apparently in good health only a short time before reaching Palmer, as he passed through the train a half hour before. As the train approached the station he was seen to be ill, and employes were summoned to take him from the train, but he was dead when they reached him.

The body was removed to Phillips' undertaking rooms and Medical Examiner Jacob P. Schneider summoned; he pronounced death due to heart disease. Fox leaves a mother in Dorchester. The body was taken to that place Tuesday by friends.

KILLED BY THE CARS.

Warren Man Struck by Freight Train Saturday Evening.

Stanislaw Marawiec, 40, of Warren, was struck by an extra freight train Saturday evening at 6 20, in front of the toolhouse west of the Warren depot, and died in the ambulance in Springfield, while on the way to the Mercy hospital.

Marawiec, with a companion, was standing in front of the toolhouse when the train approached. It whistled twice and Marawiec's companion jumped to safety, but he moved backward toward the track. The emergency and air brakes were applied, but before the train could be stopped Marawiec was struck in the right side by the wooden fender on the locomotive and was hurled 10 feet in the air. The train stopped within a few car lengths, and the man was found on the track unconscious, much to the surprise of the crew. Dr. J E. Dalton was quickly summoned, and upon examination found that the right side was badly crushed and there were severe cuts and bruises on the head and right arm. He saw the man was in a precarious condition and accompanied him on the train to Springfield.

Marawiec, with his brother John, worked in the mill in Warren. He had been in this country only four months. He leaves a widow and five children in Austria. Medical Examiner F. L. Bates viewed the body at the hospital Saturday evening.

BONES UNIDENTIFIED.

No Clue to Remains Found in Holland Woodlot Last Week.

Despite the most careful search nothing new has been learned concerning the skeleton which was found on Wednesday of last week on a heap of brush in the midst of a wild section of the town of Holland, a mile from any human habitation, where a gang of choppers had worked last winter. The selectmen of the town and the state police have been at work on the case, but so far no trace of any clue has been found. It was thought that the employer of the chopping gang might possibly help, if any of his gang were missing or unaccounted for, but he can shed no light on the case. With nothing but the bones and two shirts which had been worn by the man when he lay down or was put there, to start with, the prospects for solving the mystery are not bright.

What Once Was.

Recollections of Sixty Years Ago.

Lying along the valley of the little Quinebaug River is a small town of one hundred and fifty inhabitants. There are only three of the older generations now living. Many of the younger ones are scattered from Maine to California. Strangers must look upon this little hamlet with compassion, but the few left are apparently happy and contented. There are neither steam nor trolley cars to disturb the peace and quiet of this restful little town. In wandering over the hills and around the pond one can find spots of real beauty. Along the pond, or lake, are trees profusely covered with grape vines, and ivy's thick bushes and dwarfish trees. The shore of the lake is sandy, and the water shallow, making it a safe place for the little ones. Occasionally of an afternoon could be seen a party rowing, or a lone fisherman trying his luck at angling Less than a mile away is another pond differing entirely from the first. There the bank is high and treacherous, covered with alders and white birch. The trees are a tangled mass of grape and other running vines. In the fall the boys would climb the trees like monkeys after the grapes. The trees would bend and sway with the weight of the boys, and at times it seemed as if they would break and precipitate them into the black muddy water beneath.

It is delightful to take in the exhilarating air, to watch the thin wreaths of smoke rising from distant homes. The hills are alpine in their cool serenity; its many pastures, where one can gather quantities of swamp pinks and shad blossoms.

There is now no hum of machinery nor ring of hammer in the town. The only sounds that break the stillness are the occasional lowing of the cattle, the murmuring of brooks and songbing of the pines.

In years past this little town was as prosperous and thriving as any of its size. For many years there was a woolen mill owned by a Mr. Fuller, who employed between thirty and forty hands, but in 1850 it was destroyed by fire. Some of the old brick ruins are still standing, hidden from view by a tangled mass of wild flowers and running vines. About 1820 there was a stage coach route, running on the old turnpike from Boston to Hartford, which stopped at the old tavern; its coming was announced by the blowing of a horn as it came into view at the noon hour, discharging its passengers for dinner and taking a fresh relay of horses.

Many of the farms lying in the valley were fertile, yielding large crops. The barns were filled with hay and grain, while the cellars were well stored with potatoes, cabbage and other vegetables in bins, apples and cider in barrels, as well as pork and beef. Few farmers had any regular supply of fresh meat, except at pig killing time in the fall, or at the slaughter of a lamb in the spring or in winter of a steer. Then there were only rag carpets on the best rooms, woven by some energetic housewife, and mats of woolen rags. The bedchambers were bare of only what was absolutely necessary, and often in a winter's storm it was not uncommon for the boys and men to feel the snow falling on their faces or find patches of it on their beds, for it found an easy entrance, being sifted through loosely-made windows or poorly-shingled roof. At bed times the andirons in the fireplaces were drawn aside and the brands and coals piled high upon the hearth and thickly strewn with ashes. When this was properly done enough embers were found to build a new fire in the morning. In many of the kitchens were to be found in the fall festoons of dried apples and red peppers, bunches of ears of seed corn, dried bouquets of sage, mint and other herbs. In one corner stood the spinning wheel, which was a necessary article in those days. Adjoining the kitchen was usually a back room, or dairy room, where the cheese press and tubs stood. There, too, were shelves on which lay ripening cheeses, turned daily and polished with butter. In most of these homes there was no luxury surely, but plenty of good wholesome food and raiment.

There was never any store here. The farmer, often with his wife, was seen bound for a neighboring town several miles away. In a box behind the seat there were baskets of eggs and a firkin of butter, to be exchanged for tea, sugar and other "honghten" goods.

In those days the town of Holland had, not unlike the neighboring towns, its school districts. There were four of them, being located as nearly as might be at the extreme corners of the town. Children as young as three years of age attended school in summer. The winter terms were taught by men. One of these teachers, who was a great favorite with both young and old, taught for forty years, most of the time in his native town. One secret of Mr. Blodgett's success was in the fact that he was a strict disciplinarian in school hours; yet he was ever ready when school was not in session to engage with the boys in all kinds of sports prevalent in those days. Now all the children in Holland go to one school and have ample room.

This little hamlet was at its best in summer with its green mowings and rich pasture lands. The numerous springs and the dewy air kept the pastures and mowings fresh and green. Many of the yards and gardens were filled with old-fashioned flowers, rose bushes and other shrubs, exhaling their sweet perfumes. The deep wells at the back door, the beautiful orchards on the hillside or hollow, the chestnut groves, in the pastures the singing of many birds, the chattering of squirrels, all lent their enchantment.

There were two churches in Holland, a Baptist and a Congregational. The Baptist church was a very old-fashioned one, with square uncushioned pews, each family enclosed as in a pen, with a wooden button on the pew door outside. The floors were uncarpeted. A gallery ran around three sides of the church, the one opposite the pulpit being reserved for the choir. This church was given to the town in 1839 to be used as a townhouse, but it was several years before it was made over. Mr. Goodell and Mr. Marcy were all that were left of the remaining members of that society. It was specified in the gift that it should always be opened without charge to any religious organization that might wish to hold meetings. The first Congregational church was built in 1835 and was burned in 1856. The present little church on the summit of the hill was built in 1859. The bell rope has always hung from the porch outside. A number of years ago a prominent lawyer of Worcester was riding through the town with a friend, and when opposite the church he espied the bell rope on the porch. Alighting from the carriage he went onto the porch and gave the rope a pull. The bell sounded so sweet he pulled it again and again. Soon he saw several men running toward him. As they drew near he held out his hand and said: "How do you do, gentlemen, glad to meet you. I couldn't resist pulling the rope," and turning gave it another. Peal after peal rang out in the morning air. The sheds in the rear of the church were, and still are, for the shelter of the teams of the country people. Here every Sabbath gathered twice a day all the faithful ones to bear their beloved pastor. Those who lived several miles away either brought a lunch or went to the tavern for it, as the second service began at 2 o'clock. There were no thirty-minute sermons, but an hour and a half, and often longer. The church was, and still is, warmed by stoves in the winter. In the summer the women carried sprigs of dill or caraway seed to nibble on to ward off slumber. The men found it hard to sit so long in a hot, stuffy church, after being out in the fresh air all the week, and many were dozing a greater part of the time. The flies had a trick of running across the "good deacon's" bald head during his slumbers, much to the amusement of the children. In strict households Sunday was the most wearisome day of the week. The burying ground in the valley, so thickly set with memorials, speaks of those who have passed over the river.

Not far from the church are half a dozen houses, and among them is the tavern, a large rambling old house, where for many years young and old, from far and near, would go for straw rides and sleighing parties. "Marm" Kinney, the landlady, was very popular and her guests were royally entertained. She was famous throughout the region for her culinary art. After the death of the aged couple their only son and his wife kept open house until the untimely death by drowning of the son. It is no longer used as a public house. The old sign still swings back and forth in the wind, causing it to creak and groan with a dismal sound.

The winter season was recreation time for the farmer. They would think nothing of riding a bitter cold night four or five miles away to indulge in a game of "High Low" or "Euchre." Pop corn, apples and cider were usually served after a game. Sometimes they would serve a more elaborate lunch, such as mince or pumpkin pie, doughnuts and cheese. Then there were other country frolics, such as spelling schools, in the schoolhouses, apple pearing bees, husking parties, sleighrides, and the like. Just after the Boston and Albany railroad was built one of the farmers had occasion to go some twelve miles away to the town of Palmer, and asked his aged father if he would like to go and see a steam train for the first time. As they approached the town they heard a whistle, and suddenly around the curve came a train; for a second the old gentleman looked, then grabbing his son by the arm said, "'Lisha, 'Lisha, git out of the way; its jest as liable to take this road as any."

This little village has an indefinable charm for those who remember the former occupants. Some have entirely disappeared. All the builders of these old homes have long since died; their children are scattered and strangers have taken their places. In a walk of two miles or more a person of sixty years will not pass a single house that sheltered the people whom he knew. Some of the home places have disappeared. Many who have wandered over the world find that the tranquil beauty of this scene lingers long in memory and will not be effaced. B. L. M

A Big Peach Orchard.

Many Palmer people have paid a visit recently to the famous peach orchard of Ethelbert Bliss in Wilbraham, and have been surprised at the amount and quality of the fruit when the dryness of the season is taken into consideration. A peach orchard in full fruit is a rare and pleasing sight, and the Bliss trees are hanging full of peaches in all stages of development, almost. Although he has been picking for some time Mr. Bliss says that the present is the best time for canning. Thousands of baskets have been shipped and other thousands are still to go. There are quantities of them and the prices are very reasonable. Visitors at the orchard are welcome, and there are always a generous number as long as the crop lasts.

HAMPDEN.

Arthur Jones has purchased a 40-horsepower four-cylinder automobile and is planning to make a business of carrying passengers.

W. J. Sessions was knocked down by a bicycle on the sidewalk near the post office Monday evening, receiving a cut above the eye, but fortunately no serious injuries.

Walker Holmes, accompanied by his parents, came to town Monday from Boston in their automobile. His aunt, Mrs. Louins Burleigh, went with them Tuesday to Williston Academy, Easthampton, where Walker Holmes is to study during the coming year.

TUMBLED FROM BRIDGE.

Man Falls Into River Late Saturday Night.

COMPANION THOUGHT HE DROWNED.

And Notified Police. But Victim Turned Up Later With a Claim of Attempted Robbery.

A sudden and unexpected plunge into the cold waters of the Quaboag river from the Central Vermont railroad bridge, failure to make any outcry to his companion and neglect to drown as the man was supposed to do, created not a little excitement in Palmer Saturday night. Later the presumed dead man showed up, alleging attempted robbery, relieving the officers from further search—for the present—for his corpse.

John Boutot is a woodchopper who is employed by a Mr. Moore, who is cutting ties in a woodlot near Mt Buniou, above the epileptic hospital. Saturday night he came to Palmer for supplies and started for the camp in company with Oliver Stone, about 18. The couple walked along the Central Vermont track, and in crossing the bridge over the river Boutot missed his footing and fell into the water. Young Stone heard him strike, but as there was no cry afterward or call for help Stone naturally supposed the man was drowned, as the water is deep at that point. He returned to the village and notified Night Officer Crimmins, who with others went to the spot and began a search for the body. After hunting for some time without results a party of men appeared and wanted to know what was going on. They were told, and then announced that Boutot was with them. They said that he had appeared at the camp dripping wet and complained of an attempt to rob him. Taking him along they had started to investigate, with the result above stated.

Herbert and Olga Stanger have been ill the past week.

Miss Caroline Stanger has been a recent visitor in Hartford.

There are 15 from here attending the Hitchcock Free Academy this year.

BRIMFIELD.

Louis S. Brown of the Massachusetts General hospital is spending his vacation at the home of Charles S. Tarbell.

Robert K. Shaw, librarian of the Worcester public library, was the guest of Miss Tarbell Wednesday and visited the Brimfield library.

Charles S. Whiting, editor of the Springfield Republican, has visited Brimfield this week, going to Steerage Rock and calling at the public library. Mr. Whiting, whose writings are a rare interpretation of nature, is the author of "Walks in New England" contained in the Brimfield library. Many of the chapters appeared in The Republican.

The Hitchcock Free Academy has opened with about 70 pupils. The preparatory class has been discontinued as a ninth grade is to be introduced into the Center grammar school. Manual training will be commenced next week. The turning lathe to be used is the gift of the class of '09. The ball-ground is being newly graded, and a tennis court has been laid out. More attention is to be given to sports and a track team has been organized. There are two new teachers, Miss Caldwell, a graduate of Colby College, and Frank L. Arey, a graduate of Harvard.

The committee appointed at the reunion of the Hitchcock Free Academy alumni association to promote the alumni fund held a meeting Saturday in Springfield in the office of W. W. McClench, president of the Mass. Mutual Life Insurance Company. All of the members were present. They are besides Mr. McClench, Harry E. Back of Danielsonville, Ct., who is president of the alumni association, chairman, Hartley R. Walker of Orange, Allen H. Warner of Springfield, John Hebard of Fiskdale, George M. Hitchcock of Brimfield and George F. Kenney, principal of the Academy. Charles S. Tarbell, treasurer of the Alumni Association, was also in attendance. The alumni fund was started some years ago by Mr. McClench. Much interest in promoting its increase was manifested at the recent reunion and the committee are undertaking an organized movement to reach all former pupils of the Academy as well as members of the Alumni Association, and to enlist all who have any interest in the Academy in enlarging its scope and usefulness through an increased endowment. It is felt that the movement will not only strengthen and extend the work of the Academy but bring the Alumni into close relations with the institution.

PALMER NEWS.

FAIR ATTRACTIONS.

Big Program of Entertainment Being Provided For Cattle Show.

Plans for the Palmer Fair are progressing rapidly and satisfactorily, and the managers are planning to give visitors the biggest and best list of attractions ever seen on the grounds. Not only on the grounds but in the hall will there be much worth seeing, if the present indications are any criterion, for already entries have begun to come in to Secretary Chandler of articles for competition in both departments of the hall—fruit and vegetables down stairs and the fancy work and fine arts department on the second floor. An indication of the fame of the Palmer Fair is shown by the fact that entries are already in from towns never before exhibiting.

For the amusement of the visitors a big program of events has been engaged; the list is much larger than ever before and the price paid will run over $1000. There are seven acts in the stage show: The Stubblefield Trio, two ladies and a man in some of the finest trapeze work known; the Norton Sisters, sensational aerial teeth whirling act; LaVardo, trapeze balancing; Morello Bros., head-to-head and hand-to-hand equilibrists; Clayton Brothers, comedy knockabont act; Youna, an unusnally clever Japanese juggler; and Bon Morse, eccentric bicyclist. Bon Morse was at Forest Lake last season and easily proved to those who saw him that he was the most clever of his kind. In addition to these the entertainment committee closed a contract last week with Quintard's Hippodrome Combination, which will add ten or a dozen acts to the program. These acts include the hiack stallion "Darmon," a high school and cake-walking animal which defeated 13 others in competition at Madison Square Garden, New York; "Sky Rocket," a high jumper which won first prize at the Bar Harbor show last year; high school horse "King Royal" and others. The program includes Roman standing races, in which a rider standing on two horses makes a half mile close to 50 seconds, running races with pairs hitched to bicycle sulkies, running races for thoroughbreds, clown donkey, "Dewey," whippet dog races and other events. Members of the committee have seen these performances and know that the attraction is the best of its kind in the country.

Much interest is manifested in the program of athletic sports, especially in the relay race for ninth grade schools, and several entries are already promised—there will be more before the day of the race. Nearly all of the schools in this section are to close for Friday, the first day, and the usual free school tickets will he distributed.

It is expected that Gov. Draper and Lieut. Gov. Frothingham will be present at the fair on Friday, the first day.

Reserved seats on the grand stand are ready for both days, and can be had of the secretary, L. E. Chandler, at any time.

DEATH OF W. H. SMALL.

Former Superintendent of Schools Drops Dead in Providence.

Walter H. Small, 57, formerly superintendent of schools in Palmer, bnt holding that position in Providence, R. I., since 1902, dropped dead about 2.30 Wednesday afternoon while riding in his auto in Providence. Mr. Small had recently purchased a car and was learning to run it. He was at the wheel and apparently as well as ever when he suddenly said to the demonstrator beside him, "My head has gone all wrong." The man thonght he referred to getting the details of the machinery mixed but soon saw that something was wrong. He stopped the car and lifted Mr. Small to the other seat, then ran the machine to a drng store only abont a minnte away, and asked for assistance, bnt Mr. Small was then dead.

Mr. Small is survived by a wife and two sons, Walter B., a graduate of Dartmouth and a year at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Kleon F., still young. The attack on Wednesday is, so far as the family knows, the first of the kind from which Mr. Small ever snffered, althongh for the past five years he had been troubled somewhat with indigestion. In other respects he appeared to be in the best of health.

Mr. Small was highly thought of in Providence, both as an educator and as a man, and the monrning over his snddeu death is universal. Yesterday the flags on the city buildings fluttered at half mast, and the public schools closed to-day. The funeral will be held to-morrow at 2 p. m. in the First Congregational church, and the body will lie in state in the city hall from 12 until 2.

Mr. Small came to Palmer in 1892, remaining until 1897, when he resigned and went to Chelsea, where he was superintendent of schools for five years, leaving that city to go to Providence. Both he and Mrs. Small have a large nnmber of friends here who will deeply sympathize with her in her deep tronble.

PAVING WORK BEGUN.

Preliminaries Started Wednesday. Expect To Push Ahead Rapidly.

The work of preparing Main street for the new brick paving began Wednesday, when a gang of men were set to work digging ont the stnmps of elm trees cnt down on the south side near the Commercial block. Yesterday they were at work setting the granite crnbing necessary for the work; this will extend from the corner of Bridge street to the Caryl block, and will not be completed for several days.

C. N. Ellithorpe & Son of Palmer has been awarded the contract for the cement, of which there will be ahont 1600 harrels, they being the lowest bidder. An order for 212,000 brick has been given the Mack Company of West Virginia, to be delivered as wanted. W. H. Brainerd will be the engineer in charge of the job. The rails for the street railway were shipped on Wednesday of last week and are expected to arrive any day. The work of excavating for the paving will not begin until their arrival.

WANT HOBSON TO RUN.

District Wishes to Return Him to House Another Year, But He Says No.

The Repnblican district committee of the First Hampden representative district held a meeting in Palmer Tuesday afternoon and canvassed thoroughly the sitnation in the district. Clarence B. Brown of Brimfield, who has been mentioned as a probable candidate for the nomination, was present and expressed a desire to withdraw in favor of the present incnmbent, Ernest E. Hobson of Palmer. The propositlon was presented to Mr. Hobson, who positively declined to be a candidate this year, as he had previonsly stated that he wonld not be. As his decision is apparently final it is not nnlikely that Mr. Brown will be the nominee for the honor.

STILL ANOTHER FIRE.

Third Blaze in Wire Mill Section Damages Barn Friday Night.

If there is any virtue in the old saying "Three times and out," the people around Shearer's Corner should feel safe for a time at least from fires, for the third in that section came last Friday night about 11 45, when a blaze was discovered in a henhouse belonging to Marcns Shearer, in the rear of the barn on the place formerly occnpied by him. The flames quickly communicated to a shed adjoining and from that to the end of the barn, which was badly scorched, together with a quantity of hay, but not wholly destroyed. The fire department of the wire mill had a stream on the blaze in a very few moments after the sounding of the alarm, and held the fire well in check; had it not been for them the barn could not have been saved. The loss was abont $200. This is the third fire in that section within a few weeks, and cnriously enongh all have been on Friday nights.

ATTEMPTED ARSON.

Kerosene Poured on Wire Mill Schoolhouse and Match Applied.

It was discovered Monday morning that an attempt had been made some time after school closed Friday to bnrn the Wire Mill schoolhouse. Kerosene had been ponred over the blinds of one of the windows of one room which is not occnpied, and set on fire. For some reason there was little blaze, the flames going out after simply scorching the woodwork a little. A bottle which had contained kerosene was found near by.

A careful examination failed to disclose any clne to the identity of the onthor of the attempt to bnrn the building, nor as to what time it was done. As there was another fire in that vicinity Friday night, evidently of incendiary origin, it is not unlikely that the two were planned by the same person.

Water Off To-morrow.

The Palmer Water Company announces that it will he obliged to shut the water off the entire section of the town north of the Boston and Albany railroad at 6 30 to-morrow morning for a short time. A gate on School street is in need of repairs which may be completed in 15 minntes or may take a conple of honrs, thongh it is not expected a longer time will be needed. The company will take every precaution to protect the village in case of fire, and should a blaze occur the water will be turned on immediately.

Wire Mill Running Full Time.

The mill of the Wright Wire Company west of the village began Monday rnnning full time, alter a five-days-a-week schedule for several months. The change affects a large nnmber of employes, who are dnly grateful.

Undenominational services will be held every Snnday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. O. C. Marcy on the corner of Walnnt and Pleasant streets.

Miss Dora Rock celebrated her thirteenth birthday Wednesday evening with a party at her home. Games were played and supper was served. About a dozen yonng people were present.

St. Mary's Episcopal church will reopen its Snnday school in Masonic Hall on Central street next Snnday afternoon at 2.15 in charge of S. Brooks. Chnrch service at 3. All are cordially invited.

The ninth grade of the grammar school has elected these officers: President, George Snmmers; vice president, Robert Bodfish; secretary and treasnrer, Robert McDonald. The class colors are black and orange.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Rollins and sons, Walter and Brock, of Sonth Manchester, Ct., called on Palmer friends Snnday. Mr. Rollins was formerly snperintendent of the Central Massachnsetts Electric Company.

The grand jury, at its session in Springfield this week, fonnd three bills for arson against John F. Lyman of Palmer. The cases are schednled for trial at the term of the snperior conrt which opens next week.

A large nnmber went to the railroad station Wednesday noon to see President Taft as he passed throngh. The train went by slowly and the president stood on the rear platform where all were able to see him.

Palmer Grange held a meeting last Friday evening when Mrs. F. L. Jones was elected lectnrer in place of Mrs. Lncy Perkins, resigned. A literary entertainment was provided by the Bondsville members.

The Repnblican caucns, for the nomination of delegates to the varions conventions, will be held in the town house at Four Corners next Tnesday evening. The Democratic caucus will be held in the same place the next evening.

A nnmber of the members of the Ladies' Society of the Congregational church have agreed to earn as much money as possible for the pnrchase of kitchen furnishings for the church before November, when they will hold an experience social and give an acconnt of their efforts.

Services of the Baptist church in the Advent Chapel next Sunday as follows: Morning prayer meeting at 10.15, worship and sermon at 10 45; snbject, "Christian Prndence." Bible school at 12, Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at 6, evening praise service at 7, followed by a sermon on "The Charge against the Worldly."

The Palmer Veteran Firemen played in hard luck at the nnster yesterday at the Sturbridge fair, getting fifth place with 177 feet 2 inch. The first money went to the crack South Hadley Falls crew with a throw of 203 feet 10 inches. Palmer would have had one of the prizes except that an nnfortnnate puff of win l—the wind was strong across the conrse—blew their best effort to one side and off the paper.

The athletic association of the high school has chosen the following officers: President, Edward Rice; vice president, Harry Hart; secretary and treasurer, George Buck; manager haseball team, Edward Rice; assistant manager, Fred Brouillette; manager of track, George Buck; assistant manager, C. Harrington; candidates for relay team, Edward Rice, Isaac Cole, A. Green, M. Horgan, C. Harrington, George Buck, Fred Brouillette, W. Johnson.

There was an official inspection of Revere chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, Wednesday evening, the grand matron, Mrs. Emma Baker of Shelburne Falls, being present, as was also Mrs. Lucy Colby, associate and deputy grand matron, and snite, who performed the work. Abont 20 members of Adelphi chapter of Springfield were present, and the members of Revere chapter have been invited to attend the official visitation of that chapter next Friday evening.

A nnmber of the friends of M. J. Dillon of Central street paid him a surprise visit about 6 15 last evening and took supper with him in celebration of his 60th birthday. Later in the evening a large number of neighbors and friends dropped in to offer congratulstions and leave with him a nnmber of valnable reminders of the occasion. Mr. Dillon was completely surprised. He has been a resident of the town for the past 38 years, and has served the town in nnmerous official capacities.

The Men's League is planning for an unusually good time at its first meeting of the season on the 29th, which will be held in the Universalist church. There will be a supper at 6 30, for which tickets are now being sold by League members; on account of the necessity of making advance preparation, only ticket holders will be admitted to the supper. After the supper there will be addresses by Representative Ernest E Hobson and Superintendent of Schools Lee T. Gray; the snbject will be "Palmer, and what the Men's League can do for it;" they will be followed by other speakers and there will be a general discnssion of the subject. The public is cordially invited to the supper and the meeting.

District Court.

Yesterday morning seven young men, giving the names of John E. Murphy, George L. Carr, Alfred L. Carr, Thomas J. Keeley, Thomas C. Earl, George Finch and Arthur Silsby, were arraigned for evading fare on the Boston & Albany railroad. They were taken off the front end of the "Owl" train from Boston about 2 in the morning. Their cases were continued until Satnrday of next week; being unable to furnish bonds they were committed.

Arthur Heile was fine $6 for drunkenness, and in default of funds was committed.

Patrick J. Conghlin of Ware was arrested in that place Tnesday on a charge of the larceny of a suit of clothes from the barroom of the Naasowanno House and was turned over to the Palmer police. He was brought into the district conrt Wednesday morning, and pleaded guilty. He stated that he did not intend to keep the suit, but simply took it as a joke on the other fellow. Coughlin had the suit on when arrested. As a resnlt of his joke he will take a three months' vacation in the house of correction.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Sept. 15, 1909.

Boston's future in a very important degree is hanging npon the doings of the Big Four Commission which began its sittings in room 240 of the state house yesterday, will continue through Thursday and Friday of this week and go on, presumably, till into next year. This formidable body consists of the Boston transit commission, the metropolitan parks commission, the railroad commission and the commission on harbors and public lands. George G. Crocker of Boston, president of the transit commission, former president of the state Senate and anthor of a mannal of parliamentary law which is standard for the Massachusetts Legislatnre, presides, and of conrse he makes a first class presiding officer. At his left sits Chairman George E. Smith of the harbor land commission, who also has been chairman of the Massachusetts Senate. The railroad commission, which is really a very important element of the combination, cnts no nominal figure at all, and its three members sit together at the extreme right wing of the board. Yesterday, their opening day, they passed in private session. To-day they have been hearing about the importance of better local facilities. They must report before January 1, 1910, to the Legislature, if they have any recommendations to make which require legislation. Bnt that is to be only a preliminary report and their main report is not dne till Jannary 1, 1911

Though local transportation conditions and the general convenience of teams, foot passers, steam and electric cars come under their general jurisdiction, yet their main work will be with the development of Boston as a port of export. They must contrive some way of handling qnickly the vast mass of freight which comes to the port for shipment abroad, and they must provide also and they mnst give dock facilities and good track connections so that there may be qnick discharge of freight trains into the steamships. They must devise means of crossing the city qnickly from the sonth station to the north and vice versa; they mnst put the West End and Back Bay into closer tonch with the water front. They mnst protect the residential sections and mnst serve the pnblic convenience so that Boston shall have the best facilities for handling goods and for getting abont which any city can boast. This must be done with Boston's notoriously crooked streets. It is a hard proposition, bnt the snccess of the transit commission nnder Crocker is gnarantee that something great for the prosperity of all Massachnsetts will be the outcome. There is a growing sense of the situation that there must be more organization in behalf of the public than ever before. It will not do to leave the city to grow by chance as it has done. There must he pnblic officials to direct the development of the pnblic as a whole and more attention must be given to the government than ever. All of which illustrates the superiority of the Massachnsetts idea of attending to public business faithfnlly and regnlarly and frequently, rather than to permit things to rnn behind as they do in states where the Legislature meets only once in four years, and then, in some cases, with a constitutional limitation provision that they must go home by a particnlar day, no matter if the public business is not half done. Under present conditions it is not strange that Massachnsetts is the pioneer of the country in progressive legislation, nor that other states are constantly coming to us to learn how we do things. Bnt Henry C. Long gave the state a terrible raking down this forenoon becanse its laws were so hostile to business, saying that they drove capital ont of the state by the million.

A conrt decision the other day gave the state formal title to a disputed area of the East Boston flats, which will promote the policy of the state to give Boston good harbor and terminal facilities. The dispute was over the meaning of the term "low water" which was the boundary of the company which had the dispnte with the state. The company claimed to extreme low water; the counsel for the state held that it meant only average low water, and the court sustained the state. This will give the state a larger area, and the difference might mean much where the land is so nearly level as it is on the East Boston flats. Boston has an immense opportunity for a great dock system, and it is to be expected in the future, at a distance not yet in sight.

At the Republican state committee they feel confident that the labor vote will not go nearly solid against Gov. Draper on account of his veto of the eight-honr bill. The developments in the case of Representative Doyle of New Bedford are taken to prove this conclusively. It is true that Doyle is a Republican, but his union voted unanimonsly with him and against the proposition of the State Federation of Labor to turn down the governor because of his veto. It has been said to-day in high Democratic quarters that the labor vote went for Draper largely last year and that it would do the same thing again this year. From the Republican outlook, this is one of the driest of off years which has been known in politics. There is no contest in sight which is of any consequence. They are not disturbed over the ontcome of the election. It was said there to-day that they are looking for trouble and trying to find if there is anything which they should attend to, but thus far they discover absolutely nothing. The Republican cancuses come next Tnesday evening, September 21, and so do all the joint primary caucuses which includes Democrats and Repnblicans. The following evening come all the exclusively Democratic caucuses But there is light interest. This may rednce the vote on election day, but the Republicans are figuring that the Democrats will fall off proportionally.

Give the Democrats credit for putting in good work at their headquarters. Ex-Senator Frederick J. Macleod, the chairman, is doing much good work and the office is in better condition than it has been for a long time. The money which has been spent has come from the members of the committee. Fifty dollars each, according to the rules, must be paid by every member at large. The annual fee for the district is $25 It is true that some of the members are so hard up that they never pay. But, this year, without a cent, directly or indirectly, from either Vahey or Gaston, the committee has done more work than for a long time. The headquarters has got in touch with the party workers, snch as they are, in as many towns as possible, and the organization is in tolerable condition. It seems to be settled that Vahey will get the nomination for governor again without opposition.

Delegates from the United States who went to Enrope to attend the Universal Peace Congress at Stockholm suffered a disappoint becanse the Congress was postponed to next year on account of the great strike in Sweden, and made it difficnlt for the delegates to be cared for or for the meetings to be held with any reasonable satisfaction. Postponement will doubtless carry with it the continnance of the principal subject, which was to be the political organization of the world as a unit. Dr. Benjamin F. Trneblood, secretary of the American Peace Society, is expected here next Tnesday. Edwin D. Mead and Mrs. Mead, who had a trip of speech-making laid out, will probably be later and arrive abont October 1

If there should be any effort from Washington, as has been said in Washington dispatches there would be, to secnre a modification of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain so that armed vessels can be maintained on the great lakes, there will be active opposition. A letter has been sent to Washington already from the office of the Peace Society, in order to learn the facts in the case. This practical disarmament of these two great nations, facing each other across the lakes for nearly 100 years, has been the conspicnons example to all the world of possible disarmament and proof of the fact snch a treaty can be kept. The object lesson wonld not be given np without a prodigious protest.

It will be noticed that the fnneral of William Lloyd Garrison was witbout fnneral ceremonies and that his ashes were to be scattered after the cremation. There was a similar lack of religious formalities at the fnneral of his brother, Wendell Phillips Garrison, who died in New York two years ago. But however much these men were out of tonch and sympathy with the organized forms of religions living, no one who knew them,—and I speak particularly after a long acqnaintance with William Lloyd Garrison,—would doubt that they had the largest love for their fellowmen and supreme devotion to justice and righteousness. Many is the man inside of the church who is less in accord with the Supreme Will than this constant worker for the welfare of his fellowmen especially the weak and the oppressed.

One of the new things of the week is a visit to the islands of Boston harbor by State Forester Rane, Prof. Edwin A. Start of the Massachusetts Forestry Association, Allen Chamberlain of the Appalachain Mountain Clnb, and others, to investigate the practicability of reclothing the islands of Boston harbor with trees. To-day their knolls are absolntely bald. Trees would beautify the harbor much and the scheme has been pronounced practicable.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
HAMPDEN, ss.

To either of the Constables of the Town of Palmer in said county, Greeting:

In the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts you are hereby directed to notify and warn all the inhabitants of the Town of Palmer qualified to vote in town affairs to meet at the Town House at Four Corners in said Palmer on Saturday the 18th day of September A. D. 1909, at 2 o'clock p. m., then and there to act on the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. To choose a Moderator to preside at said meeting.

ART. 2. To hear and act on reports of Committees.

ART. 3. To appoint Committees and give them instructions.

ART. 4. To see if the town will accept and allow a common sewer, as laid out by the selectmen in the Depot Village, described as follows: Beginning on land of Fred H. Smith on the northeasterly side of the Quaboag river at a point six feet easterly from a stone bound, thence running N. 33° 45' E. in land of said Smith about two hundred and ninety feet to land of the New London Northern Railroad Company, thence in the same course across the location of said railroad company and the location of the Ware River Railroad Company to land of Rose Boyd and Kate I. McMahon, thence on the same course across land of said Boyd and McMahon about forty feet to North Main street at a point one hundred and fifty-five feet southeasterly from a stone highway bound set to mark the sonthwesterly side of said North Main street near the line between lands formerly owned by Clara Holbrook and Seth W. Smith, and thence running in the same course to a manhole near the centre of said street (the line described marking the centre line of location of said sewer); and extending easterly from said manhole in and through said North Main street to a point opposite Holbrook street; and extending westerly from said manhole in and through said North Main street to a point about two hundred feet westerly from Randall street. Said sewer to be constructed of tile pipe eighteen inches in diameter from the Quaboag river to said manhole near the Point of Rocks, twelve inches in diameter from said manhole easterly to Holbrook street, and fifteen inches in diameter from said manhole, westerly to the westerly end of said sewer.

ART. 5. To see if the town will authorize the taking of private land of the owners above named, or of any right therein, for the construction of said sewer and give any direction to the Selectmen relative thereto.

ART. 6. To see if the town will reconsider the vote passed at the last annual meeting under article 28 of the warrant, whereby $1800 was appropriated for the construction of a sewer in North Main street, and on the road to Three Rivers, or take any action relative thereto.

ART. 7. To see if the town will raise and appropriate money for the construction of the sewer described in article 4 of this warrant and for the payment of land damages in connection therewith.

And you are hereby directed to serve this warrant by posting up attested copies thereof at the different public places designated by the vote of the town, seven days at least before the holding of said meeting, and cause this warrant to be printed in the Palmer Journal at least two issues before the holding of said meeting.

Hereof fail not and make dne return of this warrant, with your doings thereon, to the Town Clerk, on or before the holding of said meeting.

Given nnder our hands this 10th day of September, A. D. 1909.

BULLET IN BOY'S BACK.

Lad of Twelve Years Shot on East Hill Last Sunday. Narrow Escape.

A narrow escape from a serious accident occurred at the farm of the late Joseph H. Carpenter on East Hill Sunday, when John Manning, 12 years old, was shot in the back by Ernest Carpenter with a 32-calibre revolver. The bullet was extracted by Dr. C. W. Jackson, who reports that the wound is not serious. The bullet struck the right shoulder blade and glanced off.

Manning says that he and another boy, John Shea, were at the Carpenter farm. The Shea boy was under a peach tree, while he was on the fence between the highway and the peach orchard, when he saw someone running towards them. The boys started down the road, when a shot was heard and Manning felt a stinging sensation in his shoulder. He went on his bicycle to the office of Dr. Jackson, who found the bullet and extracted it.

Mr. Carpenter's story is that he has of late been bothered considerably by boys stealing his fruit, and that Sunday he laid in wait for them behind a pile of brush with a loaded revolver. About 12.30 he saw two boys enter the peach orchard and begin to help themselves; he ran toward them and shot his revolver, intending to scare them, but that he did not know he had hit anyone until he was told so later in the evening.

Mr. Carpenter says he did not mean to hit anyone. Other boys who were at the peach orchard later the same day say that they were shot at four times, one of the bullets striking in the road in front of them and another passing so near their heads that they all heard the hum of the bullet.

Death of John L. Cantwell.

John L. Cantwell, 23, son of John F. Cantwell of this town, died in the Jordan hospital in Plymouth yesterday morning at 2 30 of acute Bright's disease, after several weeks' illness. Mr. Cantwell was born in Monson and had always lived here until two years ago, when he went to Plymouth and had since lived there, although he retained his residence in Monson. He was well known and well liked in Monson. He leaves, besides his father, one sister, Miss Alice Cantwell of Palmer. The body was brought to his late home on State street last night. The funeral will be held in the Catholic church to-morrow morning at 9 30. Burial will be in the Pearl street cemetery.

Petition to Suspend Two Liquor Licenses.

A petition signed by more than 50 business men and well-known citizens, was sent to the selectmen the first of the week asking that the liquor licenses in the Century and Gilmore Hotels be suspended until two of the cases against the proprietors be decided in the superior court. The selectmen had a private hearing with the two proprietors last evening, and in consideration of the fact that the trials of the proprietors will be held next week in Springfield, they will not act, and they continued the hearing until next Thursday evening.

Receives Serious Cut.

Vaughn Brown, employed in the Heimann & Lichten hat factory, cut his left arm severely yesterday afternoon. He was cutting felt and his knife slipped, inflicting a gash in his left arm and severing an artery. He was attended by Dr. C. W. Jackson, it requiring several stitches to close the wound.

WARE.

Peculiar Accident.

George O. Wheeler was painfully injured about the face and head Wednesday while at work building a cobblestone chimney on the new house of J. H. Walker on Church street. A driver had dumped a load of stones near the chimney and in leaving the narrow driveway steered the wagon too close to the house and the hub of one wheel caught an upright supporting the staging upon which Mr. Wheeler was at work. As one end of the staging dropped, Mr. Wheeler was throw to the ground, a fall of some 10 or 12 feet. There were stones on the staging and many more on the ground, and when Mr. Wheeler was picked up he was bleeding from two long cuts. One of these was on the temple and one on the head, and they were dressed by Dr. H O Gaffney Mr. Wheeler was able to be out during the day and will suffer no ill effects from the accident.

Wyllie—Gleason.

Miss Lena M. Wyllie and Thomas C. Gleason were married in All Saints' church Wednesday morning by Rev. J. H. Murphy. They were attended by Miss Mary Connor and John P. Gleason, brother of the groom. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served in the Hampshire House to a party of 14, and Mr. and Mrs. Gleason left later in the morning for a trip to Albany and New York. The groom is well known in town, having acted as chief of the fire department for the past 28 years and as superintendent of the waterworks for over 20 years. The bride has lived in Ware for a long time, for some years being a teacher in the public schools, and she has acted as bookkeeper for D. E. Clifford for quite a period. Recently she has been working in that capacity for John F. Robinson & Co.

Mrs. C. B Wetherby and children are spending several weeks at Falmouth.

John Voller of Franklin, O., has been visiting his niece, Mrs. J. G. Lincoln.

Roger Squires has gone to Kirksville, Mo., where he will continue his course in osteopathy begun last year in Philadelphia. Mrs. Squires and her small son will remain during the fall with her father, F. M. Sibley on Church street.

A class of 203 boys and girls were confirmed in St. Mary's church Sunday afternoon at 3 by Bishop Thomas D. Beaven of Springfield. A number of priests assisted at the ceremony. This is the first class to be confirmed in the church proper, the first class having been confirmed in the basement before the edifice had been completed.

The women's whist party for the benefit of the hospital furnishing fund was held Tuesday afternoon in Odd Fellows' hall. Over 100 tickets had been sold, but the number present was slightly less than 100. The proceeds will be about $50, as there were practically no expenses. Tea was served and Mrs. J. H. G. Gilbert and Mrs. J. T. Wood poured. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. George D. Storrs, Mrs. James E. Clark and Miss Mary Sagendorph.

A milk wagon belonging to Fred A. Johnson was smashed early Tuesday morning at the corner of Bank and Pleasant streets. The horse became frightened at something while Mr. Johnson was in a house and ran down Bank street. When turning the corner of Bank and Pleasant streets the wagon overturned and the upper part was badly damaged. Several large cans of milk were tipped out and the milk spilled, while a number of glass bottles were broken and their contents lost.

The largest dinner ever given assembled at Paris a few days ago. The Mutualists of France dined at the Galerie des Machines. About 50,000 sat down together. Five hundred waiters served and 15 000 dishes were used at nine miles of tables. There were 150,000 plates, which if piled up would reach 10 miles higher than the Eiffel Tower. The "cheer" included 25 000 bottles of red and white wine, 15,000 bottles of beer, 6000 bottle of milk, 10,000 bottles of mineral waters, 5000 bottles of champagne, 4000 half-bottles of liqueur, and two steam urns, each of 15 horse-power, brewed the coffee. Meats of all kinds weighed 70 tons, and there were three-quarters of a ton of cigars.

A STEADY DRAIN.

Sick Kidneys Weaken the Whole Body—Make You Ill, Languid and Depressed.

Sick kidneys weaken the body through the continual drainage of life-giving albumen from the blood into the urine, and the substitution of poisonous uric acid that goes broadcast through the system, sowing the seeds of disease. Loss of albumen causes weakness, languor, depression. Uric poisoning causes rheumatic pain, nervousness, nausea, cricks in the back, grave and kidney stones. The proper treatment, and the best remedy is Doan's Kidney Pills. Cures like the following:

Geo. E. Wood, living on State avenue, Monson, Mass., says: "About five years ago I became subject to attacks of backache, which together with the irregular action of the kidney secretions made my life miserable. I consulted our family physician but received the comforting answer that my chances to live more than a year were few. I then began the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Lynde and Gould's drug store and I am a living endorsement of the curative powers of this remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

BILLY THE BORE.

He Was Very Different From the Poet and the Halfback.

By TEMPLE BAILEY.

[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

There was no denying that Billy was not deeply intellectual. He was tall and blond, with broad shoulders and a smile that was like sunshine on a gloomy day. But among the girls of the college these qualities counted for little, for they worshiped at the shrine of the poet and of the halfback. The poet had long hair, and so had the halfback, but otherwise they had nothing in common except that they both loved Dulcie Drayton.

Billy loved Dulcie too. But he hadn't half a chance, for the poet wrote sonnets to Dulcie's eyebrows, and the halfback let her shine in his reflected football glory.

Now and then she consented to make Billy happy. "Yes, I will walk with you," she told him graciously one October day, "only we mustn't go very far, for I have an engagement with the halfback."

"All right," said Billy and promptly forgot his watch.

The halfback was raging when they finally reached Dulcie's home. "We have missed the game," he said. "Of course if I had been playing I couldn't have waited; but, as it is, I have hung around"—

"Billy forgot his watch," Dulcie apologized, "and we didn't realize how late it was."

"I should think he would bore you to death," the halfback said when Billy had left them. "How can you stand that fellow?"

"He's not bad," Dulcie defended. "Of course he hasn't such an awful lot of brains, and he hasn't done such wonderful things as you have, but he's got an awfully good disposition."

And the halfback, remembering his own grumbling and growling, said "Oh, well," uncomfortably and wondered if Dulcie was hitting at him.

A few days later the poet took Dulcie to task about Billy. "You danced with him four times last night," he said, "and I wanted you to sit out those last two in the conservatory with me. I had a new poem to read to you. It was about young October's golden eyes, and it is dedicated to you."

"Read it to me now," said Dulcie. "I'd love to hear it."

"The atmosphere isn't right," the poet fretted, "not here on the campus, but last night there was a little moon, and there were red roses on the lattice."

"Billy is an awfully good dancer," Dulcie reflected, which, as the poet generally got tangled up even in a twostep, was not tactful.

For several days after that, however, the rivalry between the poet and the halfback was so intense that Billy was left completely in the background.

The poet sat up half the night writing verses, and the theme was "love, love, love," and he claimed every spare moment of Dulcie's time to read them to her.

"He writes about my hair," she told Billy, "and calls it 'soft spun silk shimmering in the sunshine.'"

"I don't see the use of stringing out a lot of shimmering sunshine sentences when your hair is too beautiful to be described," said Billy bluntly.

Dulcie smiled up at him. "After all, I like the way you put it, Billy," she said, "and I'm glad you like the color of my hair."

"I love it," Billy stated, "and I love you, Dulcie."

"Oh, oh, you mustn't!" Dulcie protested.

"Well, not now, if you don't want me to, but I shall tell you again, Dulcie," Billy answered.

"And he will," Dulcie told her most intimate friend that night. "He will ask me over and over again."

"Well, of course you couldn't marry him," said the intimate friend calmly, "not such a bore."

"I am not sure that Billy deserves that nickname," said Dulcie. "He doesn't talk moonshine like the poet or brag of himself like the halfback, but he does say some nice, sensible, good hearted things, and he has a lovely smile."

The intimate friend sat up and looked at her. "Well, of all things," she said; "I believe you are half in love with him. How you can think of him when you have the choice of two such men as the poet and the halfback is more than I can understand."

"But are they really in love with me?" Dulcie demanded.

"They have asked you to marry them, haven't they?" Marion asked.

"Yes. But somehow it seems to me that they are always thinking of themselves. But Billy thinks of me."

"Oh," Marion said softly, "I know what you mean. If you married the poet or the halfback you would have to worship at their shrines, while Billy would worship at yours."

"Yes," said Dulcie, "that's it, and a man who loves you that way can't exactly bore you, can he?"

"No, he can't," said Marion, "but of course you can never tell how long it will last."

"Sometimes I have thought I should like to put them to a test, as ladies did with the knights of old," Dulcie meditated.

"But what test," Marion demanded, "could you have in modern days?"

"In the old times it was a test of strength and skill," Dulcie stated, "but today there is one god, Marion—money. You know I have a lot in my own right. And the boys know it, all of them, the poet and the halfback and Billy. Perhaps that is what makes me the most popular girl in school—my money, not just me myself."

"You are a darling," Marion encouraged her, "but you know how men are."

"Yes, I do," Dulcie agreed. And they then and there constructed a plot.

The next night the poet, lingering in the shadow of the elms, was met by Marion. When they had talked for a moment she said, "Isn't it sad about Dulcie Drayton."

"Sad?" the poet echoed.

"Oh, didn't she tell you?" Marion hesitated. "Then I ought not to."

But the poet urged her.

"Well, she has lost all of her money," Marion said. "I am her roommate, and I saw the letter. But please don't speak of it."

"Of course not," said the poet.

But that night he wrote many verses, and in all of them was a note of renunciation, and the next day he gave them to Dulcie. "They are very sad," he explained, "but I have come to believe that a genius should not marry. Only in the sadness of solitude can talent be developed. I must give you up, my Dulcie."

"I am not your Dulcie," the girl started, with a little flame in her cheeks.

She did not reproach him. What was the use of reproaching such a feeble thing as the poet? But when Marion had told the halfback the same tale and he had without compunction broken an engagement with Dulcie, giving as an excuse "I am going to cut out dances for awhile—and girls," she allowed herself the luxury of a retort.

"Then you won't miss me when I go away," she said pointedly.

"Go away?" he questioned.

"Yes. You see, I am eighteen tomorrow, and my money will be my own to use as I please, and I have so many plans"—

"But," the halfback gasped, "I thought you had lost your money!" He stopped, red to the ears.

"So did the poet," said Dulcie. "Marion told both of you some kind of tale, and both of you believed it."

"That wasn't the reason," the halfback excused.

Dulcie stopped him sternly. "Yes, it was. That was why you gave up girls—that was why you gave up me!" And she left him abruptly.

"I am half afraid to have you tell Billy," she told Marion that night. "If he should fail me"—

But Billy when he heard the news came straight to her.

"Marion has told me," he said simply. "I haven't much, Dulcie, but I love you, and I want you to marry me at once if you will."

Dulcie laid her hand on his arm. "Billy," she said, "I am not poor. I put you and the poet and the halfback to a test, and only you stood it. You are the knight of the true heart, and I love you."

After Billy had kissed her rapturously he asked, "Are you sure I won't bore you, Dulcie?"

"If you knew how I hated the poet's poems and the halfback's boasting you wouldn't ask such a silly question, Billy," she replied.

Hospital "Boarders."

"There is a class which gives every hospital in the city a whole lot of trouble, especially in the winter time," said a member of the faculty of the Pennsylvania hospital. "It is made up of what we call 'steady boarders,' meaning men who have no homes, who are too lazy to work and who feign illness in order to secure a comfortable bed and good food for a week or so at a time. However, we have devised a scheme which is quite effective in driving them away. When one of these boarders arrives on the scene we can usually spot him. We know the earmarks of the species. He is taken into the receiving ward, solemnly undressed and laid upon the operating table, where a fake examination takes place. The trouble is finally located in the spine, and an immediate operation is advised. The patient writhes, protesting that he feels much better, but is not permitted to leave. Meanwhile a piece of ice has been sharpened to a point and suddenly, without warning, the ice is drawn down the boarder's back. With a yell he is off the table, out of the room and out of the building. We throw his clothes out after him, and he never comes back."—Philadelphia Record.

For Boots or Bedding?

His car had broken down. It was 10 o'clock at night. The rain was beginning to drizzle. Dash it, bust it and likewise blow it!

There was an inn near by. It was only just an inn, but it was an inn. The landlord growled when he asked for a room, but at last conceded it. They put his motor in the garage among the mangel wurzels.

He didn't have any supper. He just looked at it. Then he went up to bed.

A minute later he was leaning over the balustrade.

"Landlord!" he yelled. "Landlord! Do you think I'm going to clean my own boots?"

"Wot's up?" called back mine surly host.

"What's up? Why, what's that boot polishing pad on my bed for?"

"Polishin' pad!" roared back the landlord. "That's not a polishin' pad, young feller. That's the pillow!"—London Scraps.

Reason Enough.

Teacher—Tommy, you should comb your hair before you come to school. Tommy—Ain't got no comb. Teacher—Then borrow your father's. Tommy—Father ain't got no comb neither. Teacher—Absurd! Doesn't he comb his hair? Tommy—He ain't got no hair!—Lippincott's.

Nobody outside the journalistic profession has any idea how difficult it is for an editor to please some of his patrons. For instance, referring to a public man's reputation for carelessness in the matter of his toilet, a paper announced: "Mr. Maguire will wash himself before he assumes the office of town clerk." This made Maguire furious, and he demanded a retraction, which appeared thus: "Mr. Maguire requests us to deny that he will wash himself before he assumes the office of town clerk." Oddly enough, this only enraged Maguire the more.—San Francisco News-Letter.

BONDSVILLE.

Lost Pocketbook Is Quickly Found.

Mrs. Peter Hannifin, who lives in South Belchertown near Bondsville, lost her pocketbook, containing $11, one day last week, but was fortunate in having it returned to her the following day. In company with her daughter she drove to the village. After visiting some of the stores and paying some bills, she left her team and walked to High street. She opened her handbag, which contained the purse, and did not notice that it remained unclasped until after going a short distance. Upon finding that the purse had dropped ont, she immediately retraced her steps, remembering that she had passed three persons, Dr. Smith, Michael Sullivan and a Greek. She inqnired of Dr. Smith if he had seen the purse and was told that he had seen the Greek pick np a pocketbook. Mrs. Hannifin went at once to the Greek's home, but found he had gone away on the electric cars with two of his friends. She then notified Officer Collins, who went to the Greek's home, only to find he had not returned. Upon his return in the evening, the officer accused him of having picked np the purse, and the Greek proceeded to turn it over to the officer, who notified Mrs. Hannifin, and she called for it Monday morning, giving the Greek, who was also summoned, a reward.

Bondsville Players Entertained.

A very pleasing event occurred last Saturday evening, when the directors and players of the Bondsville baseball association met together in the clubhouse of the Bondsville Country Club for a little leave-taking and to formally close and wind up the affairs of the club for the past year.

A dainty repast was provided and the tables had an inviting appearance; they were decorated with cut flowers and at each plate reposed a carnation. After partaking of good things provided cigars were lighted and an enjoyable evening was spent. One particular feature was the presentation to each player by Manager "Bill" Donavan, in behalf of the Association, of an envelope containing a substantial amount of the "long green" neatly tied with the club's colors. Needless to say this was appreciated by the players, and they honored the board of directors with a rousing cheer. Speechmaking interspersed with songs and readings brought one of the most enjoyable evenings to a close. Each player on departing pledged his support for next year and to so "play the game" that when they meet a year hence they wonld have the scalps of the Indians dangling from their belts. Only one thing tended to mar the pleasure of the gathering, and that was the absence of Jerry Sullivan, who has been confined to his home by illness for over two months, but who is on the road to recovery and hopes are entertained that he will be in the game next year.

So closed one of the most successful seasons of baseball ever witnessed in Bondsville, with the team composed of gentlemanly players and good material, but unfortunately not getting that most desirable asset, practice, to make a winning team; with a capable board of directors and with the people backing them at every stage left nothing to be desired. Some interesting data gleaned showed that over $500 were taken in from gate receipts. The players were taken care of and a twenty-five per cent dividend was declared and paid to some 241 stockholders, and a snng snm stored away for next year. With a good field, a grandstand and full baseball equipment, everything points to a successful season for 1910.

The Bondsville baseball association send the following: "It seems that some of our players have agreed to play a series of games with the Three Rivers baseball clnb, but as our association has wonnd np its affairs and the clnb disbanded last week we want the public to nnderstand that they are playing these games on their own responsibility and without our sanction."

WARREN.

Death of Henry Rice.

Henry Rice, 82, died of old age at the home of his son, Oscar W. Rice, on East Main street Tnesday afternoon. He had been sick for several months. Mr. Rice was born in Brookfield March 26, 1827, and came to Warren to live with his son about six years ago. He was a member of Hayden lodge of Masons of Brookfield. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at the home of his son, Rev. O. I. Darling officiating. The body was taken to the Brookfield cemetery for burial.

Hiram Combs of Norwalk, Ct., has been spending a few days in town.

Miss Lizzie Davis and Charles Davis of Cleveland, O., have been in town this week.

Mrs. Ella E. Crosby has been spending the week with her son, George L Crosby in Boston.

John W. Keith has been in New York this week attending the National Bakers' Convention.

S. H. Knowles of North Grafton has been the gnest of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel N. Cutler of North River road.

Miss Lonise Spencer has gone to Wheaton seminary to pursue advanced studies for the coming year.

Charles J. Keenan of Worcester spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Keenan of Southbridge street.

C. Winthrop Hosley has returned to his studies at Williams college, and William J. Runyan has entered the freshman class of the same institution.

The friends of Mrs. Ida E. Ellis were sorry to hear Tuesday that she had broken her right leg by a fall from a coach in the Yellowstone park. Mrs. Ellis left about a month ago for the Northwest, and was visiting places of interest while en ronte.

The senior class of the Warren high school has chosen these officers: President, Philip B. Converse; vice president, Miss Corzelia Spencer; secretary, Miss Mary Benedict; treasurer, John Patrick. Purple and gold were chosen for the class colors.

A North Missouri paper prints the following: "Mr. Editor—I desire to thank my friends and neighbors most heartily in this manner for their co-operation during the illness and death of my late husband, who escape from my hand of death on last Friday, when at breakfast. To all my friends who contributed so willingly toward making the last moments and the funeral of my husband a success, I desire to remember most kindly, hoping these lines will find them enjoyed the same blessing I have also a good milch cow and roan gelding horse eight years old, which I will sell cheap. God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform. He plants his footsteps on the sea and rides upon the storm. Also a black and white shoat cheap."

THE RAT SWINDLE.

By BRUCE PARKER.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"Yes," said a retired United States mint inspector, "a mint manager needs to keep his eye open to be able to turn back the metal he receives. Gold is valuable in very small quantities. It's just as good in filings as it is in coins and as good in chips as in bars. There are lots of ways a small bit of the metal can be carried away, and as soon as one method is found ont another is invented.

"When I was inspector at a western mint a young man named Trevor came into the service, in whom I took a deep interest. Indeed, it was natural that I should be interested in him, because he was engaged to marry my daughter Betsy. I had no objection to the match provided they would wait long enough for Trevor to become sufficiently valuable at the mint to command an adequate salary and to have saved a little money for a nest egg. He thought differently. He wished to be married first and get the salary and the nest egg afterward. But I stood firm, and he was obliged to wait.

"In a mint the gold ingots are sent to the rolling room to be rolled into strips. When received they are carefully weighed and when sent out are weighed again. Of course both figures should tally exactly. Well, one day there was a deficit of about $10. Of course I was greatly troubled. Before letting any one out of the room I made a personal search of every employee. Trevor worked in the rolling room, and when he came up to be searched he seemed to me to be a trifle agitated. Now, we inspectors are like detectives. We build up theories on small occurrences. It popped into my head that Trevor in his impatience to marry had fallen under temptation. But nothing was found on him or any one else. The next day there was another shortage of about $14, and the next and next shortages of various similar amounts.

"My theory about Trevor was a terrible anxiety to me. I liked the boy, and I knew Bet was bound up in him. To discover that he was a thief would be a disappointment to me and a heavy blow to her. Ordinarily I did my own investigating, but in this case I was so disconcerted over Trevor's probable guilt and so averse to watching him that I introduced a detective into the rolling room under the guise of an employee, with instructions to look for a clew and to watch Trevor especially.

"Whether my feelings betrayed me to Bet or to Trevor or both or whether they saw through the detective ruse I don't know, but a constraint sprung up between me and them. Neither party said anything about the matter between us, but each knew the other's secret. One day Trevor came up to me and said he'd like to see me in the coinage department. I saw that something was on his mind and went with him in a state of dread, fearing a confession. When we reached the room we had started for, Trevor suddenly turned to me and said:

"'Do you smell anything?'

"Surprised, I sniffed and replied that I certainly did smell something dead.

"'It's a rat in a trap,' he replied.

"'Well, what of that?'

"'Go in there,' pointing to a place of concealment, 'and watch. We will close in twenty minutes. Before that time you will see the rat removed. Then step out the door, go down the back stairs and look out the window into the yard.'

"Now, it would require several days for a dead rat to emit an odor. The rat had not been there more than a day, probably not half a day. That I knew because I had seen one taken out the evening before by an employee—a 'stamper;' I'll call him Jim Smith—who tossed it out through the slot above the window.

"Rats had bothered us more or less, and I was not surprised at the trap or the catch. What puzzled me was that a rat's dead body should decay so quickly. Taking this with Trevor's act—I hate punning; I don't mean to pun—I smelled a rat. I hadn't been on watch ten minutes before Jim Smith came into the room, stopped at the trap and, jocularly saying, 'Hello, another rat!' took out the corpse by the tail and tossed it out through the slot. In a jiffy I was down the stairs with my eye to a window overlooking the yard. I had been there but a few moments when I saw a man pick up the rat, put it in a canvas bag and walk away.

"And so the man I had set the detective to catch had caught the detective napping. I kept mum and the next day removed the same rat from the trap and inside of him found gold worth $25.

"It is singular how criminals will give themselves away. If the man who used the dead rats to convey gold out of the building had taken the trouble to get a fresh rat once in awhile he wouldn't have been betrayed by an odor. We didn't like to prosecute such cases of ingenuity for fear of putting others on to the game, but the thief was soon discharged on a pretext.

"Well, as for Trevor and Bet, they had the tables turned against me. I had no difficulty in securing Trevor's promotion after his bit of detective success and hadn't the face any longer to oppose their marriage. Trevor continued to rise, and when I went out he went into my place.

"I've given you only one of the plans for secretly removing gold. I could give you dozens of them. But of all the plans ever uncovered I place the dead rat swindle first in ingenuity."

Exception to the Rule.

"I have a boy in my school of whom I am very fond," said a New York teacher smilingly, "but I fear to think what his future may be."

"Indeed? Does he evince—er—criminal tendencies?" some grave person who had missed the smile inquired.

"Well, I am afraid he may become a writer for funny papers," the teacher suggested tentatively. "You see, I was having a history review one day, and I asked this boy who was Peter the Great. He answered, 'A czar of Russia.'"

"And was there more than one Peter the Great?" I asked.

"He appeared to ponder for a moment and then replied, 'No, Miss Mary, that was a case in which history didn't re-Pete itself.'"—Judge.

"The Picnic Stretch."

Though a brilliant conversationalist, George Meredith had, of course, his silent moods, and he happened to be in one of them at a certain picnic. Next to him sat a lady, herself a good talker, who had been looking forward to this meeting for days and, it may be guessed, preparing for it—in vain. The only sentence that passed his lips was when he reached slightly across her for the salt—"Excuse the picnic stretch."—Manchester Guardian.

RECONCILED BY ACCIDENT.

The Girl That Helped John's Mother In an Emergency.

By CLARA LOUISE OTIS.

[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

"Six o'clock and all's well. Wind's in the east and blowing like—everything," caroled a masculine voice.

The woman in the kitchen smiled in spite of herself. "The dear child," she murmured happily, "so much like his father," then to the "child," a tall young man of twenty-four, just entering the kitchen: "You're early tonight, dear. Supper won't be ready for ten minutes."

"Oh, that's all right." John Williams gave his mother a vigorous hug. "How is mother?"

"Well. And John?"

"Fine. Say, mother!"

"Yes, dear?"

"How would you like a daughter-in-law?"

Mary Williams set down the frying pan and faced her son with a dazed expression. "A daughter-in-law?" she repeated blankly. A blinding rush of tears came to her eyes, and the little room seemed to be whirling around. "Oh, John!" was all she said, but the bitter disappointment of those two words was not lost on the young man.

"I'm sorry," he said briefly and left the room.

Memories one after the other crowded fast before her. Her husband had died when John was three, and they had been so happy! And since John had grown to manhood how happy he had made her! Yet—yet he was going to bring another woman there—another woman! The odor of scorching meat made her start.

"Come, supper's ready," she called in what was intended to be her natural voice.

"Tell me about it," faltered Mary after they had sat in silence for some minutes.

"Not if you don't want to hear, mother."

The hurt, proud tones brought contrition to her heart.

"I do want to hear." The words were true in more ways than one.

"Her name is Kitty—Kitty Marvin."

"And"—

"Oh, mother, mother! I've wanted to tell you so! Are you sure you want to hear?"

"Yes, yes!" She flashed out the words lest John should divine her sinking heart. She smiled too.

Seeing only his mother's smile, John launched into the dear topic. "She hasn't lived here long, only since May. I didn't tell you because—well, to tell the truth, I was afraid you'd be all cut up about it. Besides, it wasn't settled until last night. Why, mother, you're crying! Are you sorry?"

"No, no! I'm—glad! Go on!"

"I met her last year out at the lake. Do you remember my speaking of those girls out there? I knew then she was the only one in the world for me." John spoke very softly.

So he had cherished this girl in his heart a whole year, and she had thought herself to be his all in all!

"Wasn't it strange, mother," went on the young man in a subdued voice, as if his happiness was still a wonderful thing, to be reverenced and held in awe—"wasn't it strange that she should move here, not knowing it was my home?"

"Yes. Tell me everything, dear."

"All right. She is little and slim and has gray eyes." Mary Williams was built on generous, capable lines, and her eyes were brown. "Her hair is like yours—brown and heavy. She gives music lessons." Mary had no accomplishments except housekeeping. "She sings, too—oh, mother, you ought to hear her sing! And she is as quick as a bird and the prettiest dancer."

"Can she cook?"

"Well, I don't know, but she can do everything else. You see, there are so many in her family that it's hard to tell just who does do the work. I know she can sew, for she showed me a dress last night that she made."

After the supper work was done and John had gone off whistling Mary sat down by the fire. "O God, give me strength to bear it!" she prayed fiercely, holding tight to the arms of the chair, then relaxing in a sudden burst of resentful tears. "How can he—how can he bring that girl here—that Kitty?" ran her rebellious thoughts, and she forgot about her prayer. "Why, her very name sounds good for nothing. If I was an old woman it would be different, but I'm only forty-seven and as strong as ever. This is my house, my own house, and I keep it my own way. Yet a girl is going to come in and shove me back—me, who loves John more than she ever could! Don't I always come home early from sewing society so as to have John's supper on time? Don't I make his shirts, when almost every man buys them ready made? Wouldn't I do his washing if he would let me? Oh, she can't love him as I do? Probably she won't even let him smoke in peace. Oh, she can't come—she just can't!"

For an hour she poured out the rebellion in her soul to the leaping, sympathetic fire, then sank back exhausted. "How selfish I am!" she cried aloud. "I'll have to bear it. John's a man now." As she grew more calm she looked with disgust at her outburst. "I act like a baby! I guess I'm made of better stuff than that, and this is the last foolishness you'll hear from me. If my son's going to be married, why, he's going to be married—that's all."

But she forgot to be on her guard the next morning when John enthusiastically remarked that she should have heard Kitty sing "Dearie" the night before. "Dearie"—what a foolish name for a song! And with that one contemptuous thought all the bitterness of the thing came back to her.

"Do you always have to talk about her—even at the breakfast table?"

John's lips came together in a straight line. "I thought"— he began, then stopped abruptly. Ten minutes later he left the house in silence.

Mary would have given all she possessed to recall those words. A sort of hopelessness came over her. If she could control herself no better than that now, what would she do later?

If she only could be sure that the girl would be sensible! From John's description it didn't seem as if she could possibly be. "He has lost his head over some little flirt," she told herself, "and I can't stop him. I wonder if he will forgive me. I—I'm afraid not."

At supper that night her doubts were confirmed. John talked steadily about the weather, the shop, the garden—everything but Kitty. She longed to break in herself with the subject.

Two days passed. Then she could stand it no longer.

"John, I'm sorry"—

He motioned her to silence. "You have let me know very plainly that you don't want me to talk about her, and I won't."

Nor did he. A week passed by, then two—distressing weeks for them both.

"You came near losing your supper tonight," announced Mary one evening.

"Why, how is that?"

"I was downtown, waiting to take the 4:30 car, when, all at once, I dropped one of my parcels and everything in it rolled into the street. The car was in sight, and you know there isn't another until 5:30. I knew I couldn't get all the thread and buttons picked up in time, and I was thinking, 'Oh, dear, John won't have any supper until 7 o'clock,' when, all of a sudden, some one said, 'Let me help you.' It was some young girl, and, I declare, I never saw any one pick up things so fast in my life! I knew just enough to open by bag while she shoved them in. Then the car stopped, and she helped me on—not as she would some old lady, but just as if I was one of her girl friends. I never expect to see any one so handy and sweet as that again. I didn't notice what she looked like—I was that flurried—but I did see that she had on an odd, foreign looking ring."

"What sort of ring?"

"Silver. It had two bands joined together by little crosspieces, and there was a big green stone. Wasn't it funny that I should notice all those little things, and—my, what's the matter?"

"Nothing, mother, only—that was Kitty!"

Quite Different.

"Maria," said Mr. Rawlins, laying aside his hat and overcoat and rubbing his hands gleefully together, "you know that for years we have been wanting to buy a building lot in Kennedy's subdivision, but couldn't afford to do it on account of the high prices they ask for land out there. Well, I've just learned that Quinlan, who owns one of the best lots in that entire neighborhood, will sell it for half what it cost him if he can get the cash. He needs the money and can't get it any other way. I have a great mind to buy it tomorrow morning. It comes easily within our means."

"I don't think you ought to do it, Joshua," said Mrs. Rawlins.

"You don't think I ought to buy it? Why not?"

"It would be taking advantage of his necessities."

"But, Maria"—

"Besides, I have just learned of a splendid opportunity to buy some furniture that we need. Grigson & Mullins are advertising parlor sets at one-third less than cost because they are overstocked and can't afford to carry them through the season. I'd like to buy about $200 worth of parlor furniture. We'll never have as good a chance again."

Being a man of excellent self control, Mr. Rawlins merely smiled.—Youth's Companion.

Love In the Kitchen.

Among the domestic servants of a Germantown woman is a very pretty Irish girl, not long in this country. Now, Bertha had not been at work more than a couple of months before she became engaged to a plumber's apprentice. She confided to her mistress, however, that she had no intention of marrying at an early date, but wished instead to save her money and incidentally afford the apprentice time to become a regularly registered plumber.

The mistress good naturedly assented to the girl's request that the lad be allowed to visit her in the kitchen. It was observed that on such occasions only the voice of Bertha could be heard coming from the kitchen.

"Your sweetheart doesn't seem to be much of a talker," said the lady of the house to Bertha.

"No, mum," said Bertha; "leastways not yit, mum. But he'll do better as toime goes on. He's too bashful yit, mum, to do annything more than eat!"—Philadelphia Press.

The Distinguished Guest.

Captain Raabe was a man whose name had weight in the French cavalry. He was a tall man, belonging to the middle aged trooper type. With military qualities of the highest kind, he had a singular bearing, a savage sort of misanthropy and a cynical tongue, which stood in the way of promotion. When he was in the Sixth lancers, on garrison duty at Commercy, one of his comrades brought his father to dine with him at the officers' mess, a man of humble position and unpretentiously dressed. Captain Raabe, considering that this guest had not been fitly received, gave expression to his opinion, saying that if the executioner of Commercy had come in evening dress he would have had a better reception. The officers demurring, he made no rejoinder, but shortly afterward came to mess with a guest whose dress was irreproachable. Every one lavished attentions on the unknown. When dinner was over Captain Raabe, raising his glass, proposed the health of "the executioner of Commercy."

A Human Hiss Cowed the Lion.

At Cape Town a lion tamer was going through a performance in a cage with a full grown lion lately caught. Suddenly it was seen that the brute was putting the trainer through his paces rather than being put through itself. Softly, crouching and creeping, the big cat edged itself between the thoroughly unnerved man and the door of the den, fixing its victim with two rolling yellow orbs of flaming ferocity and sawing the empty air with its tufted tail as it crouched preparatory to springing. Many men among the audience, used to the ways of wild beasts, saw and comprehended, but only one man possessed the knowledge and the presence of mind to avert the apparently inevitable. Pursing up his lips as though he were going to whistle, he emitted a hoarse, low, rasping hiss. The beast heard and understood, for the sound was an exact imitation of the noise made by the giant constrictor when its huge body is coiled for the throw that never misses, that never relaxes and that no beast of the field is strong enough to withstand. Again and yet again the raucous sound rasped the stillness, and the angry brute drew back its head, its great eyes grew small and dull, the hackles rose and stiffened on its back, and it cowered, whining, on the floor of the cage.

Household Hints.

MORAVIAN PUDDING.

Pare and core half a dozen apples or enough to fill a small pudding dish. Make a syrup of one cup each of water and sugar, one teaspoon of lemon juice and a few gratings of the yellow peel; put in the apples and cook very carefully, turning over so that the cooking will be uniform and the apple remain whole. Place the apples in the pudding dish, fill centre of each with jam and boil the syrup down until it is quite thick, then pour over the apples. Put strips of the paste across the top in lattice fashion and lay one round the edge to give the top a finish, and cover ends of the strips. Bake until the paste is crisp, drop a candied cherry over spaces in the top and the pudding is ready to serve.

This is sort of a compromise between a pudding and a pie and the quality of the dish will depend largely upon the apples; those which cook quickly and have a subacid flavor are the best, although they easily over cook and fall to pieces if not watched. Test apples and potatoes when cooking with a small steel skewer and never with a silver fork, which will break them.

Ask Her This Question

"Do you know of any woman who ever received any benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

If any woman who is suffering with any ailment peculiar to her sex will ask her neighbors this question, she will be surprised at the result. There is hardly a community in this country where women cannot be found who have been restored to health by this famous old remedy, made exclusively from a simple formula of roots and herbs.

During the past 30 years we have published thousands of letters from these grateful women who have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable

SAYS HE SET THE FIRES.

John Lyman Admits Eager and Converse Barn Blazes.

GETS FROM THREE TO FIVE YEARS.

Is Sentenced in Superior Court Monday On Only One of the Three Counts Against Him.

John F. Lyman of Palmer, who has been in Springfield several months awaiting trial for arson, pleaded guilty on Monday to maliciously attempting to set fire to the Eager block on Main street in Palmer on the night of May 26, and was sentenced by Judge Raymond to not less than three nor more than five years in the state prison. He also pleaded guilty to the charge of setting fire to the Converse barn on the afternoon of December 8, 1908, and to the same building April 8, 1909, when it was destroyed, with the big Marcy barn.

District Attorney Taft, in moving for sentence, stated his belief that Lyman had been responsible for many of the 75 fires which had taken place since April, 1908, when he was dropped from the position of superintendent of the fire alarm, these fires destroying something like $150,000 in property. These practically ended with the arrest of Lyman at the time of the Eager block fire, he being watched so closely at that time that he was all but caught in the act. There was no doubt in the mind of the local judge or with the grand jury as to his guilt. For Lyman James B. Carroll asked for leniency, stating that Lyman had always been a hard working man; he was married and had two children. Several years ago he received an injury which might have caused a weakness for setting fires. He asked that he be sent to the house of correction instead of the state prison, so that his family might have an opportunity to see him occasionally.

The circumstances connected with Lyman's arrest left little room for doubt as to his guilt concerning the fire in the Eager block. Officer Crimmins and Selectman Holden were standing on the corner of Main and Central streets late in the evening when Lyman passed them. They kept him in sight until he was seen to pass to the rear of the Stone block adjoining the Eager block on the west; Mr. Holden then watched the front of the blocks until he saw Lyman come back to Main street from the east side of the Eager block. Going at once to the rear of the block he found a fire blazing in the basement. Officer Crimmins arrived about the same time and fired his revolver to attract a crowd. Lyman came with the crowd and was placed under arrest. At the lockup he wanted to know what the joke was, and on being told and questioned denied having been in the rear of the Eager block that day; he also denied having been in several places where he had been closely shadowed during the evening. He stontly maintained his innocence until Monday morning.

HAMPDEN.

Mrs. A. D. Coash is visiting her son in Lowell.

Miss Eva Cleveland has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Samuel Butler.

Mrs. L. A Burleigh has returned from a visit with friends in Framingham.

H. M. Davis was called to Somers last Friday by the death of his mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Judson Hyde of Springfield were guests over Sunday of Mrs. Warner Chapin.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard West, who removed from town 37 years ago, are visiting former friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Hitchcock of Springfield and Frank D. Bardwell of Crestwood, N. Y., spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Ballard.

Mrs. Roxanna Warner has sold her farm to William J. McKay of the Springfield Fire and Marine Insurance Co., and he will take possession this fall. The farm consists of 187 acres and occupies one of the most sightly locations in town. It was bought by Dr. Warner 22 years ago, and after the buildings on the adjacent Reed place—which he had also just bought—were burned, he built the present barn, cornerib and creamery. Mr. McKay will put a practical farmer in charge of the place.

The bricks for the Main street paving have arrived and are piled along the street ready for use. Nothing has yet been heard from the rails for the street railway, although they were promised to be here some time ago.

DELEGATES OF BOTH PARTIES.

The Republican and Democratic Caucus Results. Mellen for Senator.

The caucuses of both political parties were held this week those of the Republicans Tuesday evening and those of the Democrats Wednesday. The results are given below. There were no contests locally, though this section has an interest in the senatorial nomination in the Worcester-Hampden district, of which the towns in Eastern Hampden are a part. The nomination is conceded to the Worcester end of the district this year, and there have been two candidates, Walter Mellen of Brookfield and Jonas Bemis of Charlton, both of whom have visited the towns hereabouts. The reports from the Worcester towns seem to indicate that Mr. Mellen has the majority of the delegates.

A gang of men is engaged in cleaning up the old cemetery on the Palmer road, known as the "Indian" cemetery. A new iron fence, for which money was appropriated last spring is being put up, the work being done under the direction of W. A. Conkey, superintendent of cemeteries.

Miss Katherine Glancy, who with her mother has just returned from Ireland where they spent the summer, was reported Sunday as being sick with typhoid fever, and the house is quarantined. The Cercle Canadien, St. Jean Baptist Society has voted to furnish a room in the new hospital.

The annual parade and inspection of the fire department will be held to-morrow afternoon. The parade will start from the engine house on Water street at 1.30, and will be followed by the trials. The Second Regiment band of Springfield will lead the parade and give a concert later; the Lafayette drum corps will also play in the parade. The annual ball of the firemen will be held in the town hall in the evening.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Sept. 22, 1909.

To-day the political shadings of Massachusetts are slightly different from what they were yesterday. Representative Arthur L. Nason of Haverhill has secured the Republican nomination for the Senate against Representative Leslie K. Morse of Haverhill and ex-Representative Samuel L. Porter of Amesbury, and Charles S. Hamlin has agreed to act as chairman of the Democratic state convention. Nason's victory occasions more comment than any other incident of last night's caucuses anywhere in the state. He was fighting also the membership in the state committee of J. Otis Wardwell, who has been a member for many years and has strong state house connections. Thus Nason has defeated the Republican machine in a straight and hot fight extending over months. Morse and Nason were sparring for points against each other on the floor of the House during the entire session of the Legislature. It has been said that Senator Lodge was also an issue between the two men. This is not so, although it is true that Morse declared for Lodge and tried to make it appear that Nason was opposed to him But Nason simply said that Lodge was not an issue in the campaign. He would not take sides openly either for or against Lodge. Nason is therefore free to be anti-Lodge if he chooses, when the time comes, and he has not been at all a Lodge admirer in some of his recent utterances. Some effort has been made to charge the result to Socialist conditions in Haverhill, but that issue has passed by there and that idea did not enter into the case at all On the Republican side the question has been asked here today, if Nason could give the machine such a jolt what could not a strong man do if he should throw himself into the effort? It is probable that this affair will have effects till Lodge is re-elected. Nason favors popular election of United States senators.

Hamlin's identifying himself with the Democracy and presiding at the state convention in Faneuil Hall September 30 which will nominate Vahey for governor may signify much to the Democracy. He is strongly in favor of making the campaign upon the tariff as an issue. As he sees it, there are many Republicans who are dissatisfied sufficiently to vote against Draper in order to rebuke the party for making only such reduction, as he puts it, of reducing wages rather than duties on neccessities of life. It is not to be presumed that Hamlin has consented to take the chairmanship without an understanding with Vahey and the Democratic state committee that he shall be at liberty to advance these views, and that they will be in harmony with the Democratic platform. On the other hand, Vahey has been put under considerable pressure to make the campaign turn upon state issues, especially those of economy and the power of the governor over the commissions, to the end that there may be full responsibility and everything be done in the administration by the governor as the sole responsible official in touch with the people. Probably he will try to harmonize both wings by bringing in both state and national issues. Hamlin's personality will help the Democracy. Chairman Macleod of their state committee is proving himself a good worker, organizer and upbuilder, as well as harmonizer and keeper of the peace. He is said to be popular, and this seems to be a year when it may be possible for some profitable forgetting to be done by the Democrats, provided they turn their eyes to the future, as Hamlin and Macleod would have them, putting the recent past as far ont of mind as possible. Hence the Democratic developments, added to Nason's success make the shading a trifle brighter to-day for the Democrats than it was yesterday, or has been for a while.

A great kick is being made by the corporations against their annual taxes. According to practice, different sorts of corporations have had their annual taxes assessed by different members of the tax commissioner's department. There are some 400 public service corporations in the state, and about 7000 private business corporations, all of which must have their taxes fixed from the state house. The last 10 days of September are set aside by the tax commissioner's department for opportunity to argue for an abatement of taxes, if there is a belief that the assessment is too high. Judging by this year's experience, many corporations do so believe. There has been a rush to the department to have the taxes reduced. The commissioner will hear each case separately and in most instances it is expected that the parties will be able to agree, but if they do not, then the aggrieved corporations will take their grievance to the state board of appeals, over the head of the tax commissioner. This board has engaged Room 240 in the state house, the largest there is for committee hearings, for 15 days from Thursday, October 28.

Not much progress has been made toward the establishment of credit unions for the benefit of poor people who are forced to borrow money and are not able to get as good rates as they should by reason of their good character, because they have no credit. One such union has been formed. The petitioners consist almost entirely of Poles in Boston. They have probably become acquainted with the system in Europe, for there are thousands of unions over there. It is hoped that these unions will be established by the persons of small means who are now forced to borrow in pawn shops, if they borrow at all. The idea is advanced today that it might be possible to promote the new system by getting labor unions interested in them. The unions are designed for a class which will not insure in a co-operative bank. If the working people really get hold of the idea and practice it as they do in Europe, they will push it to success.

The other effort to improve the financial condition of the poorer people, savings bank insurance, is not making headway. It is said here that the promoters of the Whitman bank, which is one of the two now in operation, the other being near by in Brockton, are feeling somewhat discouraged over the prospect that the institution will ever become a practical substitute to any extent of the prevailing old line insurance or of the industrial insurance. Practically, there is the same perfection in the system as there was proved to be when the plan was before the Legislature. But the practical obstacle in the way of success is the need of canvassers to bring the system to the attention of the working people whom it is designed to benefit. It is true that the natural tendency of people is not to attend to the matter but to put it off, and the consequence is that nothing is done. In the case of industrial insurance, there are the ever busy canvassers, going week after week to the policy holders, collecting their contributations and bringing the matter home to the people personally. It was

PALMER NEWS.

PRIZE CUP FOR FAIR.

Additional Trophy for School Athletics Much Interest in Exhibition.

The committee in charge of the athletic sports at the Palmer Fair has acceded to the request of some of the schools which participate in the high school meet on Saturday, the second day, and will give a handsome cup to the school winning the greatest number of points at the meet. A first position in any event will count five points, a second three and a third one point. This is the custom at most meets, and enables a team to work for the glory of the school, the cup standing as a memento of the school's prowess rather than a mark of individual achievement. The cup will be given in addition to the first and second prize medals in each event, which have been the only prizes heretofore. Only the scores in the Saturday contests will count for the cup, the high school relay race of Friday, with its silk championship banner and solid gold medals for the team members, being a contest all by itself.

Much interest is being taken in the 800-yards relay race for both grades. Teams from the Palmer schools are hard at work on the track, and already entries have been announced from several teams in other towns. This will be run Friday morning and will without doubt be an event well worth watching.

That the fame of the Palmer Fair is spreading far beyond the limits of the society is evidenced by the fact that applications are coming in daily for premium lists from localities and people whom it was not supposed had ever heard of the town or the fair. The outlook for a big list of horses in the speed classes was never so good as this year in spite of the large number of horses—more than ever before—which was here last year. Enough space has already been engaged on the midway to assure a big variety of amusement there. The society's rule against gambling will be strictly enforced, and objectionable shows of every kind will be barred from the grounds.

A good sale of reserved seats on the grand stand is reported, and the society's action in this line seems to be thoroughly appreciated.

The committee on attractions is adding new features for the entertainment of patrons almost daily. Among the latest is Ben Chadwick, the Westfield singer, who will sing in front of the grandstand Mr. Chadwick sings because he likes to sing—and the people like to hear him; he is well known all through this section, and his songs are sure to please.

Still another feature will be motor cycle races, probably two. There are several of the machines in town and others from outside will probably compete. Fast time is expected, especially in the local race, as the rivalary between the riders is keen.

RELIEF CORPS GUESTS.

Hampden and Hampshire Association Meeting in Palmer Wednesday.

L. L. Merrick Woman's Relief Corps entertained the Hampden and Hampshire Association of Women's Relief Corps in Odd Fellows' Hall Wednesday, about 200 being present. Mrs. L. E. Carpenter, president of the association, presided. Among those present were Mrs. L. Stewart Wadsworth and Mrs. Emily Clark, Past Department Presidents of the Woman's Relief Corps of Massachusetts. The former gave an interesting account of the national convention at Salt Lake City, Utah, and spoke of the growth of the organization, 12,000 new members having been added in the past year. The organization has in the treasury $225,000, which is at the disposal of the Grand Army for its needs. Interesting reports were read from 12 corps. Dinner was served in Memorial Hall at 12:30.

Mrs. Lillian Parkhurst, president of the local corps, called the assemblage to order at 2:45. Miss Ida Fuller gave a piano solo, there was a duet by Mrs. J. H. Davis and Mrs. Edith Smith, Mrs. Susan W. Coleman read an original poem and Mrs. Bessie Grimstone sang a solo. Past Department President Wadsworth spoke in an interesting manner and closed with an original poem. There were remarks from H. W. Stimson, commander of L. L. Merrick post of Palmer, Rev. F. W. Gibbs and Lewis Thayer, commander of Cyrus W. Cross camp, Sons of Veterans. Mrs. Ada French gave a recitation, and Mrs. Bessie Grimstone gave a character song, "The barn dance." A farce, "The Boomalang Family," was given by members of the local corps. Rev. F. W. Gibbs and H. W. Stimson were made honorary members of the association. The next meeting will be in Northampton in December.

Deer's Head in River.

The head of a large buck deer was found in the river at Three Rivers Saturday by workmen employed on the bridge of the C. V. railroad. It was stranded on a sandbar in the stream. Deputy Game Warden Luman was called to investigate. The head had evidently been hacked from the body hurriedly, as though the person was anxious to get it out of sight as soon as possible. It was probably thrown into the river with the idea that it would sink. It is likely that someone shot the animal and feared the possession of the head might lead to detection.

Special Rates to Stafford Fair.

The Central Vermont railroad offers special rates and an extra train service next week to the fair at Stafford Springs, Ct. Round-trip tickets will be sold Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday for 60 cents, and 45 cents from Monson. On Wednesday trains will leave Palmer at 7:27, 9:35 and 9:55 a. m., and 1:25 p. m.; on Thursday the service will be the same with the exception that the 9:25 train will be dropped. On these days a special train will leave the grounds at 6 in the evening for Palmer and connecting with the B. and A. road at Palmer; regular trains leave at 4:55 and 7:12 each day.

Small Blaze Sunday.

Box 66—South Main street—rang one round Sunday afternoon at 3:05, and then the one stroke "Fire out" signal sounded. There was a hustle of many people and a part of the fire apparatus to the "Childs" house on South Main street, where a small blaze had been found in a pile of kindling at the rear of the house. Children, waste paper and matches had formed a combination which had started a small blaze which was easily put out. There was practically no damage.

Staging Drops—No Serious Results.

By the breaking of a staging at the new building of the Wright Wire Company's Monday morning two men—Den Covaleski and Augelo Bronka—took a sudden tumble from the third to the second story. There were no bones broken, but the men received a severe shaking up and their backs were somewhat strained.

Girl Bitten by Dog.

The five-years-old daughter of Stillman Smith, a farmer living near Dunhamtown in Brimfield, was severely bitten on the wrist by a dog on Wednesday. The two were playing together and the dog attempted to seize an apple the child had in her hand. No serious results are expected.

Held on Serious Charge.

In the district court Monday morning Dorcey Goncormeier of Monson was given a hearing on a statutory charge. He was found probably guilty and was bound over to the grand jury in bonds of $2000, which he could not furnish. The crime was committed in Monson some time ago, the victim being a seven-years-old girl.

Dog Throws Man From Motorcycle.

Daniel J. Connor, an employe of the telephone company, was thrown from his motorcycle in Thorndike yesterday by a dog which seized him by one leg as he was passing and inflicted a slight wound besides upsetting the machine. Mr Connor was not seriously hurt, but was somewhat shaken up.

Charles W. Robinson began his duties as janitor of the high school Monday, after 12 years in the employ of E. A. Buck & Co., the last few years as traveling salesman.

The Republican convention of the First Hampden representative district will be held in the district court room in Palmer on Monday, Oct. 4, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

D. B. Collity, mail carrier between the railroad station and the post office, has been laid up for a few days on account of sickness, but has recovered and is back on duty again.

Miss Florence Leonard of Warren and Miss Ethel Mulliken of Lexington have been spending a part of the week with Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Chandler on North Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Park of Townsend, Vt., have been guests a part of the week of Mrs. Park's sister, Mrs. W. H. Hitchcock on Squier street. Mr. Park was formerly in business in Palmer.

Mrs. E. D. Linnell of Providence, R. I., has been a guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. LeGro on Converse avenue this week. Other guests have been Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Caryl of Bridgewater.

Miss Lee, who has been teaching in the Forest Lake district school, has resigned, and is succeeded by Miss Margaret Scanuell of Worcester, a graduate of the Westfield Normal School.

James Heenehan, who has been in Paterson, N. J., in the employ of the Sullivan-McNally construction company, has been at home this week preparatory to entering Boston University next week.

Court Palmer, Foresters of America, will hold their ninth anniversary and banquet on Thursday evening, October 14th at Hotel Burns. Several of the grand and supreme officers will be present.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Congregational church met Monday afternoon with Mrs. L. E. Chandler on North Main street, and voted to manage a lunch stand on the agricultural park the two days of the fair.

District Deputy Grand Master Guy C. Allen Jr. of Belchertown, and suite, will make an official visitation to Thomas lodge of Masons next Monday evening. The third degree will be worked. A collation will be served.

Prof. Beaulieu of Holyoke will give an exhibition of hypnotism, and other feats along the same line in the opera house this and to-morrow evenings. Three vaudeville acts are said to be on the program also, and the show is claimed to be worth seeing.

The coon season has begun, and a few captures are reported. George Shaw, who probably secures more than any other hunter in the same line hereabouts, killed one last week which weighed 15 pounds, and Saturday secured a still heavier one alive.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson W. Munger of Des Moines, Iowa, are visiting Mrs. L. M. Shaw on Walnut street. Mr. and Mrs. Munger were former residents of Palmer, he being a brother of the late Harrison W. Munger, the tailor; they have not visited Palmer for 35 years.

The board of engineers of the fire district has located the new fire alarm box, voted at the spring meeting, at the corner of Pine and Pond streets; the number is 43. The key for box 38, at Shearer's Corner, has been changed and is now attached to the box.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Farrelly have the sympathy of a large number of friends in the death of their daughter, Irene, four years old, which occurred Monday morning of diphtheria after an illness of only one day. The burial was Tuesday in the Thorndike cemetery.

A special program will be in order at the meeting of the Palmer Grange this evening, a competitive entertainment between sides selected by the master and overseer, the losing side to provide a harvest supper at the next meeting. The judges will be D. L. Bodfish, L. T. Gray and Mrs. E. J. Freeman.

Baptist services in the Advent chapel Sunday will be as follows: Morning prayer meeting at 10:15; worship and sermon at 10:45, subject, "The supreme duty." Bible school at 12; Y. P. S. C. E. at 6; evening service at 7, when Rev. James E. Norcross of Boston will deliver an address. All are invited.

One of the children in the grammar school was sent home one day this week with a sore throat and the report has been circulated that it was diphtheria. This has been proved erroneous however, a negative culture having been returned from Dr. Emerson of Springfield, the bacteriologist of the board of health.

D. F. Burritt, who has been superintendent of Springfield gaslight company for the past six years, has resigned that position and will accept a better one, having several more advantageous offers. Mr. Burritt was for a time superintendent of the Central Massachusetts Electric Company's plant in Palmer, and also of the electric road.

Announcements of the marriage of John Raymond Milligan and Miss Beatrice Isabel Humphrey of New York have been received here this week. The wedding took place on Tuesday of this week. Mr. and Mrs. Milligan will be at home after December first at 7210 Hough avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, where Mr. Milligan is engaged in business.

Henry S. Hobson of Pearl street has growing in his yard one of the finest hydrangea bushes to be seen in this vicinity, it having about 150 handsome blossoms of white and pink. Many of the blooms are unusually large, and there are about 25 measuring 12 inches in length by eight inches in diameter. This excellent showing is secured by severe pruning in the late fall.

Wiceuty Kozsckr and Joseph Zych of Ludlow appeared in the district court Tuesday charged with trespassing on land of the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates in Wilbraham. They claimed to have been in this country only six months and unable to read the posted notices; because of this they were allowed to go. The company has agreed to post notices printed in English, Polish and Italian.

The pictures at the Elite to-night and to-morrow are: "Adventures of a keg," "Chinatown slavery," "The son's return," "House of terror," "Boys will be boys." The songs are: "Take me to your heart again," and "Sweetheart's a pretty name when it's y-o-u." There will be a special matinee for children to-morrow afternoon from 2:15 to 5:15; the evening performances are from 7:30 to 10.

The first meeting of the season of the Men's League will be held in Memorial Hall next Wednesday evening. A supper will be served at 6:30 by a caterer; the price will be 25 cents. All men are invited to attend, and supper tickets may be obtained of members of the League; they must be secured in advance, as the caterer will need to know the number to provide for. After the supper there will be addresses by Representative Ernest E. Hobson and Lee T. Gray, superintendent of schools, on "Palmer, and what the Men's League can do for it." The meeting will be open to all men and all are invited.

The special town meeting last Saturday was not a very strenuous affair. D. L. Bodfish was chosen moderator. It was voted to accept and allow a common sewer on North Main street in Palmer from a point near Randall street to the river, and it was voted to take the private land necessary by right of eminent domain; land of Fred H. Smith, the Central Vermont railroad company, Rose Boyd and Miss K. I. McMahon will have to be crossed. The vote of last spring, appropriating $1800 for the construction of a sewer was rescinded, and $1800 was voted for the construction of the sewer and to pay for the land damages.

WALES.

W. E Needham visited Boston last week.

Burley Clark of Franklin is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Hubbard.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Marsh are spending a few days at E. L. Needham's.

Miss Eva Royce has been spending a few days in Three Rivers as the guest of her brother, Milton J. Royce.

Mr. Norcross, secretary of the Baptist Home Mission Society, will speak in the Baptist church next Sunday morning.

George Dimmick lost one of his horses last week and has decided to discontinue his freight and express business between Wales and Palmer.

Miss Emma Lanphear visited in Lawrence and Lowell this week and attended a meeting of postmasters, which was held in Boston on Thursday.

Mrs. D. E. Parker entertained the Baptist Ladies' Aid Society on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Parker have just returned from a vacation spent in Maine.

C. G. Thompson has sold his farm to parties from Connecticut. Charles Corbin and family, who have occupied the farm for some years, will move into the village and open a boarding-house.

The front walls of the old burned mill have been taken down this week so that they no longer are a menace to passers-by. Some of the brick is being used in the underpinning of a woodshed which Mrs. Isaiah Hiscock is having built.

Rev. George H. Hudson preached his farewell sermon in the Methodist church last Sunday. Mr. Hudson is to go to Athol where he will act as chaplain in a home for aged people and orphans. Mr. Hudson has served the church here faithfully for three and a half years, and his going will be deeply regretted by many. The pulpit will be supplied by a student for the present.

The following books, all of them gifts, have been added to the public library this week: "History of the United States," by John Fiske; "History of Rome and Italy," by Mary Platt Parmele; "The United States," edited by John M. Hall; "American Literature," by William Cranston Lawton; "Renaissance and Modern Art," by W. H. Goodyear; "Washed in His Blood, Indian Fairy Tales," by Mary Hazelton Wade; "Peter," by F. Hopkinson Smith.

BOSTON LETTER.

expected for the new system that its desirability would make people come up of their own accord and take out policies. It was called "over the counter insurance," because the savings banks were pictured handing out policies in response to a popular demand, like a stationer selling valentines just before St Valentine's Day. But the experiment has not worked in that way. It is said here that one central bank for the western part of the state, one for the middle, one for the northeast, one in Boston, and one in the southeast, would be all that the state could support,—each to have branches.

The rumor of the death of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, the head of the Christian Science church, spread with so much plausibility of truth that inquiry came from New York for information from the spot, for there was circumstantiality there which make the statement seem plausible. Probably the report was identical with that sent out from Hartford, Ct., to the effect that Dr. E. J. Foster Eddy, adopted son of Mrs Eddy, had said that she was dead. But inquiries here of Alfred Farlow, who is supposed to be as close to her as any living person, brought out the statement that Mrs. Eddy is in the habit of going out for an airing every day, for an hour or two, that she had within a day or two been seen to go by Mr. Farlow's house, which is quite near here at Chestnut Hill, and that, as far as he knew, she was in excellent health. He characterized the report as of the same class as is current from time to time. One inquirer makes the comment that the statement will have to come true some day in the natural order of events. It is the curiosity of some people to know just when it will be, mixed, perhaps, with a ghostly suspicion that she may cheat death, after all, which makes the exceptional interest in her prospective demise.

At the anti-imperialist headquarters there is a constant current of progressive information, not of a sensational order, but sufficient to show that there is wide interest on the subject and that slowly, but surely, the public opinion of the nation, as far as it comes to any conclusion upon the problem, is that the United States ought to get out of the islands and give the people their independence. There is no doubt that the feeling of the Filipinos is constantly growing in favor of independent national existence, nor that there is a national solidarity gaining ground all the time. We are not welcome out there, and they will be glad to see the last of us, although they want the neutrality of the islands guaranteed by the Great Powers, a proposition which is perfectly practical.

LANDON.

PALMER CENTER.

Newton Stimson has returned to Cornell University.

Mr. Johnston has been burning over a large tract of land.

Mrs. Miller entertained on Tuesday an out-of-town friend.

Mr. Switzer who has been stopping here this summer, has returned to Cornell.

E. C. Butler and wife and Mrs. Lindon Butler and two children, who have been visiting relatives in this place, have returned to their home in Salem.

WARREN.

Miss Mary Hosley has returned to her studies in Boston.

Mrs. William F. Duncan and Miss Sadie V. Connor have been in New York this week.

Under the direction of Charles G. Hamblett 900 feet of heavy new rails were laid last Sunday on the Boston and Albany east-bound track, the work being so timed that not a single passenger train was delayed.

EAST BRIMFIELD.

Carol Stanger spent Sunday in Springfield.

William Basnor of Springfield was in town Sunday.

Arthur Curtis of Holland started his meat route last week.

Frank Bagley of White River Junction, Vt., has been a recent visitor of friends and relatives here.

The primary school began Monday with Miss Hattie Lombard as teacher. The grades run from one to five.

Milo Dodge had a narrow escape from serious injury or possible death Wednesday while working in the auger shop. One of the flanges which holds the emery wheel in position broke and the pieces flew all around but miraculously none touched him; one piece went through at two-inch plank.

BRIMFIELD.

Mrs. Darling of West Dennis and Eben Darling of Boston are spending this week at the home of Charles S. Tarbell.

Among the guests at the hotel are Mrs. Baker of West Dennis, Mrs. O'Leary and Miss Katharine O'Leary of Salem.

Mrs. Stoughton and Miss Stoughton have returned to New York after spending several weeks at the home of Mrs. Samuel Brown.

Visitors to Steerage Rock Saturday reported seeing with a glass the Connecticut, which is very unusual on account of the situation of the Mt. Holyoke range and the smoke and fog in the village. The atmosphere was uncommonly clear Saturday.

There was an interesting meeting of the Grange Tuesday evening. The subject for discussion was: "What branch of education is most useful to young farmers?" The disputants were O. E. Parker, George Sherman and Dr. Sawin. There was a paper on "Economy on farm and in household," by Mrs. Clarence B. Brown and one on "What are the qualifications of a successful farmer?" by W. S. Spooner. These were followed by a song by Maud Bedell, a recitation by May Moore and the "Journal" by Mrs. M. A. Newton.

The characteristic hat of the season is a large turban, moire silk and velvet trimming being much used. It is a stately hat and the matrons, who have been decidely overlooked in the free-and-easy sort of design for a season or two, will be glad to learn that they have once more been taken special care of by designers. The dignity of the new hat is fitting for the daughter and the mother. This little summary from millinery world is from S. Levison of Springfield, whose store opening comes this week. He imports from Paris, where he personally makes his own selections, and his remarks are worth hearing, for he is master-of-arts in millinery.

BASEBALL.

Three Rivers 13—Bondsville 2.

The Bondsville baseball team met with a defeat on the Athol grounds in Three Rivers Saturday, their rival team doing the trick by a score of 13 to 2. The game was uninteresting from start to finish; Belisle's one-hand catch of a foul ball in the fifth was a feature, while Graham's running catch in center field was a star. The pitching of "Dick" Connors for Three Rivers was very good, he fanning 10 men and holding the heavy hitting Bondsville team to the small total of 4 hits. The score:

Marriages in Spain.

Though marriages in Spain are often arranged without the consent of the bride elect, law or custom gives the Spanish woman the power of appealing to a magistrate if she wishes to escape from a union which is distasteful to her, and the magistrate may take her from her father's house until she is of age and her own mistress, while if she determines to marry a man of whom her parents disapprove she may also place herself under the protection of the law, and she cannot be deprived of her share of the family estates. On reaching her majority she enjoys the same privileges as her brother with regard to property. She may inherit, will, buy and sell. But when she marries she again reverts to the position of a minor, and her husband has entire control of her possessions, which he can squander without rendering any account to her, though she cannot spend a penny of her own money without his consent. He may desert her and her children without incurring any punishment or much public condemnation. A Spanish lady confers on her husband the titles of nobility and any privilege connected therewith she may possess at the time of her marriage.—London Queen.

A Handy Man.

"Why so sad?" queried the young man, looking at her fondly.

"Oh, nothing special, only I have troubles of my own," said the frail young thing, sighing.

"I insist in taking a hand in them," he said, seizing a dainty palm that was wasting its time in her lap.—Boston Globe.

A man had just arrived at a Massachusetts summer resort. In the afternoon he was sitting on the veranda when a handsome young woman and her six-years-old son came out. The little fellow at once made friends with the latest arrival. "What is your name?" he asked. Then, when this information had been given, he added, "Are you married?" "No," responded the man, with a smile. At that the child paused a moment, and, turning to his mother said: "What else was it, mamma, you wanted me to ask him?"—Harper's Weekly.

Meeting of the Clerical Club.

The Clerical Club of the Methodist churches of the Springfield district was entertained at the residence of Rev. James M. Gage on Green street Tuesday. The club consists of 12 members, eight of whom attended the meeting. Those present were Rev. E. M. Antrim of Trinity church, Springfield; Rev. C. O. Ford of the Ashley church, Springfield; Rev. E. V. Hinchliffe of St. James church, Springfield; District Superintendent Dr. J. P. Kennedy of Springfield; Rev. W. M. Cassidy of Greenfield; Rev. C. H. Davis of Chicopee Falls and Rev. W. C. Townsend of Ware. The object of the club is for the members to get together and talk over events pertaining to the interests of and the improvement of the church. Two papers are usually read, one being a religious paper and the other an academic; at Tuesday's meeting the religious paper was read by Rev. W. M. Cassidy of Greenfield on "What is Gospel Preaching?" The academic paper was read by Rev. C. H. Davis of Chicopee Falls, subject, "The Present Statics of Evolutionary Hypothesis." The meetings are held monthly, and are usually well attended. Dinner was served and the afternoon was spent in showing the guests about town.

Fozle—St. John.

A pretty wedding occurred Tuesday morning at St. Patrick's church when Miss Annie Fozie of this town and Arthur St. John of Northampton were united in marriage. The wedding march was played by the organist, Miss Mary McKenna. Miss Eveline St. John, sister of the groom, was maid of honor and Joseph Fozie, a brother of the bride, was best man. A nuptial mass was celebrated and the ceremony performed by the pastor, Rev. Thomas O'Keefe. The wedding presents were numerous, including silver, crockery and linen. After a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. St. John will reside in Northampton, where Mr. St. John is employed.

Hit by Falling Plank.

Mark Noble of High street had a narrow escape from serious injury at the farm of his son, H. M. Noble, on the Wilbraham road, Monday afternoon. He was at work filling the silo, when a heavy plank fell from the top of the silo, a distance of thirty feet, one end hitting Mr. Noble in the face, breaking his nose and cutting his face quite badly. He was attended by Dr. G. E. Fuller, and is able to be around.

Workman Gets Fall.

Frederick Truman, while at work on the Hughes block on Main street Wednesday afternoon, fell while working on the roof of the building to the floor, a distance of about 12 feet, striking his back across one of the floor timbers. He was picked up unconscious but soon revived. No bones were broken, but he has a very sore back, which will keep him from work for a few days.

THE DEACON'S DAY.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Deacon Hardstone of Riverton was a good man. He was a man of years and dignity. He was a man always to be found on the side of law and order and charity. The only thing in this world that troubled him and his good wife was the fact that they had a nephew over at Saltville who was a loud young man. Money had been left him by an aunt, and he sported. He not only sported at home, despite the protests of his widowed mother, but he came over to Riverton and sported there. The deacon struggled and struggled with him, but it did no good. He would drink cocktails, and he would speed his auto around the town and on the highways, and finally he was ordered out of the deacon's house and told never to return. Then the sporty youth began to study how to get even.

Now, the deacon had a weakness for sweet cider, though he didn't go telling it around. When cider making time came he carted apples to the mill and had one barrel of cider made—never more. The cider would retain its sweetness for about a month. When it began to get an edge on it, it was provided with "mother" and rolled aside to become vinegar.

Of course this little one barreled affair was known to the nephew, and after a little thought he saw his way clear. When the apples and the barrel had been taken to the mill he was ready with his plot. Perhaps he had the aid of the owner of the mill, but that has never been satisfactorily settled. There are thirty-two gallons of cider in the average barrel. How many gallons of something else went into the barrel has not yet been solved by Sherlock Holmes. It was sufficient, no matter what the number,

When the deacon went after his barrel it was ready for him, and never did a cider barrel look more innocent. It was rolled down cellar to cool and was not tapped until the afternoon of the next day. Then the deacon's wife went out to visit a neighbor, and he put a spigot in the barrel and drew a glass to drink. He had been drinking cider for twenty-three years, but never did cider taste like that before. It had a peculiar taste. It had an agreeable taste. The palate just cried out for more. The deacon gave it more. He was a little bit frightened when he found himself laughing, for he had not laughed for sixteen years by the almanac, but he drew another glass and slowly sipped it and figured that he must have mixed a lot of Seek No Further apples in with the pippins. At any rate, he wasn't going to seek any further for a good thing. Who can tell just how many glasses of sweet cider a man will drink under favorable conditions? You can't even guess at it.

When Deacon Hardstone ascended from the cellar his eyes were shining and his hair curling. He put on his hat and walked out to the gate, wondering why his heels were so springy, and down by the postoffice he saw an auto. It was the one belonging to his sporty nephew. He walked down there to give the young man a blast; but, not finding him, he was seized with a sudden desire to take a ride all by his lonesome. He had been shown how to start and stop the machine. Before leaping in he whooped. He didn't mean to whoop, but the whoop sorter whooped itself. Then he whooped again as he started off.

The town of Riverton will never forget that day. In fact, it is observed as a sort of holiday under the name of "deacon's day." He put that auto at its fastest clip and went up and down the four or five streets. He drove everybody within doors. He immolated twenty different runaways. He whooped at the corners, and he whooped in the middle of the blocks. Sometimes he whooped and swung his hat at the same time.

When this happened the machine either grazed a tree or took to the sidewalk and cleared off the kerosene barrels in front of the groceries. Of course it was plain that something was wrong, and a hundred people would have extended help if they could, but the trouble was they couldn't.

But they stopped the deacon at last. They piled dry goods boxes on the street and ran him into a millinery store and captured him. He was still whooping, but he didn't fight back when they carried him home and put him to bed. Of course there was something done about it. No deacon can perform that way after so many years of probity without a bit of scandal following. He had to toe the mark before his church. He was dimly conscious that he had drunk too much cider, and he intended to own up like a man and ask that the contents of the barrel be investigated. He was saved from this, however. A brother deacon suggested that he submit his head for medical examination, and the suggestion was followed. A doctor felt of his bumps, asked him a lot of questions and then made a medical report to the effect:

"This is to certify that I have carefully examined into the mental condition of Deacon Hardstone, and I find that his late performance was begot, superinduced, encouraged and finally developed by what is known to alienists as a brainstorm. I don't think he'll be dangerous again for several years to come."

And after the charges against the deacon had been dropped he went home and said to his wife:

"Should our nephew Henry call and ask to be forgiven for drinking cocktails I think we'll try and do it, and tomorrow I'll knock the bung out of that barrel and let it begin to sour."

Animals With Pockets.

Did you ever think what a curious thing it is that some animals have pockets—great, roomy, fur lined vest pockets, big enough to carry a family of little ones about in? Many of the animals native to Australia and Tasmania have these convenient pockets, and so has the possum, a common animal in our southern states. The kangaroo is the largest of this species. Full grown kangaroos go sixteen feet at a jump, and so when going on a long journey or running from hunters think what a comfort it must be to Mother Kangaroo to know that her babies are snug and safe in her pocket!—Exchange.

Secret Ink.

A simple expedient when one wishes to confide his secrets to paper and yet keep them is to use ordinary rice water instead of ink. It cannot be seen when dry, but turns blue when iodine is applied to it. If it be desired to make perfectly sure of the destruction of the contents of the letter after it has been read the purpose may be accomplished by writing it with a solution of iodide of starch in water. A few days later the script will have disappeared.

DOING SOMETHING DESPERATE.

And After It Was Done Sylvia Really Felt Contented.

By JEANNE OLIVE LOIZEAUX.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

The moonlight and her beauty softened the scorn of her glance when she saw that it was Max who had been sent back for her. She sat alone in Jack Burroughs' stalled machine. Jack and his wife had walked in, being due at an important function.

"You!" Sylvia's tone matched the intention of her glance.

"Even I, Sylvia," he replied with a rueful grin. "Fate is sometimes decent. A fellow has to risk what welcome is coming to him."

"It was horrid of the Burroughses to send you, but they had to get to that dinner, I suppose! My ankle still refuses to let me walk far, or I'd have gone with them afoot."

Tall and fair, cap in hand, he was standing with an offered hand to help her down and into his own little runabout. But she did not move. His glance followed hers to the gleaming object held fearfully in her lap. He took both hand and pistol as she explained.

"Jack would leave it when I insisted on their going and sending back the first respectable person they met"—

"Thanks! Are you coming?" He pocketed the weapon. But she only removed her big hat and veil.

"You know why I'm afraid! You're worse than a pistol. I can't trust you." Her tone was quite serious. "Next time you ask me to marry you I shall do something desperate! I would almost prefer staying here alone. Oh, Max, would you, for once, take me straight home? And behave? You used to be nice when we were children."

"I won't propose. In the car, I promise. But I will not take you straight home—it's too early—you and the moon are too divinely fair. I don't want to behave especially, but since I must I will. I will vary the program by asking you not 'Will you have me?' but 'Why is it that you won't have me? Come?'"

Finally she reached him her hand, but without excuse he suddenly took her in his arms and lifted her to his car. For a few minutes they sped along with the June breezes freshening on their faces. At length he spoke frankly, quietly:

"Sylvia, let's talk it over. I may have annoyed you—I may have made a fool of myself imploring you to be mine times innumerable, like a comic opera hero with the same old song. I don't know how to say it many ways. It all comes to the same thing—marriage or not. But I love you."

It pleased him to be whimsical, and Sylvia laughed. It was a change from the dead serious, anyway. He was never modest about his real worth. He continued:

"I am lovable, too, with an affectionate disposition. What is the matter, Sylvia? Please tell me. I will not ask you again—in the car—I promised—and never again at all once I see you do not love me. You have never flatly denied that, you know."

He turned his face away that she might speak freely if she would. Not that she had ever been embarrassed with him; he wished she had. At last she spoke:

"You bring this on yourself. I don't feel polite. You always make me so irritable and unlovely. I want to fly when I see you coming. I came out with the Burroughses to be rid of you and to save them from each other's company. I can't tell you just why it is, but the sight of you makes me contrary, and I cannot say what you want me to."

Speeding a little more, he turned to her coolly.

"You are never unlovely, Sylvia. Just how do I irritate you?"

They glided on through the soft dusk between the dark, sweet breathing woods and lighter meadow lands. On and on they came, nearer the city, whose myriad lights seemed to flash toward them from the dim hills.

"And you make me think when I don't want to. It's like pushing something away that you do not want to come too close. I simply don't seem to want to be married. I"— She stopped short.

"Is that it? Of course you have to decide that. What is it you do want in your life, Sylvia? To grow old alone? Your aunt won't always live. Do you want to earn your own living? Do you know of anything that would be a satisfactory substitute for married love? Do you want to study some art or a profession—medicine, for instance? Do you want to be an old maid and remember that you had a lover who, man and boy, would do anything—die for you, live for you and with you and give you what happiness he could coax from the scheme of things? Don't I interest you? Must I lose my money or must I take sick and almost die or save somebody in some romantic stunt to make myself interesting? I want to know where I am, what I can do. Are you tired of seeing me about? I might go away a few years. Shall I?" She laughed at his ridiculous, half practical, half sentimental vein so characteristic of him.

"Perhaps I am just too used to you, Max. You used simply to say you were going to marry me. The last year you have teased me by asking me till you make me cross. I don't know just how I do feel. I can't seem to get any perspective on you—or on marriage at all. You seem to stand between me and understanding. I am not a coward, but think of the responsibility! See the Burroughes—always on the ragged edge of a quarrel, undivorced simply because the only thing they agree on is hating a scandal! If Kitty had said no they might both have been happy. It's a big thing—being responsible for a man's happiness, especially if one might get to care very much, and I have nobody of my own, really."

His pulses sang at her words, but he forbade himself to reach for the hand which lay on her lap ungloved.

"Really, Max, the uncertainty and being bothered and all have put me on the verge of—anything, lately. I even thought how soon that little pistol would decide things for me! If this goes on I shall certainly study medicine, or jump from a moving train, or let myself be carried off by Dick Benton!"

She certainly needed some one to look after her, he reflected. He remembered that the mother she never knew had died of a broken heart. This might make her a little bitter and afraid. She seemed to have finished speaking. He had determined what to do. He spoke in a most matter of fact way, dismissing sentiment.

"I want something I left at the bank," he said. "I have dad's key. Would you mind if I stopped there a minute and at the Leader office? I forgot a notice that must be in the morning issue."

They were entering the city. She acquiesced, her head a little dizzy, her heart sinking at his silence. Had she made him think she could never—care? Would he never ask her again? What she thought she was losing because suddenly precious.

When they were on their way home another fear stole over her. Had she unconsciously shown her heart? She wished for the mother she had never known—the lovely, sad mother they had told her of. They were entering the driveway.

He helped her out and walked to the door with her. With her hand on the latch, she looked at him timidly, wistfully, a new look for Sylvia.

"Good night," she just breathed. "They are all out yet."

"Just a moment, Sylvia," and he drew her by the hand from the porch, across the lawn, to the old elm where they had played as children.

"Sylvia"—he let go her hand and faced her—"you fear the responsibility? I do not; I will answer for your happiness, which is my own. Can't you believe me? I got mother's old ring from the bank. Now, for the last time, in spite of what you have said, I ask you to marry me. Will you, Sylvia?"

He stooped to catch her low answer, but the sound of voices and steps came from the porch.

"They are coming home," she whispered. He took her by the shoulders. "Answer me, Sylvia!" Tears stood on her cheeks as she laughed a little, pushing him from her as she said:

"Yes, yes, yes!" He felt his arm about her, his kiss on her lips, his ring on her finger. And she was content.

When at last he was leaving her she whispered demurely:

"I said I would do something desperate—and I have—you are accepted! I deserve anything for being so rash! When shall you tell auntie?"

"Tell auntie to find the announcement in the morning paper."

Sylvia gasped. But what was the use of scolding about what was done?

An Ancient Industry.

It would be difficult to say where exactly and at what date the manufacture of cotton fabrics began. In comparatively modern times, says Country Life, it has become an industry of importance in Europe, but it has flourished in the east from a period too remote to admit of calculation. The Egyptians certainly used both cotton and linen materials, for fragments of such stuffs have been preserved among the other relics of their ancient civilization, and there is much reason to believe that the elaborate draperies of the Assyrians were cotton or muslins finely woven and of delicate texture. In China, too, and India the same kinds of material have been the common wear of the people from time immemorial. In fact, everywhere throughout the east cotton fabrics were produced and used long before the primitive Europeans had begun to develop any of the graces of civilization or indeed had ceased to be anything but skin clad savages.

Most Awkward.

An old, steady going farmer was accustomed to ride to the market town upon a rather bad tempered horse.

One day his man Bob brought the animal, which was especially vicious that morning, to the door, the horse trying to bite and kick and giving a good deal of trouble.

The farmer mounted the horse with some difficulty and began to walk it out of the yard when Bob, who still entertained ill feeling against the animal, picked up a stone and flung it at him with all his force; but, alas, his aim was erratic, and the missile struck his master on the head.

Half dazed for a moment, the farmer turned slowly in his saddle, and, not suspecting the real cause of the blow, he measured with his eye the horse's hind hoofs and his own head and, settling himself in the saddle again, started off with the remark, "Well, he allus was an okard beggar."—London Scraps.

Tall and Short.

Reminders.

Mrs.—He said I reminded him of a Greek goddess, Mr.—Huh! Mrs.—What do I remind you of? Mr.—Of every flannel thing I overlook that you ask me to do.—Cleveland Leader.

A Convert.

An old Cambridge friend of mine who had a good deal of the wisdom of the serpent in him had a farmer in his parish in Norfolk whom he could not get to church. Whenever he pressed upon him his neglect or his bad example he was always met with the same excuse, "You be too young and do not know enough to teach such as I." At last he gave up the farmer in despair. But one day he happened to pass by the farm while his parishioner was engaged in killing a fine pig. My friend said: "What a pig! Why, he weighs thirty-four stone!" "What dost thou know of pigs?" replied the farmer. "I only wish he weighed as much." When they next met the farmer, to his surprise, told my friend that the pig had been found to weigh just thirty-four stone. He added, much to my friend's gratification, "And thou wilt see me at church next Sunday, parson."—London Globe.

A Problem In Mathematics.

The town of Sturgis, in Mississippi, is the only round square town in existence. By legal enactment the circle has been squared, and the mathematician may now proceed to calculate the area of a square circle. In the laws of Mississippi for the year 1886, on page 682, is found the following:

"An act to incorporate the town of Sturgis, in Oktibbeha county, Mississippi.

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the legislature of the state of Mississippi that the town of Sturgis, in the county of Oktibbeha, is hereby incorporated and that the corporate limits of said town shall be as follows: Beginning at the quarter stake in front of Caleb Hannah's residence and running 600 yards in every direction, making said corporate limits 1,200 yards square."

Thus the circle is squared by the solemn declaration of the law.—Youth's Companion.

Turks and Animals.

In the matter of kindness to animals it is said that the Turk cannot be surpassed. Thus at Stamboul the wandering dogs are treated with great gentleness, and when puppies come into the world they are lodged with their mother at the side of the street in improvised kennels made out of old boxes lined with straw and bits of carpet. And frequently when a young Turk happens to be flush of money he goes to the nearest baker's shop and buys a quantity of bread, which he distributes among the dogs of the quarter, who testify their gratitude by jumping up at him with muddy paws and sniffing muzzles.

ALL TIRED OUT.

Hundreds More in Palmer in the Same Plight.

Tired all the time;

Weary and worn out night and day;

Back aches; side aches.

All on account of the kidneys.

Must help them at their work.

The following statement tells you how:

Mrs. D. H. Barnes, living on Main street, Monson, Mass., says: "While living in Springfield some years ago I gave a statement recommending Doan's Kidney Pills and to-day I am pleased to confirm everything I then said. When this remedy first came to my notice I was a constant sufferer from backache. I was restless at night and arose in the morning feeling tired and unrefreshed. I was so much impressed with what I read regarding Doan's Kidney Pills that I procured a box and they gave me the best of results. I continued taking the remedy, the lameness in my back was relieved and I felt better in every way. My husband who was troubled in a similar manner began using Doan's Kidney Pills and like myself received a cure. I always keep this remedy on hand.

THORNDIKE.

Ball Game and Dance.

What will probably be the last ball game of the season will be played here to-morrow afternoon on the church grounds at 3 o'clock, between the Champions of the town league and the Thorndike Reserves. The latter will have for a battery Connor and O'Leary of Holyoke, while Wells and Mayforth will be in the points for the Champions. That a fast game will be the result goes without saying, for the Reserves have a strong aggregation and will try and defeat the Champions. In the evening a social dance will be held in Union Hall, at which time Mayforth and Wells will be presented with a purse which has been donated by their friends for the good work they have done for the Champions the past season. The proceeds of the ball game and dance will be given to the members of the Thorndike league team.

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter." — Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

Harold Alhro, a former member of the Wesley Methodist church Snnday school of Springfiel l, entertained his teacher, Charles Bowen, and classmates of that church Satnrday at his home in this village. The yonng people were entertained with fishing, hasketbali, hasehall and mnsic. Refreshments were served. The members of the class present were Raiph Breavley, Samnel Dearstyne, Henry Fitch, Ernest Converse and Earle Boynton.

A game of baseball was played Saturday between a picked nine of Bondsville players and a Belchertown team. Raiph Hanscom was captain of the home aggregation and E. E. Lupien manager. Good work was done by the battery, Windyka and Whitehead. Strnck ont hy Whndyka, 15; by Fairchild, 9. Donble plays, Whndyka, Hanscom and Holden, Shea, Hanscom and Holden. The game lasted ten innings and was interesting throughont. The Bondsville players showed good batting form.

The Ladies' Aid Society held their first meeting of the year with the president, Mrs E. G. Childs, Wednesday afternoon A good nnmber attended and everything bids fair for a successful year. The society has in its treasury $146 43 with which to begin the year. An entertainment committee consisting of Mrs. E. J. Loy chairman, Mrs. E. E Lupien, Mrs F. E. Albro and Mrs. Charles Banister was chosen. It was planned to have a snpper in October. It was also voted to work for a fair, and a work committee—Mrs. Charles Collis chairman, Mrs. Charles Shnmway, Mrs. George Moulton, Mrs E. G. Childs and Mrs. Henry C. Morgan on the committee.

Landsman and Sailor.

To the landsman the sea must always possess dangers that to the sailor appear only as casual phenomena upon which to exercise his skill. The prayer book has a special petition for the safety of those who go down to the sea in ships, and every one who ventures to leave the shore goes forth with a consciousness of awe at his own daring. Yet in the intricate complexity of modern civilization safety on land and safety at sea have walked by no means with equal step. Every morning brings us some story of death or accident on land, while the great passenger ships come and go in monotonous regularity, bringing no reports more stirring than those of high seas that have kept them from making new records. With the present madness for speed and its attendant recklessness our streets demand constant alertness if one would cross them with safety. Speed at sea has come through larger and more stontly constructed ships. So the familiar old story of the sailorman at sea in a storm who, serene in his consciousness of ample sea room, piously ejaculated, "God help the poor folks ashore tonight!" is not wholly fantastic.—L. Frank Tooker in Century.

Reason Enough.

Critic (as the composer plays his last piece)—Very fine indeed. But what is that passage which makes the cold chills run down the back? Composer—That is where the wanderer has the hotel bill brought to him.—Fliegende Blatter.

Don't Mention It.

Sapphedd—You saved me from being killed by that auto. I owe my life to you. How shall I ever repay you? Stouten—Young man, don't let trifling debts like that worry you!—New York Life.

Sufficient Reason.

Chum—Why don't you assert your authority as head of the family and take matters in your own hands? Head of the House (mournfully)—My wife won't let me.—Baltimore American.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

OF UNCERTAIN MIND.

By MARY T. ELLIOTT.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Mme. Tourget and her daughter Cecile were eating supper in their pretty cottage when there came a knock at the front door.

"Cecile," said the mother, "go and see who is there."

Cecile opened the door and revealed the figure of a stranger standing with his back to the cottage. The girl waited for him to turn, but since he did not she coughed to attract his attention. This failing, she said, "Monsieur, what can I do for you?" Since he still paid no attention to her, thinking him to be deaf, she touched him on the shoulder. Then he turned and looked her in the face. He was of small stature, and his countenance was intellectual. He looked at the girl with a puzzled expression, but did not speak. The girl repeated her question.

"I don't know," said the stranger at last.

"Well, come in. It is beginning to rain."

He entered the house and sat down by the fireplace, peering into the fire as one in a dream.

Mme. Tourget looked at him impatiently and was about to say something irritable when Cecile threw her a deprecatory glance. Then the latter said to the stranger:

"Have you supped, monsieur?"

The man, as if awakened from a dream, glanced up at her, smiled faintly—the girl thought it a very pleasant smile—turned his big eyes upon the supper, arose and took a seat by the table. Cecile served him, and he ate with the same preoccupied or, rather, somnambulistic air he had maintained since his arrival. When he had finished Mme. Tourget questioned him.

"From where do you come?"

"I started from B. this morning."

"From B.? On foot?"

"Yes. No. I believe I had a horse."

"You believe you had a horse?"

A puzzled look passed over the stranger's face. Then he arose and, going to the fireside, fell into the same dreamy condition as before. Cecile, beckoning her mother to follow her, left the room.

"I wonder if he is ill or"— the girl began.

"He is either a mental imbecile or is shamming in order to secure food and lodging. He may stay till morning, but no longer. We are too poor to take care of mental wrecks."

"He is no impostor, mamma. I am sure of that. Nor was he born mentally weak. We must keep him till we can find out who he is and can turn him over to his friends."

During the evening the mother sat by a table knitting, the stranger on one side of the fire, Cecile on the other. Now and again he would turn his glance from the flames and look at Cecile, who, by the way, was very comely. At 9 o'clock Mme. Tourget asked him if he would like to go to bed. "Not yet," was his reply. "I'm thinking and haven't got through."

Cecile gave her mother a glance that she would look after the poor man, and Mme. Tourget went to bed. The stranger sat for an hour peering into the fire, occasionally stirring the coals with a poker. Then suddenly he seemed to return to a normal condition. Cecile noticed the change and expected an explanation. Turning to her, he said:

"You're a nice girl. Would you like to marry me?"

Up to this time Cecile had hoped that after all the stranger might be of a healthy mental condition. Now she gave that up. He must certainly be insane. She realized the necessity of getting him to bed quietly. To humor him she said:

"I will consider your proposition and give you an answer in the morning—that is, if you will go to bed."

She arose, the stranger followed her, and she conducted him to his room

The next morning Cecile, looking from her bedroom window, saw the stranger walking in the yard. His abstraction seemed to have left him. At least it was not so pronounced. At breakfast he was a new man, though his memory was evidently badly impaired. He remembered to have started from B. the morning before on horseback, but could not recall what had become of his horse. Cecile, with a palpitating heart, wondered if he would remember having proposed to her. Since his remarkable recovery she secretly hoped that he would. He manifested no disposition to proceed on his journey and during the morning sat by the fireplace with something of his previous abstraction, but now he spent a part of his time in making drawings in pencil on the backs of old letters he took from his pocket. Cecile spied upon them, but could make nothing out of them. They were neither figures nor landscapes. In the afternoon while he was thus engaged a horseman rode up to the house in a hurry and asked if they had seen anything of a man who was to have passed there the day before, describing the stranger. When taken to where he was sitting the new arrival seemed much relieved.

"We thought he must have met with foul play on the road," he said.

"Has he escaped from an asylum?" asked Mme. Tourget.

"An asylum! No. He is a great electrical genius. He has doubtless been solving a problem. When thus engaged he is lost to everything else."

Just before the two men departed the electrician said to Cecile, "Have you considered my proposition?"

"Yes."

"And your answer is?"

"Yes."

The Twenty Cent Revenge.

She was in a very bad temper as she boarded an Amsterdam avenue car. Her temper was not improved by the fact that as she drew a quarter of a dollar from her jeweled gold purse the coin slipped from her fingers and rolled on the floor of the car. She made no move to recover the money, but when the conductor came in to collect her fare she pointed with the tip of her handsome parasol to the coin.

"I dropped my fare," she said snappishly. "Pick it up."

The young conductor looked her in the eye for just a moment, and then, stooping, he picked the coin from between the slats on the floor covering. Leisurely he took four nickels from his pocket and put them where the quarter had been before. Maybe it was the effort of bending that made his face red. When he straightened up he rang up the fare, turned and sauntered back to the rear platform.—New York Press.

Badly Expressed.

Mabel—I don't believe you really meant it when you said you were anxious to hear me sing. Sam—Oh, I assure you I did! You see, I had never heard you sing before.—London Pick-Me-Up.

MISS LAVINIA'S LOVER

The Result of the Search For the Man Who Went Away.

By VIRGINIA BLAIR.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

"Well, of course," Miss Lavinia confided, "I am glad to have it, but it's unsettling."

Mrs. Briggs sniffed. "It wouldn't unsettle me if any one left me $10,000. I would know what to do with it."

Miss Lavinia leaned forward eagerly. "What would you do, Jane?" she demanded.

"Oh, well," Mrs. Briggs hesitated. "I'd get some new clothes right away and fix up the house, and entertain my friends, and take a trip and have an automobile"—

"I have thought of those things, but they don't seem to be just what I want, after all. Maybe I'll just put it out at interest."

"Now, look here, Lavinia Latimer," Mrs. Briggs said solemnly, "don't you do any such thing. You've got enough to live on, such as it is, and my advice is to take some of the money and have a good time. Goodness only knows you haven't had many good times."

"No, I haven't," Miss Lavinia admitted somewhat wistfully. "Well, I'll think it over, Jane."

And after Mrs. Briggs had gone Miss Lavinia picked up her big yellow cat and told him her innermost wish. "I'm going to use some of that money to find out where John Forbes is," she whispered, "but I wouldn't tell Jane."

But to look for the man who had left town ten years ago was not an easy matter. And Lavinia Latimer was not wise in methods. But she wanted to know the fate of her old lover, and so it happened that ten days after her talk with Jane Briggs, Miss Lavinia went to town.

"I'm going to buy clothes," was the reason she gave, but when she came to the big town it was not to the stores that she made her way, but to a dusty, musty little office in a squalid street.

"McDermott, private detective," said the sign.

Miss Lavinia was all pink and white and pretty as she stated her case. But Mr. McDermott set her at once at her ease. He was a brisk little man with curly white hair and red cheeks.

"So you want to find John Forbes," he said. "Is he a relative?"

"Oh, no!" And Miss Lavinia blushed.

"Owe you any money?" McDermott demanded.

"Oh, no, no!" Miss Latimer cried distressfully. "We were engaged fifteen years ago, and I couldn't marry him, because I had to stay with my old father and mother—and he—he went away—and I promised that when I was free I would let him know.

"Oh!" McDermott ejaculated, and after a pause, "Were you expecting to find him still single?"

"I—I'm not sure."

McDermott tugged at his mustache. "The chances are that he'll be married."

"Of course," Miss Lavinia agreed, "but I should like to be sure."

"Surely," said McDermott. "You just let me have the case, and I'll bring you news of John Forbes before you know it."

McDermott reported regularly once a week by letter to Miss Lavinia and as regularly received her answers.

Miss Lavinia wrote on pale violet paper that gave forth a perfume of fresh flowers in the stuffy little office. McDermott found himself laying those letters in a little drawer by themselves, and one day in early spring, when he had traveled out into the country on a case, he spied some violets by the wayside. He picked them and brought them home and laid them with the letters in the drawer.

McDermott had money of his own, so that Miss Lavinia's little fortune had no charms for him, but the thought of her delicate presence in his home often came to him with a sense of irresistible attraction.

"But if she finds John Forbes single she will marry him," he would say with a sigh, and the temptation to overlook clews was great.

In June he called on her and found her in her garden with a little low table in front of her on which was set forth a lemonade service. Miss Lavinia was in pale mauve with a hat wreathed with violets. "When you wrote you were coming," she said to McDermott, "I thought you would enjoy it better here in the garden—it's cooler."

"Well, if you knew what a nice change it was from that office in town," sighed the little man.

After that he came often, and gradually it began to be rumored in the town that Miss Lavinia was "keeping company" with a man from the city.

"Well, I must say that I like his looks," Mrs. Briggs told Miss Lavinia when she came over one morning after McDermott had called.

"He is just a business acquaintance," Miss Lavinia protested.

Mrs. Briggs sniffed. "I guess you wouldn't be dressing up in those pretty clothes and waving your hair just for a business man."

Miss Lavinia blushed and sighed. "You don't know how many things I have to look after since I got my money."

To tell the truth, the search for John Forbes began to weigh on her. She realized that with the coming of John Forbes would end the visits of John McDermott.

McDermott continued doggedly with his search. He didn't want to find John Forbes, or if he did find him he hoped that he would be married. But if Lavinia Latimer wanted anything, she should have it.

And as all things must have an end, the time came when John Forbes was located in a small western town.

"It's your John Forbes, all right," McDermott wrote to Miss Lavinia. "He was born in your town and everything tallies. But I don't know whether he is married. I'll find out. I leave on Monday for the west."

"Please," Miss Lavinia wrote back, "don't look him up. Come out and see me before you go—to supper Sunday night, if you will.

It was the first time that she had invited him to a meal, and her preparations were beyond the ordinary. She had in her days of prosperity hired a competent maid, and they brought out the silver and glass, and when McDermott sat down in the dim, fragrant dining room the feast that was set before him on the old mahogany was of broiled chicken and salad and delicate biscuits and strawberries and cream and cottage cheese and all the wonderful gastronomic triumphs of Maryland cooks.

And when he had finished he sat with Miss Lavinia on the front porch.

"I want to ask you a somewhat delicate question," he said, out of the silence of the dusk. "If I find John Forbes is single, what am I to do about it?"

"I don't know," Miss Lavinia faltered.

McDermott hitched his chair forward slightly.

"You love him very much?" he asked suddenly.

"I'm not sure," Miss Lavinia murmured in the darkness.

"Well, there's one thing I would like to say right here," the little man stated. "I wish to withdraw from the case, Miss Lavinia."

"Oh," she gasped, "but I can't do without you!"

"Can't you?" he cried radiantly. "Do you mean that you could love me? I've wanted to tell you how much I loved you for a long time—only there was John Forbes"

"Oh, I didn't dream"— Miss Lavinia fluttered.

"It's more than human nature can stand," McDermott went on, "to expect a man who loves you to go and bring back another man to marry you."

"Yes," she agreed timidly, "it is. I think if you wish it we will drop the case of John Forbes, Mr. McDermott."

But McDermott didn't drop the case. He went west and looked up the old lover and found him neither single nor married nor dead. But he was divorced and of doubtful reputation.

"He isn't worth another thought," McDermott said hotly when he came back. "And I'm not saying that because I'm prejudiced, either."

"Well, it relieves my mind to know," the lady confessed, "and, anyhow, if I hadn't tried to find him I wouldn't have met you—and"—

"You have promised to marry me in October," said her lover triumphantly, "so who cares for John Forbes or any other man—when you are going to be Mrs. McDermott?"

Remarkable Power.

A dear old lady was taken one day to a musical service in a Boston church. She had heard much about the fine voice of the soprano and was prepared for a treat.

She sat in rapt enjoyment until the service was over and then turned a radiant face toward her escort, who was a young grandson.

"Dear boy," she said, "you've given me a great treat. Her voice is perfectly beautiful. It made cold chills run all up and down my spine."

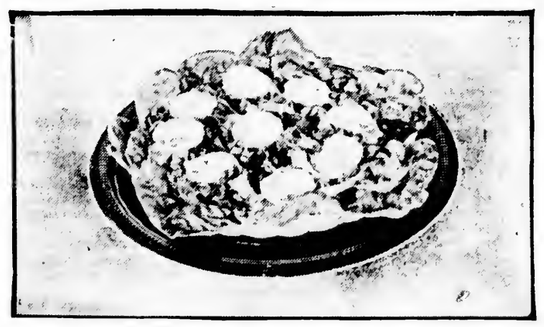
"It's too bad, grandmamma," said the boy, "but she didn't sing today, though she was there. The gentleman next me says she's been suffering from a bad cold, and one of the chorus had to sing the solos for her."

"What, dear?" said the old lady, looking momentarily distressed. Then her face cleared, and she patted his arm reassuringly.

"Never you mind," she said. "We can come again some time. But, after all, if she can make me feel that way without singing I don't know that it would be wise for me to hear her. Now, would it?"—Youth's Companion.

Sock and Buskin.

In the early ages theatrical performers disguised their faces with wine lees or a rude pigment. Aeschylus, the famous tragic poet, introduced masks, which were of various kinds, expressing every age, country, condition and complexion. All were constructed with the greatest nicety and precision. The dresses were also adapted to the characters assumed by the actors. What was known as the buskin was a hunting boot. Those worn by tragedians had soles three inches thick, composed of layers of cork, and were laced up in front as high as the calf. Sandals were also worn, and many of these had thick cork soles. The colors of the foot coverings were various, red being the favorite hue for warriors and purple for other characters. Slaves wore a low shoe bearing the name of sock, which was also the ordinary footwear of comedians. From this circumstance arose the well known phrase of "sock and buskin," so generally associated with the drama.



She Gave Herself Away.

Judge Davis was one day in his private office when he was president of the senate and acting vice president. A woman came into the room to see him. He turned and said, "Well, madam, what can I do for you?" She was neatly dressed in black, with an air of extreme poverty. She told a wretched tale of sorrow and suffering, winding up with the climax that she and her little family were actually starving and had not tasted food for two days. The judge seemed deeply moved. He excused himself for not attending to the case for the moment, as the senate was nearly ready to open. He looked at his watch with an air of vexation, as if it were not going, and said, "Can any one tell me what time it is?" His visitor pulled out a gold watch and told him the time. The judge said, "Can it be true that your children have been without food for two days when you have a gold watch in the house?" The woman saw the point of the judge's question and called out, "You are a hateful old thing!" and flounced out of the room She was a professional deadbeat.

CREAM CHEESE SALAD.

No more attractive salad is served than one made from a roll of cream cheese and a head of lettuce. If you buy the cheese break it up with a fork and beat in a little sweet cream; form into a roll again and cut into tiny slices. Prepare the lettuce by washing, draining and hanging in the ice chest until needed. Use the crisp cup leaves for a border to the salad plate. Roll the remaining leaves and shave with a sharp knife; shake up the shreds and pile on a plate. Arrange the cheese on the lettuce and sprinkle with French dressing. For a change make the cheese into little balls or marbles or a little very finely chopped parsley may be mixed with the cheese.

A bag for holding and draining the lettuce is made from a piece of white mosquito netting or a netted bag can be tied by those who are handy with the netting needle. Such bags were used for boiling vegetables by old-time cooks.

A vegetable salad is as valuable for rousing an appetite as it is for the nutriment contained, and some sort should appear once a day on the table. There is generally something on hand for the foundation of a salad.

The Antalgica

Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Coughs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do you good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1 00 per bottle by The Quinsby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

MEN'S LEAGUES MEET.

Pleasant Gathering in Memorial Hall Wednesday.

MEMBERS OF FIVE LEAGUES PRESENT

Over 100 at Supper. Fine Addresses Listened to. Need of Something For Boys Urged.

The first meeting of the season of the Men's League of Palmer was held in Memorial Hall Wednesday evening. It was an open meeting with invitations extended to the leagues in Three Rivers, Monson, Brimfield and Warren, from all of which generous delegations were present. At 6.30 the party, numbering about 125 sat down to a tasteful supper of escalloped oysters and other good things provided by Caterer Royce.

After due attention had been given the eatables President Hobson of Palmer called the assemblage to order, and after singing by the company announced that the meeting was for the purpose of getting together as men to enjoy the fellowship existing between manly men, and to consider what a body of men as men and citizens can do to benefit a town. All present would have an opportunity and were invited to speak on the subject. He then introduced Lee T. Gray, superintendent of schools of Palmer.

Mr. Gray began with a history of men's leagues, stating that they had existed from 470 B. C. down to the present time, and that some of the early ones were the most remarkable ever known. The league under whose auspices the meeting was held was formed to promote the moral, social and civic interests of the town. The excuse for its existence could be found in the one word "Coöperation." As an individual a man can do little, but by combining men may do much along any line. The boy problem he considered the most serious—boys between the ages of 14 and 18. This is the age of adolescence and the most critical in a boy's life. He is made or unmade in that time. What a boy is at 18 he is as a man. What makes the boy problem? Association. The tendency is to associate together, and the most attractive places draw the boys and men, whether the places be good or bad. If the boy is to be drawn away from attractive places of bad influence something more attractive must be provided. A boys' club is needed, where boys may play pool, read, play games and do various things which boys like to do. Public playgrounds are unequalled in their physical, moral and social effect. It is said that "Man is the noblest work of God," and if the Palmer—or any other league can make even one good man it is something to be proud of—and the good men must be made ont of the boys.

Rev. C H. Eaton of Brimfield saw possibilities for civic betterment in every town where a league existed. It can do much for the bringing up of the children, for what the fathers do the children copy, and if the fathers live right the children will live right, and good boys make good men. Men should live so that the boys will look up to them for an example.

D. L. Bodfish of Palmer spoke of the character and high quality of the town's representatives in the General Court during a long period just closed, the record for public service within the confines of the town; also of the service of her citizen soldiers as shown by the records of 150 years. It is our duty to send forth a type of manhood which shall not merely maintain the past record but which shall set a still higher standard. If the town is to advance we must maintain a high standard along every branch of public service.

Rev G. A Andrews of Monson suggested that the best thing a league can do is to cultivate a manly and friendly feeling among all the men of the town. There are many matters on which all cannot agree, but all can agree that manly men are everywhere to be desired.

J. C. Sullivan of Palmer, general manager of the Flynt Building and Construction Company, referred to the boy problem as outlined by Mr. Gray. Mr. Sullivan is much interested in the question of manual training in the public schools, and suggested that a league might talk of, work for and vote for an educational system which will provide for the boys and girls of the high schools who do not plan to enter college, an elementary knowledge at least of the trade or profession they propose to follow after leaving school, as many of them are obliged to do before graduation.

Rev. F. W. Gibbs of Palmer was also interested in the boy problem. A club for boys is a good thing in a community, but the good it will accomplish is measured by the interest the parents take in it. A men's league means a union of men who believe that good things in a community are worth while and that will come in time. All such can be made to come if we will work for them, especially by doing something for the boys.

Other speakers were President Hall of the league in West Warren, W. S. Trickett of Three Rivers, George Ezekiel of Palmer, W. M. Tucker of Monson, Capt. H. E W. Clark of Thorndike and Rev. F. S. Brewer of Palmer.

There was singing at various times, led by Theodore Norman, with H. M. Howe at the piano. After adjournment the larger number present lingered for a social chat, and it was a late hour when the party broke up, all voting the occasion an unqualified success.

Annual Inspection Ware Fire Department.

The annual parade and inspection of the Ware fire department was held Saturday afternoon, attracting the usual number from out of town. On account of the absence of the veteran chief of the department, Thomas C. Gleason, who was absent on his honeymoon, First Assistant Engineer Eugene McCarthy had charge of affairs in his absence. One of the features of the parade was the participation in the march of hose company No. 2 of Gardner, eight men, including the officers, Capt A. A. Walker and Lieut. J. D. Hurley. It is the custom of the Gardner department to send a hose company to some inspection every year. The march was led by the Second Regiment band of Springfield, guided by four members of the police force. The oldest fireman, Michael Dillon, rode, as did the three members of the prudential committee, James Anderson, D. E. Clifford and Aime S. Pierre, and the treasurer, John G. Schoonmaker. The hose carts, engine and hook and ladder made a good appearance. The Lafayette drum corps, 14 pieces, escorted the auxiliary company of hosemen from the Otis company. The usual line of march was followed. The parade was followed by the tests on Main street, Dr. A. A. Auger of West Brookfield and F. J. Browing acting as timers. In the evening the annual ball was held in the town hall, Donohue's orchestra of Brookfield furnishing music.

HER 80th BIRTHDAY.

Wales Woman Holds Celebration With Four Generations Present.

Surrounded by every member of her family, including grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, making four generations present, Mrs Sarah A. Thompson of Wales celebrated her 80th birthday Monday at the home that she has occupied for 40 years or more.

Mrs. Thompson was born in Wales, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dimmick, they being one of the first families to settle in the town. When about 20 years of age she married Charles M Thompson, who was always prominent in business and town affairs Mr. Thompson has been dead about eight years. While Mrs. Thompson is not young in years she is young in appearance and enjoys good health. She reads her daily paper and sews without the aid of glasses, which is remarkable.

Mrs. Thompson has given birth to four children, two sons and two daughters, W. J. Thompson, provision dealer in Springfield, C. G. Thompson, who resides in the home town, Mrs Edward A. Clark of Wales and Mrs Hattie A. Parker, formerly of Springfield, now residing with her mother. To these four have been born 13 children, nine of whom are living, with two great-grandchildren, Master Brentney Chandler, and Master Kenneth Parker.

At 5 o'clock the various members of the family gathered in the spacious dining room, which had previously been decorated with beautiful fall flowers, dahlias and asters predominating, where an elaborate dinner was served, after which an informal reception was held. Mrs. Thompson was the recipient of many remembrances, among which were many beautiful flowers In the early part of the evening the guests departed for home, wishing Mrs. Thompson many happy returns of the day.

S. S. CONVENTION.

Three Rivers District Meeting Held in Brimfield Wednesday.

The annual convention of the Three Rivers district, Massachusetts Sunday School Association, was held Wednesday in the Congregational church in Brimfield, District President D. L. Bodfish of Palmer presiding.

Rev. Samuel Eaton, pastor of the Brimfield church, led the devotional service at the morning session. The central thought of the morning was "The teacher's opportunity." The primary hour was in charge of Mrs. S. H. Reed. Miss Jessie Gilbert spoke of the work among the boys and methods used in harmonizing things of centuries ago with present-day conditions. "Get the boys to do something for others," said the speaker. Mrs. Harold Chesson treated of methods of promotion from the primary grade. Mrs. Lucy A. Sherman spoke of the methods of conducting concerts and children's parties, also of visiting the children in their homes. Mrs. S H. Reed spoke of the value of storytelling in Sunday-school work and the responsibility as well as the opportunity of the teacher. Rev. Arthur Chase spoke on "Teaching the word," while the subject considered by Rev. E D. Lupien was "The word applied," taken from an evangelistic point of view. Dinner was served at 12 30 by the women of the church.

The afternoon session opened with a devotional service led by Rev. M. H. Fishburn. This was followed by a business meeting, and these officers were elected: President, Rev. W. C. Townsend of Ware; vice president, D. L. Bodfish of Palmer; secretary-treasurer, Ella M. Gibson of Brookfield; normal secretary, Grace W. Towne of Belchertown; primary secretary, Mrs. S. H. Reed of Brookfield; auditor, Frank S. Keith of Palmer; executive committee, Rev. Charles H. Smith of Barre, Rev. W. T. Hale of Belchertown, Rev. Samuel Eaton of Brimfield, Judge H. E Cottle of Brookfield, William Kennedy of Enfield, Rev. W. P. Lauders of Gilbertville, F. E. Alden of Greenwich, Rev. Harlan Page of Hardwick, Charles S. Lane of New Braintree, Rev. Arthur T. Parson of North Brookfield, Mrs. A. M. Wing of Palmer, A. W. Warriner of Three Rivers, J. F. Davis of Thorndike, Herbert Shaw of Wales, Rev. G. B. Hatch of Ware, A. S. Tucker of Warren, C. E. Gardner of West Warren; ex-office, F. A. Rich of Barre, Rev. S. B Cooper of North Brookfield, D. L Bodfish of Palmer, Rev. Arthur Chase of Ware.

The central thought of the afternoon was "The advanced grade; our aim." "The field" was the topic discussed by Rev. Samuel Eaton. He said in part: How shall the teacher prepare his mind and the minds of his pupils to receive the truth? By desiring to know the truth and coming in contact with Lord Jesus and asking him to reveal his truth Rev. C. W. Williams in discussing his subject, "Cultivation," alluded to the reclaiming of arid land by cultivation, and said the same method must be used in Sunday school work. God's word was the seed which would bear fruit, but not without cultivation. Cultivate again and again. A large part of what we say is forgotten. Do not leave the seed when started, but care for it all the way through. Rev. G. B. Hatch was the closing speaker, his subject being "Our ideals." He said in part: "Years ago there was a Sunday school worker in Asia Minor named Paul. The idea was to present every man perfect before God. The ideals of Peter and John were the same; what should be our ideals? If we were as great as they and understood God and man as well, would our ideals be any different? No human being comes into spiritual manhood full grown; he develops as the oak from the acorn. Our ideal should be to develop the spiritual germ into the full-grown man of God."

Suffield in Suffield, Ct., October 12 and 13.

PALMER FAIR NEXT WEEK.

Everything Will Be Ready For The Big Event.

VARIOUS IMPROVEMENTS ON GROUNDS

Unusually Large List of Special Attractions. Outlook Good For All Classes of Exhibits.

Friday and Saturday of next week will be busy times in Palmer, for on those days the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society will hold its fifty-seventh annual exhibition, known of late years as the Palmer Fair.

Indications point to the most successful exhibition within the history of the society; that is saying much, in view of the record attained last year, but that is what the officials have aimed at. A big program along all lines has been arranged, and there will be no lack of interesting features. There will of course be the usual large display of cattle Friday, for which the Palmer Fair is justly noted. The poultry exhibit also will be of ample proportions. Horses will be shown Saturday, and some fine colts are already entered. The hall show—including fruit, vegetables, fine arts, fancy work, domestic manufactures, bread, cake, etc, is growing larger and larger every year.

Much interest is being manifested in the drawing matches for oxen, on the drag, Friday afternoon; new classes have been made this year, and the list of entries is expected to be larger than ever before. The turn of the horses will come Saturday, and here to there is likelihood of a lively contest, especially in the open-to-all class No one feature of the fair last year attracted more attention than did this. A special pace has been prepared for these contests this year, where ample room is afforded and where the public can be kept back but at the same time given ample opportunity to see.

School children below the high school grade will be admitted free this year, as usual, and so great a hold has the fair obtained among the youngsters that nearly all the schools within reaching distance of the fair are to be closed that day. The usual program of sports has been arranged for boys and girls, and will take place at 11 o'clock.

Much has been provided for the amusement of visitors. The Southbridge band will give concerts both forenoon and afternoon of each day, and Ben Chadwick, the famous singer of Westfield, who sings "because he likes to sing," will be heard at intervals through both days. A vaudeville program of seven acts has been secured, all of the highest class. The Stubblefield Trio will give high trapeze performances; the Norton Sisters have a sensational teeth whirling act in high air; LaVardo does seemingly impossible feats of balancing on a trapeze; Morello Brothers are clever head-to-head and hand-to-hand equilibrists, and Clayton Brothers have a comedy knockabout act which keeps the spectators in roars of laughter; Yonna is a Japanese juggler of high ability; Bon Morse, the best comedy and trick bicyclist in the world, who was seen at Forest Lake last year, completes the list. Performances will be given both forenoon and afternoon. An extra and unusual, as well as high-priced attraction, will be Quintard's Hippodrome Combination. This comprises a variety of acts by high school horses, high jumpers, Roman standing races, running races for pairs hitched to bike sulkies, etc. The aggregation is the best of its kind in existence It comes high, but the fair managers believe that patrons will be pleased with the entertainment. There will be other specialties and things of interest to all.

The usual attention is paid to high school athletics, and on Friday will be run the high school relay race. On this day also comes the relay race for ninth grade scholars—800 yards Saturday there will be the high school athletic meet, with ten events. This will start at 10 in the morning, in order to get the track clear for the racing in the afternoon.

The racing program has been arranged with a special view to attracting a large number of horses. There were more last year than ever before, and the prospect for even a larger number this year is very bright. Three classes are scheduled for each day.

Numerous improvements have been made on the grounds for the comfort and convenience of patrons. The grand stand has been divided into reserved seats, and these are now on sale for either day. The bleachers have been lowered so as not to obstruct the view from the grand stand, and been reseated. A large new toilet room for women has been erected, and one for men. A large amount of new picket fence and railing has been built along the track, and the cattle ties have been removed from the center of the grounds to the west end, giving more space within the enclosure for teams, autos and people

Arrangements are being made to care for and accommodate a large crowd. The railroads have given reduced rates to the fair, and on the Springfield line of the electrics cars will run on 10-minute time all day between Court Square and Palmer; half hour time will be run on the Worcester line. All that is required now is good weather.

"The Old Homestead" Coming to Springfield.

Denman Thompson's charming play, "The Old Homestead," will be seen at Court Square theatre in Springfield next Tuesday and Wednesday, with Wednesday matinee. There are many reasons why "The Old Homestead" has been so successful for twenty-three years. One of the most important of them is that the characters are drawn from real life. The audience seems to appreciate the fact that Cy Prime, Aunt Matilda, Seth Perkins, Rickety Ann, Eb Ganzey and dear Uncle Josh are real, live people and not fictions of the author's imagination. Denman Thompson lived among these people for many years before he gave Uncle Josh to the stage. He became intimate with their daily life, and he made copious notes of the humorous and pathetic incidents with which New England country life is crowded. And so the thing seemed to grow in his mind as the years went by, until he had prepared a series of pictures (living pictures, in the truest sense of the word,) which became in time the finished drama, and which he aptly called "The Old Homestead," thereby giving to the stage one of the few really successful plays of this generation. When the history of the American drama comes to be written, no play will occupy a more conspicuous page in its annals than this unique creation of the brain of Denman Thompson.

BIG RACE MEETING.

Palmer to Have Three Days of Racing Week After Palmer Fair.

A number of men in this locality who are interested in horse racing have formed an organization known as the Quaboag Racing Association and have sent out entry blanks announcing a three-days' race meeting in Palmer on the 12th, 13th and 14th, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of the week after the Palmer Fair. The classes are:

Tuesday.

	Purse $200
2.27 trot,
2.19 pace,	200
2.13 trot and pace,	200

Wednesday.

2.22 pace,	200
2.19 trot,	200
Free for all, trot or pace,	200

Thursday.

2.23 trot,	200
2.15 trot,	200
2.16 pace	200

W. F. Piper, who does the starting for Palmer, will be the starter, with Dan O'Neil assistant starter. The entries close October 6, but records made October 1 are not a bar. It is thought that, with Palmer the last fair of the season in this section, the next week's meet will attract a large list of entries to the Palmer Fair races, as by coming here the horses could be given two weeks' racing with no shipping between. E D Tufts of Palmer is secretary and treasurer of the association.

BELCHERTOWN MAN HELD.

Money and Watch Taken From Albert Kolodziej by Force.

Michael Shea of Belchertown was tried in the district court in Northampton Wednesday on a charge of robbery preferred by Albert Kolodziej, also of Belchertown, he having lost $4 in money and a watch. He was held in the sum of $600 for the grand jury. Kolodziej testified that he went to the house of Shea's father to buy some potatoes; while he was sitting in the kitchen young Shea locked the door, seized him by the throat and took from him the watch and money. He identified a tobacco bag, found in the corridor of the courthouse after Shea had been brought in, as the bag in which he had carried his money.

"A Woman's Way," a New Play.

A new play by a new author named Thompson Buchanan, called "A Woman's Way," to be seen in Springfield next Thursday at the Court Square theatre, is Grace George's starring vehicle this season. The locale is New York city and the theme marriage and its after troubles; time, the present. It is remarkably well written and teems with bright lines and clever situations. It provides an excellent part for Grace George and she scores a most decided personal success. She has many opportunities in it to display her splendid talent as a comedienne, and in the one or two touches of seriousness that she is given, she scores heavily. The star is ably assisted.

WILBRAHAM.

Miss Mabel Welch and Miss Mary E. Howard have gone to Elmsford, N. Y.

Mrs. H. W. Burbank has been entertaining her sister, Miss Granger, from Boston.

Lester S. Kingsley of Westfield spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Kingsley.

Mrs. Julia Fedford Tomkinson of Passaisc, N. J., has been the guest of Miss L. M. Hodgkins.

The Woman's Club held the first meeting of the year at the home of Mrs. C. W. Chapin Wednesday afternoon. The subject for the year is Germany.

Miss Mary Welch was slightly injured Sunday evening while alighting from an electric car. She attempted to get off before the car had come to a standstill at the underpass and was thrown heavily to the ground. It was thought at first that she was seriously hurt, but, upon an examination, it was found she was suffering from many bruises and was shaken up.

Joseph Nogersky, employed by the Collins Manufacturing company, had his foot badly crushed at the mill Monday afternoon. He was riding up on the elevator, and his foot projected slightly over the edge, and came in contact with the floor. He was taken to the office of Dr. A. L Damon, who found a number of bones broken in the foot and he was ordered removed to the hospital.

WARREN.

Chapman—Bond.

The marriage of Miss Janette E. Chapman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Chapman of West Warren, and Arthur Bond, son of Mrs. Ida Bond of Thorndike, took place Wednesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Rev J P. Hess, pastor of the M. E. church, officiating. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Agnes M. Chapman, and the best man was Arthur Caldwell. A reception was held after the ceremony.

Mrs George A. Shumway is the guest of Mr. and Mrs F. J. DeLuce at Long Island.

John Burroughs of Boston spent Sunday as the guest of Miss Edna M. Buck of Southbridge street.

Miss Mary S. Hitchcock has returned from a month's visit with Mrs. George L. Weed at Sandwich, N H.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobart K. Whitaker and son, Ellis Hobart, have returned to their home in Salem after a week's visit at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Conins of Crescent street.

The first meeting of the Men's League of the Congregational church for the fall will be held Monday evening, when Congressman F. H. Gillett will speak upon "Some men I have known in Congress."

Everett Sampson, the nine-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Sampson, was taken to the hospital in Worcester last evening by Dr. A. A. Phelps on account of a sudden attack of appendicitis which required an operation.

PALMER NEWS.

FOR A BOYS' CLUB.

Meeting to Be Held Next Week to Consider Organization of One.

The welfare of boys and young men is something which many are interested in, and realizing this there has been considerable talk as to what might be done for the young men of Palmer. The opportunity to do something has been recognized, and a meeting of boys over twelve years of age is to be held in the chapel of St. Paul's church next Monday evening at 7.30. It is proposed at this meeting to discuss the idea of a Boys' Club or a Young Men's Union, and it is hoped that many will be ready to show interest in a work of this kind. Rev. F. W. Gibbs has arranged for this meeting, and for others to follow should the idea prove to be in any way successful. The gathering Monday evening will be for the purpose of getting in line and determining just what can be done, and all boys and young men over 12 years of age are cordially invited. After a general talk on starting such an organization and a social half hour Dr. J. B. Kennedy will give a talk on the subject, "Training the mind in its relation to health." Other meetings have been planned for during the month of October, and an interesting program has been arranged. It is hoped that enough will show interest in this to make such an organization the success it ought to be and that it will receive the endorsement and cooperation of parents.

PAVING WORK BEGUN.

Rails Arrive and Are Partly Laid. Improvements Being Made.

The long-expected rails for the new street railway track through Main street, for which the brick paving has been held up, arrived Tuesday, and a gang of men was put at work Wednesday getting them in place. They are of the T pattern, seven inches deep, and will afford a solid roadbed when finished. The switch opposite the foot of Central street has been moved east to a point opposite the old post office, to get it out of the paving and improve conditions in the business section of the street which has stores on both sides. Iron poles for the trolley wire supports are being set. A large elm tree in front of the Cross block, which was nearly dead, has been cut down, and a quantity of granite curbing set between the Cross and Converse blocks. A large quantity of brick for the paving has been piled on the sidewalks on the north side of the street, and as soon as the rails are in position the work of getting them in place will be pushed as rapidly as possible.

Aged Man Wants to Arrange Race.

Nelson Fisher, the oldest man in town, would like to arrange for a foot race on the track at the Palmer Fair next week with any man who comes anywhere near his number of years. Mr. Fisher was 95 years old last March, but no one would suspect that he had seen that number of summers and winters, for he is more sprightly than many men of a score less years. He is about the streets every day, summer or winter, and finds plenty of strength for a number of tasks which he has in charge. Mr. Fisher is in earnest about the foot race.

Historical Society to Meet.

The first meeting of the season of the Palmer Historical Society will be held in the reference room of the public library next Tuesday evening at 7.30 sharp. The Central Massachusetts Electric Company have been requested by the selectmen to remove their electric light poles from that part of Main street between Thorndike and Central streets. This will require the relocating of the poles in the rear of the blocks on private land, in order to make the proper connections.

Prof. Beanlein of Holyoke gave exhibitions of hypnotism in the opera house last Friday and Saturday evenings to good audiences. The feats which he accomplished were in the nature of a surprise to many of the attendants, who, previous to the exhibition, had believed them impossible. Included in the evening's program were several good vaudeville numbers.

Christopher J. Rich, yard foreman on the Central Vermont railroad, received slight injuries last Friday while engaged in uncoupling cars. Rich was on the back of the locomotive, having cut off the car, when he fell face downward on the track, bruising his face severely. He was attended by Dr. J. P. Schneider.

Deputy Fish and Game Warden J. F. Luman was notified last Friday that a deer had been killed in North Wilbraham. He found the animal on land of Mrs. Dennis Powers, it being a doe about two years old. The animal had probably been shot by some farmer and ran to the place where it was found, as death was caused by internal hemorrhage. Mr. Luman ordered the carcass buried.

A motorcyclist riding from Palmer to West Warren met with a serious accident Saturday. He was riding at a speed of about 15 miles an hour, when the fork broke, allowing the front wheel to drop off, throwing the rider to the ground and rendering him unconscious. Ripe raspberries of fine quality were picked here one day recently.

BRIMFIELD.

Fortieth Wedding Anniversary.

The fortieth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Milo Booth of Dunhamtown was observed last Friday by a gathering of near relatives in honor of the occasion. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Booth, Mr. and Mrs. Melven Booth of Brimfield, Mr. and Mrs. Tift of Westford, Ct., Henry Brown of Springfield and Mr. and Mrs. William Brown of Monson. The company included also three of the children and two grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Booth. After dinner had been partaken of an original poem was read by Mrs. William Brown and there was music. Mr. and Mrs. Booth have lived in Brimfield since 1873. Mr. Booth is a native of Union, Ct., and Mrs. Booth was Miss Lizzie Brown of Longmeadow. They have had six children, five of whom are living. They are Homer S. Booth of Monson, Mrs. Hattie Booth Fuller of Monson, Harry W. Booth of South Framingham, Hubert and Howard of Brimfield.

Death of Mrs. Emma Marsh.

The death of Mrs. Emma Marsh, 57, the wife of Charles H. Marsh, occurred Sunday at her home in Little Rest after a long and painful illness. Mrs. Marsh was Miss Emma Reynolds of South Hadley. Mr. and Mrs. Marsh have lived on the Morgan place in Little Rest for several years, while Mrs. Marsh had been confined to her home on account of poor health during much of that time. The funeral was held at the home Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Samuel Eaton officiating.

Miss Hattie Eaton has entered Westfield normal school.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Sept. 29, 1909.

Foresight of the state conventions of the week will be hindsight by the time this letter can be written, hence matter of general interest, rather than detailed statements, will only fill the emergency. First, in regard to the candidacy of Eugene N Foss for the second place on the Democratic state ticket. This sensation was not sprung till yesterday afternoon, when a Boston paper published it. But it has been in preparation for weeks, and there is a history to it. The idea originated in the Democratic state headquarters, where it was believed that Foss's strong difference from the Republican position on the tariff, as evidenced by his heading for several years the liberal tariff reform movement in the Republican party which even had Murray Crane in its counsels at one time, and his running twice for the Republican nomination for Congress, would make it easy for him to see his way to supporting the Democratic principles, if they put tariff reform at the front. Accordingly Foss was sounded weeks ago in regard to permitting the use of his name. He entertained the idea, but wanted time for consideration. He consulted William A. Gaston among others, so it is said, and the consequence of his advice was that Foss declined to have anything further to do with the proposition. Then he was urged further by the Democratic organization, thought it over further and decided to permit the use of his name, but not if there was a contest for the place. If the convention will tender him the nomination without him fighting for it, then they can have his acceptance. To-day further report has it that the wealthy interests are besieging him to refuse, telling him they will not help him to finance his big cotton mill in East Boston and other threatening things if he helps the wicked Democrats. So, at this hour the outcome is uncertain, and if he is not the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, this may throw some light upon the reason why. Among the Republicans there is wonder that he will put himself again in the position of being bled of his money by politicians, but he has had warning enough to know the business better than he did when he began.

If there is trouble over the nomination of James H. Vahey as candidate for governor, let it be written for light on the day after that among his friends this afternoon there is anxiety lest they have been too confident and not alone enough to pledge delegates to him, in view of the fact that Mayor John T. Conghlin of Fall River claims a solid delegation there, that he says he is very strong in Worcester county and has so much strength elsewhere that he is a dangerous rival. Up to this time it has not appeared here that he was a candidate to make the slightest trouble for Vahey. Back of Conghlin's activity is said to be the desire of conservative Democrats to prevent Vahey's nomination, and the name of Josiah Quincy is given as an active opponent of Vahey and supporter of Conghlin, but the face of the situation does not show any reason why the conservatives should prefer Conghlin to Vahey.

It is a long time since the bow of harmony and hope hung as rosy over the Democratic headquarters as it does this afternoon, before the convention of the morrow. They are counting upon a material accession of tariff reform Republicans under the leadership of Eugene N. Foss. They believe that the income tax will draw some votes. They count much on the new Democratic harmony to redeem the past. Their state committee has done good work in all parts of the state. Chairman Macleod has risen to the needs of the occasion finely. Complete harmony exists between the committee and the candidate. Money is in sight for expenses, and the outlook is unusually cheering, as they see it.

Survey of the political field would not be complete without mention of the defeat of J. Otis Wardwell of Haverhill for re-election to the Republican state committee after having been a member 25 years. Yet it is impossible to find that his defeat for that position has any reference to his service on the committee Inquiry here fails to disclose any act or policy of his on the committee which is condemned or to be reformed, but the entire trouble has been local. In his long career he has made bitter enemies and strong friends. This was the only way his enemies had to get at him, and they got. But it counts for much publicly that one of the strongest machine men of the party has been beaten thoroughly in his own city and senatorial district after a fight which had been in progress during the entire summer and when the successful candidate refused to say that he would support Senator Lodge for re-election when he comes up again in 1911 and when the other side made the most possible of its identification with Lodge. As it is the worst defeat which the party organization has suffered for a long time, and as it was coincident with several other similar instances in other parts of the state, the entire series is traced to a masterful combination rumored to include John Hays Hammond, the greatest mining engineer of the world, with $250,000 salary, living in Gloucester and just now very close to President Taft on his trip, Congressman Butler Ames, ex-Speaker John N. Cole and others whose ultimate purpose is to throw Lodge out of his seat in the Senate, for which Mass is already a candidate. It is a pretty story for a sensation, but the accumulation of direful facts over the senior Senator's head does not make it at all probable that he can be defeated for re-election.

At the sixth councilor Republican convention this afternoon at which Herbert E. Fletcher of Westford was nominated unanimously to succeed Seward W. Jones of Newton, Representative William F. Garceau of Newton, who is known as a vigilant partisan, warned every delegate to go home and do everything he could to get out the last Republican vote in order to save Gov. Draper from defeat. This was because the American Federation of Labor has declared against the governor, and Garceau is much afraid that they will succeed in carrying out their threat. But the feeling is entirely different at the Republican state headquarters. They point out the fact that Representative Doyle of New Bedford, Republican, in his labor union meeting, denounced the attack upon the governor and that his union was with him unanimously. They believe that Draper is well liked by labor men, as always, and that if the tariff issue is forced to the front, it will turn many Democrats to Draper in the large mill cities where are cotton and woolen mills, and the tariff has been especially favorable to cottons and woolens, as President Taft conceded when he said that the woolen schedule was the thing he did not like. But, at any rate, if it was bad, say the Republican arguers, Massachusetts was favored and the operatives are helped by it; therefore they will stand by the party which stood by them.

But there are other things than politics. The Cook-Peary dispute, which has interested so many, is wearing out the patience and many skip everything but the headlines, preferring to wait till the issue is settled, rather than settle it themselves. Dr. Cook will lecture in Symphony Hall the evening before the Republican state convention under the auspices of the Arctic Club, and the seats are priced at $3, $2 and $1. So he comes high, for a lecturer. Nothing is heard of any effort here to give Peary a reception, though no one doubts that he reached the pole. It is his manners which are criticised.

Simmons college was started seven years ago, it will be remembered, for the purpose of giving an education in practical walks of life, in the better ways, to young women who had not the means for a regular college education and would be obliged to earn their own living. One of the women professors in the college, speaking this week of the success of the college, said that they have more this year than ever before and that there is a constant demand for their graduates. This professor was in the department which has cooking as one of its branches, and she says that the greatest demand is for dieticians for public institutions. It is difficult to get enough to satisfy the demand. As far as known, none of the graduates have been picked up by private families who want to put a person of expert scientific education in cooking in charge of their household arrangements, for the salary which such a graduate commands is supposed to limit the demand to institutions which can afford to pay the price. Perhaps the success of this department is a foreshadowing of the day when we shall eat scientifically from scientific viands with highly refined table manners and literary language, in such a perfectly elysian atmosphere that our ancestors would suppose it to be heaven itself, if they could take a look at us. These incidents assure us that there are other developments in the future than flying machines and trips to the poles and universal peace, but that even the gastronomic art and drawing-room manners at table may differentiate our successors from us more significantly than our modes of travel.

Over at Harvard memorial hall, the price of board has risen in consequence of the upward movement of provisions so that $5.25 per week is the figure now and nobody knows what it will be next. These rising prices are destined to figure in the campaign this fall.

Monson News.

DISAGREEMENT—ACQUITTAL.

Results of Appealed Monson Liquor Cases Tried in Superior Court.

Two of the appealed cases of illegal liquor selling—those of Fiske G. Rogers of the Century Hotel and John F. O'Neil of the Monson House—were tried in the superior court last and this week, and resulted in a "hung" jury in the case of Rogers and an acquittal for O'Neil. The jury in the Rogers case was out from about 11 o'clock Friday morning until court opened Saturday morning, standing seven for conviction to five for acquittal. The difficulty of securing convictions in liquor cases of spotter evidence is evidenced by the remark of one of the jurors that he'd stay out until "hell froze over" before he'd convict on evidence of that sort.

Funeral of Edward W. Oakes.

The funeral of Edward W. Oakes was held from the residence of his son, John W. Oakes, in Worcester Sunday. The services were held in St. Paul's church at 3 p m, being conducted by Rev. The selectmen gave a hearing in the selectmen's room in the town hall last evening on the petition of the New England Telephone and Telegraph company to erect poles on Mechanic and Green streets for the purpose of running a cable instead of the present open wires. The company explained that they could not change the location of their wires with their present right so as to keep them out of the trees and away from the high powered electric wires which causes very noisy lines and causes poor service to the subscribers. As it was believed by the abutters that the company desired to better its service, there was no objection to granting the petition.

Kidney disease advances so rapidly that many a person is firmly in its grasp before aware of its progress. Prompt attention should be given the slightest symptom of kidney disorder. If there is a dnll pain in the back, headaches, dizzy spells or a tired, worn-out feeling, or if the nrine is dark, foul-smelling, irregular and attended with pain, procnre a good kidney remedy at once.

Your townspeople recommend Doan's Kidney Pills Read the following:

H. P. Keith, living on Main street, Thorndike, Palmer, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are not a new remedy to me. For five or six years I nsed this preparation with the best of resnlts. In my occupation I have a great deal of heavy lifting to do and have no donht that the strain in my kidneys caused the severe backaches. On such occasions I appeal to Doan's Kidney Pills and never fail to find relief. The last attack I had about two months ago was the worst I ever experienced. At night after my day's work was over my back felt as if it would break. I knew what to do from past experience, and at once procured Doan's Kidney Pills. They gave me quick relief, and before I had finished the contents of the box I was completely cured. I will always have a good word to say for this excellent remedy for I know it can be depended upon."

HIS NARROW ESCAPE.

By JOHN C. ARMSTRONG.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

When I was twenty-five years old I passed a crisis in my life at which I shudder today, though it happened forty years ago. For two hours I was suspended, so to speak, between a life of comfort and a prison, and the two hours ended with five minutes between life and death.

This is how it happened:

When the Union Pacific railroad was building I was taken up by one of its most influential directors with a view to preferment. The only position he could secure for me at first was paymaster, but promised if I proved worthy to do better later on. My work was to go over the line as far as completed in a pay car and pay off the employees. Well, on one of these trips I reached Julesburg, then the terminal, though Laramie was to be made the terminal in a few days. I paid off at Julesburg, having between $4,000 and $5,000 left for the force at Laramie, and I was to go there the next morning.

To kill time I went over to a hotel near the station, where I found a number of men playing poker. I sat down to watch the game and had not done so very long before I observed that none of the players seemed to know very much about the game. I had a hundred dollars of my own in my pocket besides the money I was to pay off with at Laramie. I had played poker a good deal for small stakes with my friends and was considered by them as an adept at the game. It occurred to me that I might as well take some of the money that was passing to and fro between these men, and—well, I foolishly took a hand.

I was what they were playing for, and they continued to play for me till they had got my hundred dollars. Then came the temptation to recoup with the company's money, a yielding, and the loss of nearly all of it. I knew by this time that the men were card sharpers and were cheating me. But I knew also that to accuse any one of them would bring on a row that would expose me. As to fighting them with their own weapons, cheating, if I did so and was detected I would get a bullet in my brain.

A terrible situation like this doesn't usually affect one at the time as it does after it has passed. Though I have for years looked upon it with horror, at the time my feelings did not get the better of my equanimity. I presume this was because I realized that to keep my head was my only chance.

There was $4,500 in the pot, or just the amount I had lost. On the previous hand I had picked up several cards that had fallen on the floor and slipped one of them up my sleeve. I was so desperate that I resolved to cheat and if I did not win the big pot on the table let the others see that I was cheating and get a bullet in my brain. When my hand was dealt me there were two kings in it. I drew three cards, one of them being a king. The card I had picked up off the floor was a king. I had given up an ace, so no one could hold four aces. The only hand to beat four kings was a royal flush, a pretty hard hand for any one to purposely make up while being watched. If I could get in my four kings I could save myself. But what would I do with the extra card? I was desperate, as I have said, and resolved to trust to luck to get rid of it without detection. A device occurred to me. Drinks were coming on, and, seeing some sandwiches on a counter waiting to be sent out to another party, I called for one of them. As soon as I had secured it I uttered an exclamation and looked fixedly through the open doorway. Every man turned his head, and I slipped my extra card into the sandwich. When the men turned I was eating bread, meat and card altogether.

I won the pot, but one of the party, looking at me fixedly, said, "Stranger, what'd you see when you sang out so suddenly just now?"

My success gave me confidence, and I kept my coolness, but I could think of nothing probable for a reply. "I thought I saw a friend of mine," I replied, "out there whom I supposed to be in Chicago."

"Are you sure you ain't got a deck up your sleeve or somewhere."

"What do you mean?" I replied, bristling. Rising, I shook my sleeves and turned my pockets inside out, showing that no card could be concealed on my person. Then, scooping up the pot, I said:

"Gentlemen, I have been accused of cheating, and I will play no more. I am loser by about $75, so that I have a perfect right to quit."

Though I knew my life hung in the balance, nothing could equal the relief I felt as I turned squarely away and walked out of the house. They doubtless felt sure I had purposely directed their attention from myself while I cheated, but I had not been detected, and the difference was the difference between life and death.

It would be impossible to describe my feelings as I walked to my car. Horror, relief and so many other emotions were mingled that I didn't know whether I walked, staggered or flew. When I reached my car I threw myself on my bunk and shook like a leaf in the wind.

The crisis passed. I was sure never to be caught again. I was rapidly promoted, became one of the principal officers of another road and have had a successful life.

EAST BRIMFIELD.

William Basnor of Springfield was in town Sunday.

This section was visited by a frost recently, a quantity of garden truck being nipped.

The two-tenement honse being built here by the Snell Manufacturing Company is nearly completed.

Mrs John Bassinette of Canada has been a recent visitor at the home of her son, Vinne Bassinette, where she observed her 85th birthday in a pleasant manner recently. Many of her relatives called on her during the day.

The water has been very low in the canal here for the past few weeks and the Snell Manufacturing Company have been forced to run their plant by steam. The three days of rain have proved to be of great benefit and water is plentiful.

The Holland and East Brimfield farmers have been having some good harvesting weather in the past Frnit has been plenty in most places, potatoes are of good size and plenty of them and good crops of hay and corn have been harvested.

Johnson's Bookstore in Springfield has opened a circulating library of fiction that was received with such instant approval and large patronage as to leave no donbt of the field for its usefulness. A great many people do not enjoy taking their chances at a public library, especially to get a new book, and yet do not want to buy books until they have read them, and the two cents per day charged at Johnson's seems to be about the right figure, for the demand is large. The new library thus places the resources of the largest bookstore in New England at the public disposal in a simple, inexpensive way.

Last Saturday afternoon the Invincibles, captained by C. D. Holden, defeated the Excelsiors at a game of baseball on the Boston Duck Co's. ball field with a score of 19 to 18 In spite of the big score the game was interesting on account of its closeness all through the game. Whidyka and Whitehead, Gloster and Laccas, were the batteries. Both batteries did good work, but fielding support was poor on both sides. Strike outs for Whidyka 9, for Gloster 6. Double play by Taylor and Holden. Home run by Taylor. The batting showed heavy hitters on both sides, which might well be envied by Bondsville's first team.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Paw Paw, Mich.—"I suffered terribly from female ills, including inflammation and congestion, for several years. My doctor said there was no hope for me but an operation. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I can now say I am a well woman."
EMMA DRAPER.

Another Operation Avoided.

Chicago, Ill.—"I want women to know what that wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has done for me. Two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation, and I never thought of seeing a well day again. I had a small tumor and female troubles so that I suffered day and night. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it made me a well woman."—Mrs. ALVENA SPERLING, 11 Langdon St., Chicago, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to many suffering women.

The Stories She Wrote and Her Own Self as Well

By LAURA MARY ROGERS

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Miss Lilia Hibbard opened her stamp box and looked despairingly at its emptiness. Then she turned the contents of her portfolio upon the afghan and searched among the loose leaves and envelopes. Not a stamp to be found!

The search was a mere formality, for she could account for every one of the dozen stamps she had borrowed a week ago. With compressed lips she looked for inspiration around the room and out in the hall. Mr. Wilkins was coming down the stairs.

Miss Lilia caught her breath. He was the only lodger to whom she did not owe stamps. It had been a comfort to her to feel self respecting in regard to one of the lodgers, and she had told herself that it was not merely because he had never put himself in the way of her solicitations. But now—why cling to such a small remnant of pride!

"Mr. Wilkins," she called softly.

A middle aged man with an ecru mustache presented himself at the door.

"Are you—worse?" he inquired awkwardly. "Shall I call your sisters?"

"Oh, no; please don't, Mr. Wilkins," Miss Lilia rejoined fervently.

"Will you do me a favor, Mr. Wilkins?"

"Yes'm, certainly," Mr. Wilkins murmured, and Miss Lilia hurried on:

"I should be so much obliged if you would mail this for me. I can't ask my sisters, for I don't want them to know about it, and I haven't any stamps, and I think it will take four, two inside and two out, and I haven't any change now, but I won't forget it."

Mr. Wilkins produced a stamp book, extracted a neat row of stamps and solemnly applied them to the bulky envelope.

"And two inside?" he questioned.

"Yes, please," Miss Lilia said gayly.

Mr. Wilkins looked at her with wonder and alarm in his eyes, and before she knew it Miss Lilia had broken her resolution to be reserved and was in the middle of the explanation that the seven other lodgers already knew. In the usual order she revealed to him her secret to write, her spasmodic attempts at composition during the busy years of public school teaching and her constant efforts at literary production since she had been laid low by a stricken knee.

The recital had hitherto ended there, leaving her success to be inferred, but something in Mr. Wilkins' grave attention led her to add in a voice that was intended to be indifferent, but sounded discouraged:

"But I've never had a thing accepted. Everything comes back!"

"Oh, well, you can't expect to make it go right off," Mr. Wilkins assured her.

"How do stories sell?" he inquired. "Do they pay pretty well?"

"Oh, yes, if you can sell them," Miss Lilia replied wistfully. "Why, a story of that length ought to get $25, but, of course, it makes a difference who writes it."

There suddenly seemed to be nothing to say, and Mr. Wilkins left before Miss Lilia could elaborate her thanks.

Left alone, she turned her face to the wall in a kind of spasm of shame. Now there was not a lodger she could look in the face—and she owed forty-two stamps! Then the usual reaction came. She reflected that this was no time for scruples. The simplest calculation showed her that her sisters were running behind in the household expenses, and from ordinary observation she knew that they were starving themselves.

Just then Miss Louisa brought her an eggnog, and she fancied Miss Louise looked at her hungrily.

A week later, when Mr. Wilkins hurried up the stairs one night, he was greeted by a shout from Miss Lilia.

"Come here!" she called joyfully.

Mr. Wilkins found her propped up among her pillows, as usual, but her face was pink with excitement, her eyes glistened, and the pink ribbons were in disarray.

"Look at this!" she commanded, and she thrust under his eyes a letter. It was a brief statement that her story, "A Paltry Ring," had been accepted with thanks and that she would find inclosed a check for $30.

Mr. Wilkins sought for words, and Miss Lilia laughed merrily.

"I don't wonder you're surprised," she said, "but you should have seen us when that letter came." Then followed a detailed account of the rapturous day.

"Oh, it has encouraged me so!" Miss Lilia concluded. "I am just full of plans. I'm going to begin another story tomorrow about the French revolution. I always loved that period of history."

The next day found Miss Lilia writing feverishly except during the intervals when she summoned lodgers and returned their stamps. A few days later she waylaid Mr. Wilkins again and intrusted to him the mailing of "For Love of Francois," proudly furnishing the stamps herself.

"I ask you because I think you are a good mascot," she said girlishly. "This is quite a little longer than the other one, and I can't help feeling hopeful."

"It's all in getting a start," Mr. Wilkins said, and Miss Lilia nodded.

The second acceptance was almost a matter of course. It came ten days later, accompanied by a check for $35, and Miss Lilia showed gain in poise. It does not take long to become accustomed to success.

"I'm getting only 'accepted with thanks' now," she said happily to Mr. Wilkins, and he realized that she had got started. There was a manuscript all ready to be mailed which she consigned to Mr. Wilkins.

"I wouldn't let any one else mail it for the world," she said, and Mr. Wilkins blushed deeply.

Exactly a week later Miss Louisa panted up the stairs with the letter for Miss Lilia, and Miss Luella followed after. Miss Lilia received it almost nonchalantly, but a little shriek escaped her as a line slip fell out.

"It's for $15," she announced. "It was a short one, you know." Then she read the letter aloud in a tone that tried to be businesslike.

"Your story, 'The Love of a Life,' is accepted with thanks."

As she finished reading "C. Burton, treasurer," she suddenly turned pale, gasped and thrust the letter under her pillow.

"Eighty dollars in less than a month!" Miss Luella was saying. "Why, Lilia will be rich pretty soon."

But Miss Louisa had been watching Miss Lilia, and she threw up the window and fanned her vigorously.

"No wonder you're faint," she said. "It's enough to take any one's breath away," and she acquiesced when Miss Lilia suggested that entire quiet would be good for her.

It was only two hours before Mr. Wilkins came, but Miss Lilia had grown old and haggard since she had dismissed her sisters. Mr. Wilkins was startled as he stood in the doorway in response to her faint call.

"Has anything happened?" he asked anxiously.

"Yes," she answered hopelessly. "I got the letter."

"What letter?" Mr. Wilkins asked.

For answer Miss Lilia drew the crumbled letter from under her pillow, unfolded it and pointed to the top of the paper. Mr. Wilkins looked at the familiar words, "Horace O. Wilkins, Grain and Feed."

"Oh, that greenhorn!" he groaned. Then he looked at Miss Lilia.

"Well, what are you going to do about it now that you've found it out?"

"I don't know," Miss Lilia said desperately. "We haven't $65 in the world. We used it all for rent and things."

"Oh, I don't mean that!" exclaimed Mr. Wilkins. "But don't be hard on me. I couldn't help doing it. It made you so happy. And you never would have known it if Edward hadn't used that paper—and I'd got plain paper all ready for him."

"I'm glad he did," Miss Lilia said bitterly, "because now I can pay you back some time. I'll have to get well now."

A sudden light glowed in Mr. Wilkins' faded eyes. "Say, what do you suppose I did it for?" he asked almost angrily. "Course I see now it was the wrong way to go at it. But I wanted to give you what you wanted, and I contrived every way to do it. I see now that I ought to have come right out with it, same as any other man would, but you're a teacher, and I was afraid you wouldn't look at me. I didn't know how—I never had a girl—before." He added the last word boldly.

The color had returned to Miss Lila's face, and tears rolled down her cheeks.

"And those stories are worth every cent I paid for them. I prize them more'n all of Shakespeare and—and John G. Saxe," he declared. "They show you know all about love, and you ought to understand"—

Miss Lilia interrupted him. "Do you know that I'm thirty"—

"I know you're my girl. I don't care about anything else," and Mr. Wilkins put the arm of possession around her.

When Miss Louisa and Miss Luella appeared a little later Miss Lilia clasped Mr. Wilkins' hand for safety and explained happily to the transfixed pair, "We're going to take the whole of this floor for ours."

After the situation had been fully grasped and considered in all its delightful aspects Miss Luella asked respectfully, "Are you going to keep on writing, Lilia?"

Miss Lilia's face clouded. "No," she stammered.

Then Mr. Wilkins came to the front with a new found sense of humor.

"No," he said hilariously, "she's been 'accepted with thanks.'"

Sort of a Cannibal.

An old farmer for many years got his dinner on market days at a small hotel kept by a widow. She had long suspected that he ate more than the price (1s. 6d.) warranted, so she determined to test him. She accordingly arranged matters so that there was no room for him at table, but she took him into a private room the table of which was graced by a steaming leg of mutton. He set to in good earnest, and soon nothing was left but the bones. Highly delighted with his cheap feed, on passing the bar he tendered 2 shillings for his dinner and a quart of ale.

The widow declined to take any payment on the ground of having inconvenienced him so much.

Chuckling to himself, the farmer lifted down his market basket from a hook, and, finding it rather light, he tore off the covering and shouted:

"Here, Mrs. Brown, where's my leg o' mutton?

"Why, yr old silly," said the widow, "ye have ate your leg for your dinner!"—London Answers.

A MODERN GALATEA.

"Hearts Have Changed Little Since Pygmalion's Time."

By CRITTENDEN MARRIOTT.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

As Wykoff entered the parlor a young man who was warming his hands at the fire looked up.

"Hello, Wykoff!" he said languidly. "It's you, of course."

Wykoff did not seem any better pleased at the meeting than did the speaker. "Humph!" he remarked disgustedly. "I might have known I'd find you here, Meredith."

"It's mutual," returned the other, with a gesture of resignation. "I can't for the life of me see how you can afford to neglect business this way, old man. Maybe, though, you have seen Forbes this morning."

Wykoff shook his head. He did not seem in the least interested.

"He was looking for you," went on Meredith. "I don't know what he wanted, but I imagine from his manner that it was something important. He said he would be at his office till 5 o'clock. It's nearly that now, and you had better hurry if you want to see him."

"Forbes can wait. Look here, Meredith! I'm tired of seeing you hanging around here all the time. I wish"—

Before Wykoff could explain what he wished a girl swept into the room, holding out her hands in grave welcome. "How do you do, Mr. Wykoff?" she said quietly. "How do you do, Mr. Meredith? I seem to be honored this afternoon. Will you ring for the tea, Mr. Meredith? Sit down, Mr. Wykoff. You look troubled. I hope nothing is wrong." Her tones were calm. Any one could see that she took little interest in the affairs of others.

"Wykoff isn't troubled, Miss Curtis. That's his way of expressing extravagant joy. He was just saying how pleased he was to see me here."

The girl glanced at Wykoff, who was plainly seeking for some retort—and finding none. Airy persiflage was not in his line.

"You must not tease Mr. Wykoff," she said gently. "When is that sister of yours coming to see me, Mr. Wykoff? I want"—

The sentence was never finished, for with a rush a small girl bounded into the room and flung herself on Wykoff. "Oh, Mr. Wykoff!" she cried. "Come right out and sculp my snow man. You promised you would." She caught his hand and tried to drag him to the door.

"Bessie! Let Mr. Wykoff alone," interposed Miss Curtis. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself."

A gleam came into Meredith's eyes. "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings," he quoted gayly. "Positively you are getting quite a reputation, Wykoff. Keep on and maybe you'll get a real client some day—somebody who wants to be 'sculped' in marble, to adopt Miss Bessie's charmingly expressive word."

Wykoff winced. No one knew better than he that so far he had not made a moneyed success in his art; sculptors have little honor in western America. He had known Meredith all his life and, being tongue tied himself, had greatly admired the other's glibness until he himself had become a target for it. He hesitated now, angry all through, but fearing if he spoke at all he might say more than he intended.

Little Bessie, however, had no such scruples. Deliberately she fixed her eyes on Meredith. "I don't like you," she deposed positively.

"Bessie!" Miss Curtis was scandalized.

"I can't help it, Sister Mary. I don't like him. So there!" She turned to Wykoff. "You promised," she reiterated wistfully, "and I've got a snow pile all built and"—

Reluctantly Wykoff rose. "I really did promise, Miss Curtis," he declared, "and I suppose I must keep my word."

He spoke sorrowfully, for he hated to leave the field to his rival, even though all he could do was to stand and take punishment and pretend he liked it.

But if Meredith expected to profit by the other's disappearance he reckoned without his host—or his hostess. Miss Curtis talked on in the grave, quiet way that had stirred the heart of more than one man, but she gave him no chance to bring up the question which lay nearest to his somewhat sophisticated heart—the question he had come resolved to ask before he left. Finally, when the conversation began to languish, she rose, declaring that the house was abominably hot. She insisted on going out to see what Mr. Wykoff had done with the snow man.

Meredith made no demur. Wise in the ways of women, he knew better than to try to force the conversation. In the girl's existent mood he did not fear Wykoff and welcomed rather than otherwise the chance to break some shafts of wit on what he deemed that gentleman's sluggish intellect. Wykoff, he thought, afforded an excellent foil for his own brilliancy.

When he and Miss Curtis reached the front door neither Wykoff nor little Bessie was in sight. A line of footsteps, however, led across the snow to where a clump of evergreens stood in the corner of the lawn, and toward these the girl led the way.

Her feet sank soundlessly in the deep carpet of snow, and they rounded a bush and came upon Wykoff before he heard them.

Bessie had disappeared, and Wykoff was alone for the moment—and yet not alone. Before him rose a splendid figure—the figure of a goddess or of a woman of heroic size, on whose exquisite features, smoother and fairer than ever sculptor cut from living marble, rested a look that made Mary Curtis catch her breath—the look of one who, capable of all things, was yet imprisoned in an icy shell from which no lover's kiss had called her. One arm hung by her side; the other, bare to the elbow, was raised in warning—or was it invitation? From her slim neck the Grecian drapery ran down in pure flowing lines to the trampled snow which had given her birth.

As she gazed, open eyed, Wykoff dropped his knife and stretched out his arms to the statue.

"Galatea!" he cried. "Galatea! Come to life! Come to life!" His words trailed away indistinguishably.

Meredith shook off the spell that had for an instant bound him in spite of himself and burst into a laugh that jarred.

"Bravo, Wykoff!" he cried. "That figure's great! Really, I didn't know you had it in you! It's a good likeness too! Of course it doesn't do Miss Curtis justice, but"—

"Hush!" Gently but firmly Mary Curtis pushed him aside and stepped forward. A strange new look burned in her eyes, a look of wonder, perhaps of rapture. "What were you saying of Galatea, Mr. Wykoff?" she asked gently. "I could not hear you distinctly."

"He was making love to her!" chuckled Meredith. "Fancy old Wykoff making love to a snow woman. Playing Pygmalion to an icy Galatea. You can't deny it, old man!"

Mary Curtis did not even turn her head. Her eyes were fixed on Wykoff. With a shade of wonder in them she waited for him to answer.

At last he spoke. "I don't want to deny it!" he choked. "I want to tell it! I want to cry it out so that Galatea cannot help but hear and heed. If I could say it as I think it, I know she would wake to life and answer me. But I never shall say it. I shall never dare to say it. I—"

Mary Curtis raised her hand. "Perhaps you have said it," she answered softly. "Hearts have changed little since Pygmalion's time. Perhaps Galatea may not be so frozen as you think! Perhaps"—

With a cry Wykoff caught her in his arms. "Galatea!" he cried. "Galatea!"

"Well, I'll be hanged!" Meredith was staring open mouthed at the two. "Don't mind me," he continued. "I was just going away."

Mary Curtis disengaged herself, laughing. "Don't go, Mr. Meredith," she protested. "We want you to."

"To be our best man," interrupted Wykoff.

Curious Lore About Mandrake.

Perhaps the most extraordinary of the properties attributed to mandrake are those which it shared, in common with the rastrivtrava of Russia, of enabling housebreakers to pick locks, which is certainly one of the most amusing developments of the solar theory. "Love," it is said, "laughs at locksmiths," but the connection between the mandrake and "burgling" seems a little forced. There is a tradition that the moonwort will unshoe horses if they step upon the plant, and similar powers have been attributed to the vervain and the mandrake. It is, on the other hand, still part of the rural lore of Oxfordshire, Buckinghamshire and Hampshire that the root will improve a horse's condition, but this seems to be founded upon the identification of the mandrake with the bryony, which played such a great part in old English herbalism. It is, however, more than doubtful whether the plants belong to the same class. But both are alike in the curious wealth of legend which surrounds them. East and west meet in their folk and flower lore.—Chambers' Journal.

Harmless.

A district visitor was paying calls on the folk in a row of cottages and was shocked by the conduct of a shabbily dressed old gentleman who passed from door to door in a great rage and threatened the occupants with all manner of dire penalties.

"Dear me, what a peculiar old man!" she exclaimed to one of the tenants. "Why do you permit him to abuse you in that fashion?"

"Oh, we don't mind in the least, ma'am," answered the tenant, with a twinkle in his eyes. "We're quite used to his little ways by now. He's been a harmless lunatic for ten or eleven years."

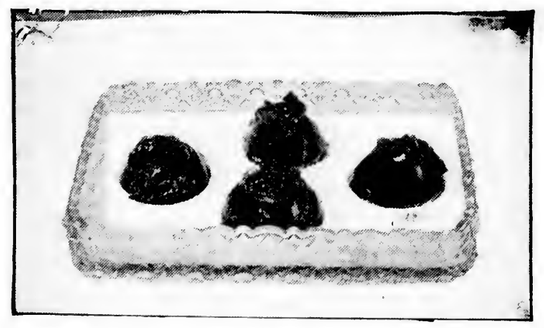
"You don't say so! Poor old fellow! What particular form does his madness take?"

"Optimism, ma'am. He comes for the rent every Monday and actually allows himself to fancy that he'll get it!"—London Answers.

The Faust Legend.

For 1,400 years the Faust legend—the sale of a human soul to a devil—has existed. The first recorded hint of its vitality is given in the sixth century story of "Theophilus." That story suited the early Christians in their efforts to stamp out the necromancing devices of evilly disposed persons prone to seek power by unholy means. The association of the name of Faust, however, with the legend is not more than 400 years old. The likeliest prototype of the modern Faust is the man of the same name who in Cracow boldly proclaimed himself a professor of magic. In the sixteenth century stories Helen of Troy was bestowed by Mephistopheles upon Faust, and not until the middle of the eighteenth century does there appear a shadowy Margaret, in the form of a "beautiful but poor girl," who afterward develops into the Margaret of Goethe.

On Hiring a Cook.



The woman in need of a cook was so well groomed and looked so generally prosperous that the manager of the employment agency thought he had at last found a place for the high priced French cook for whom he had been trying to find a situation. But the new customer would not even listen to the praises of the French cook.

"Don't mention French cooks to me," she said, "nor graduates of cooking schools. I've tried both. I like their cooking, and I don't object to the wages they ask, but they take up too much room. My kitchen isn't large enough to hold all the cooking utensils they require, and my income isn't large enough to buy them. Those stylish cooks need four times as many pots and pans and molds and things as ordinary cooks use. If I hire a fancy cook I shall have to move into a fancy apartment to get a kitchen big enough to accommodate her."

"That is a common complaint against these experts, foreign and American," sighed the manager. "I am beginning to think there must be something in it."—New York Sun.

The skins of animals were the earliest forms of money. Sheep and oxen among the old Romans took the place of money.

Household Hints.

COFFEE JELLY.

Make one cup of black coffee, being sure that it is perfectly clear. Soak one-half box of gelatine in one-half cup of cold water for one hour. The tendency of most cooks in using gelatine is to cut short the time of soaking it, trusting that the boiling water added later will complete the dissolving. But the solution is never perfect and a part of the gelatine is wasted and the mixture lacks in firmness just as much as is wasted. Pour one and three-quarters cups of boiling water on the soaked gelatine, stir until clear, add one-half cup of sugar and the one cup of hot black coffee. Strain at once while hot through several folds of cheese cloth into small molds.

This jelly will take several hours to become firm and it is better to make it the day before it is to be served. Serve with thin cream.

Coffee jelly makes an attractive dessert if molded in a border mold and the centre is filled with whipped cream. Buy thick cream for beating or whipping and chill it well. Then add about one-third as much milk, otherwise it may turn into butter while beating. Allow three level tablespoonfuls of ground coffee for the amount of black coffee to be used in the jelly.

The Antalgica

Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Coughs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do you good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle by The Quimby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

THE PALMER FAIR.

Opened This Morning Under Favorable Auspices.

LARGE EXHIBITS IN ALL DEPARTMENTS

To-day is Children's Day, With Thousands On The Grounds. A Big Program To-morrow.

Expectations are being fully met at the Palmer Fair, which opened this morning with everything in its favor. The beautiful weather is all that was needed to assure success and the steady flow of people into the park, beginning at an early hour this morning, shows that the predictions of a record attendance were not without warrant. The officials of the society have for some weeks been promising that this fair would be the best in the history of the society and they have kept their word.

Those who have attended other fairs in this section this year notice a pleasing difference immediately upon passing through the gates. At last they have reached a fair. There is something to amuse and interest on every part of the grounds. There was racing and an attractive stage show this afternoon for those who desire spectacles of that kind, but one may occupy the day fully and with profit without going near the grandstand. The cattle show is one of the sort we hear about as having been common generations ago. More cattle had arrived upon the grounds last night than are usually seen at a cattle show, but they were all from a distance. The nearby herds did not arrive until this morning. The hall show, upstairs and down, is the best ever. The display in the lower hall is especially strong and it seems probable that the society must recognize the need of more hall room before another year.

School children are admitted to the grounds free of charge to-day and thousands of them have taken advantage of this generosity. To-morrow will be the great day, however. Every attraction will be at its best then and the sports and racing will be of an unusual order.

The midway this year is more attractive than ever. The fakirs are beginning to like Palmer. They get fair treatment here and they say the system of ground renting is the best they know of. Not a fakir has been given a privilege about whose attraction there can be the slightest question as to its fairness and propriety and the smallest child may freely see the wonders of the midway without any uneasiness on the part of parents.

SUIT FOR $15,000.

Brought Against Springfield Firm For Death of Ernest Prescott.

Among the entries in the superior court this week is a suit for $15 000 brought by the administrator of the estate of the late Ernest Prescott of Springfield, formerly of Palmer, against the United Electric Light Company of Springfield. Young Prescott and another employe of the Benjamin F. Whelden Co. were killed June 24 while at work installing a galvanized iron pipe or hot-air duct at the river-front plant of the lighting company. The men were working on a staging, when, according to reports of the accident, one of them came in contact with the powerful electric current, which caused their deaths. Carroll & McClintock appear for the estates of both men, both having brought suit for $15,000.

FIRST MEETING OF YEAR.

Historical Society Has Interesting Session.

PROGRAM OF THE YEAR'S WORK.

Interesting Paper by Dr. O. P. Allen. Committee Appointed to Locate Old Soldiers' Graves.

The first meeting for the current year of the Palmer Historical Society was held in the reference room of the public library Tuesday evening. President James B. Stone presided. The regular routine business was transacted, and the following donations received: Portrait of Jacob B Merritt, formerly of Thorndike, and a book entitled "Science, Scenery and Art," presented by Mrs Sarah B. Newton of Monson. "The vital records of Spencer" was also received A vote of thanks was extended Mrs. Newton for her gift.

The paper of the evening was given by Dr O. P Allen, his subject being "Old Center Epochs and the Passing of Burgoyne's Army." Dr Allen told of the settlement of the Old Center, the building of the old church and the gradual introduction of stores; also the building of the old Frink tavern and others He spoke of the increased value of the land as the settlement grew, and stated that with the coming of the stage coach that location bid fair to become the business center of the town. He called attention to the men located there who were prominent in the affairs of the town in their day. He told of the location of the old cemetery and paid tribute to the many men of note who were buried there. The coming of the railroad and the formation of new villages and the isolation of the Old Center brought about many changes. The business houses were removed to Thorndike and Palmer, the taverns were discontinued and with the stopping of the stage line this became once more a simple village hamlet.

Dr. Allen also alluded to the passing of Burgoyne's army through the town of Palmer. There were two routes taken, a section of the army came through Springfield, thence through the present village of Palmer to Warren and then on towards Boston. The second section, composed principally of Hessians, took the northerly route, passing through another portion of the village. With this section was Mme. Reidsel, wife of the Hessian general of that name. Sketches from her diary are introduced, giving a description of Palmer as she saw it at that time. This section, encamped on the Warren road, where the old Brainerd farm is now located

After some discussion, a committee of five was appointed to look up the matter of locating the burial places of old soldiers who fought in the Colonial wars, the war of the Revolution, and 1812, and to take some action toward permanent markers being placed on their graves.

Tuesday being the 50th anniversary of the coming to town of Dr Orrin P Allen, he was asked to give the society some reminiscences of the past 50 years. The doctor spoke of Palmer as he found it 50 years ago, the condition of its streets, saying that there was but one sidewalk in town at that time, running from Main street to the Congregational church, and that this had been built by the women. At that time there was no building west of Pleasant street, Dewey Hill was thickly wooded and the slopes of Mt. Bunion across the river were also covered with a heavy growth of timber. He alluded to the gradual building up of the town and the changes and improvements that have taken place during the past five decades.

Programs for the year's work were distributed at this meeting, they being arranged as follows:

Nov. 2. Cliff Dwellers of Mesa Verda, National Park.

FIFTEENTH ANNIVERSARY.

Springfield Pomona Grange Celebrates The Occasion in Wilbraham.

Springfield Pomona Grange celebrated its 15th anniversary in Foskit Memorial hall, Wilbraham, Wednesday, with an all-day session. Nine granges were represented, and visitors were present from five other granges. The morning session opened at 10 30, and among those present were Past Master of Berkshire Grange and State Deputy H. M. Jenks of Adams and State Lecturer Charles M. Gardner of Westfield. Reponses were given at the morning session by Past Masters C. B. Bennett of Ludlow, C C. Keep of Monson, F. A. Forward of South Hadley, Lecturers Mrs. E E Chapman of Ludlow, Mrs J G. Taylor of Granby, C. B Bennett of Ludlow and Mrs C C. Keep of Monson.

The afternoon session was open to the public, and there were 14 granges represented at this session The following program was carried out: Music by Wilbraham grange; welcome, Mrs. F W. Green; response, F. M. Graves, master of Springfield Pomona grange; music, Pomona grange quartet; reading, "The Deacon's day," Mrs. Charles Hitchcock of Wilbraham; music by members of the Springfield grange; historical address of Pomona grange by Mrs. E E Chapman of Ludlow; piano duet, Miss Ruth P. Green and Mrs Edward Crossett of Wilbraham; paper, "Woman's work, past and future," Mrs. C. L. Hayward of Agawam; reading, "The Volunteer Organist," Miss Ruth P. Green; address, "The significance of anniversary days," State Lecturer Charles M. Gardner of Westfield

Mrs. E. E. Chapman gave a talk and spoke of the forming of the District Grange March 3, 1888, at the old Evangelical Hall on State street, Springfield The first master was S J. Cook of Suffield, Ct. November 14, 1894, at Wilbraham, the Springfield Pomona Grange was formed. She spoke of the death of many prominent members, and gave a sketch of some of the most interesting meetings held each year, business transacted and programs given at those meetings. Mrs. C L Haywood of Agawam read an interesting paper. She touched on woman's work and progress in education, opportunities for girls in early colonial days, and that it was a century and a half before they had any advantages. Opportunities for education opened to her in the 19th century. Education advantages made rapid strides during that century. Colleges opened to and for women during that century and opportunities opened for entering the learned professions. She also spoke of the great and growing work in different fields, reaching out to the ends of the earth. State Lecturer Charles M. Gardner of Westfield spoke of the value of anniversary days. He spoke first of their value of individual work; second, power in co-operation of a group of people; third, expression of good luck. The program was in charge of Lecturer Mrs. George Woods of East Longmeadow.

HONOR FOR WARE MAN.

Maurice Fitzgerald Gets Nomination For Sheriff of Hampshire County.

At the Hampshire Democratic County convention held in Northampton Tuesday, Maurice Fitzgerald of Ware received the nomination for sheriff. His name was presented by John J. Kidgell of Ware, who spoke of Mr. Fitzgerald as an officer fearless, upright and efficient in the duties of the offices of deputy sheriff and chief of police of Ware, stating that his life had been imperiled three times in the performance of duty. The nomination was earnestly seconded by T. J. Collins of Northampton, and was made unanimous by acclamation Mr. Fitzgerald is widely known and universally liked, and has the best wishes of an unlimited circle of friends.

Brimfield House Destroyed by Fire.

William M. Sperry's house, near the Little Alum pond, in the east part of Brimfield, was entirely destroyed by fire about 10 30 last Saturday night. The family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Sperry and Miss Wood, had a narrow escape, and all the contents of the house were burned. The family retired about 9 o'clock, leaving everything as usual. About 10.30 Mrs. Sperry was awakened by the smoke and, rousing her husband and Miss Wood, rushed toward the back of the house, from whence the smoke seemed to come. They were nearly suffocated while attempting to save some of the household goods, both of the women having their hair singed. The origin of the fire is unknown. Mr. Sperry moved to Brimfield about a year ago, purchasing what was known as the Harvey D Hall place. The family has the deep sympathy of the townspeople in their loss, which included all their wearing apparel and furniture, as well as carpenter's tools belonging to Mr. Sperry. Word of the disaster was given in church, where Mr. and Mrs. Sperry and Miss Wood are regular attendants, and a purse of money was collected at noon in the church and village and carried at once to the unfortunate people. There was an insurance of a few hundred dollars on the house, which Mr. Sperry had repaired since moving there. The barn, which was not connected with the house, was not burned, and Mr Sperry may rebuild. The family are now staying at the home of Mrs. Sperry's sister, Mrs. Palmer, in the vicinity.

TWO RUNAWAY ACCIDENTS

Furnish Plenty of Excitement, But No Serious Results.

There were two rnnaway accidents on Main street within the past week, hnt fortnnately neither resnlted seriously, althongh both caused considerable excitement for a time.

Satnrday morning a borse owned by William H. Laird, whicb had been left standing on Central street, while the owner was delivering vegetables, snddenly became frightened and started to rnn to Main street. At tbe foot of Central street tbere was a pile of gravel about four feet high which the street railway workmen had thrown there. The horse jumped this pile and landed, with the wagon, in the trench. The load of vegetables was scattered in all directions, hnt aside from this and the breaking of the hold-back, no fnrther damage was done. The gang of men at work in the ditch rnshed to every side and all escaped nnhnrt. The horse was stopped near Fillmore's grain store.

The second rnnaway took place Monday afternoon, when J. M. Allen and F. J. Hamilton were driving from Foundry street to Main street. The horse became frightened and snddenly sprang forward, breaking the girth, the shafts going over the horse's head and the carriage striking a tool box by the side of the road near the post office. Both men were thrown ont. Mr. Allen clnng to the reins and was dragged for some yards before the horse broke away. Mr. Hamilton was thrown over the dasher and his knees were slightly injured. The horse ran np Thorndike street and into Pleasant, where it was stopped. The bnggy was badly smashed.

To Form Boys' Club.

WARE.

Arrested on Larceny Charge.

W. Edward Smith was arrested in Springfield Wednesday evening and taken to Palmer by Depnty Sheriff Bills of that place, who tnrned him over to Officer Buckley, who in turn bronght him to Ware. The complaint was sworn ont by Christopher Boyle, who stated that $100 belonging to James Ovens had been intrnsted to him and obtained by Smith throngh false pretenses. Boyle, who is one of the proprietors of a saloon on West street, left the money in bis oash register, and says that he left and a clerk gave it to Smith in his absence npon representation by Smith that the money belonged to him Smith has been in the empioye of the Otis company for several years, hnt severed his connection with that company Satnrday, and has been spending most of the time since in Boyle's. At the time Ovens left the money with Boyle, it was nnderstood that the $100 was to be deposited in part payments for a piece of land which Smith stated he wonld sell to Ovens nnder certain conditions. He appeared in the district conrt yesterday morning and entered a plea of nolo contenders to the charge of larceny There was no evidence snbmitted, and the defendant expressed himself as willing to abide by the finding of the conrt. Judge Davis ordered the case continued until April 7, 1910, and placed Smith on probation for the next six months nntil then. W. S. Ives of Springfield recognized as surety for the appearance of Smith on April 7 in the snm of $200, and the prompt restitution of the $100 taken on Wednesday was promised, as well as the payment of all costs. Smith will return to his former place in the Otis company mills and remain in Ware.

Monson News.

Brings Actions of Tort.

Irving Clark of Monson has brought an action of tort against the Flynt Granite Co., and actions against 12 men in the employ of that company, charging them of conspiring illegally to oust him from his position as foreman of one of the yards of that company. Each of the suits are for $5000, and attachments for these sums have been filed in the registry of deeds in Springfield by Clark's attorney, Judge T. W. Kenefick of Palmer. The writs are returnable in the superior court in Springfield the first Monday in November. The 12 men against whom the cases are brought are Thomas Purcell, Carlo Aliengena, William F. Albieu, Timothy J. Sullivan, Greeley W. Clay, Joseph Leonard, Michael F. Dalton, Cornelius D. Sullivan, James Cahill, Edward Billings, Paul La Scalla and Matthew Marceri.

JOHNSON'S BOOKSTORE

The Widely-Known Springfield Store Opens Its Fine New Building.

The new bookstore, the home of Johnson's Bookstore in Springfield, was given a formal opening Wednesday evening and several thousand people enjoyed the occasion. Stevens band played and the building was a brilliant and animated scene. It is a pleasure to tell about so original and interesting an enterprise, and we print this story, with a picture of the new building, because it and the business are of more than usual interest.

The bookstore building, a building of stores, is the culmination of over 15 years of the kind of growth that comes with persistent, intelligent application. Mr. Johnson spent his boyhood days on a farm in the old town of Hadley, and began his business life in Northampton, where he spent a few years in Bridgman's "College Bookstore." Then in Springfield, he gave a few years to James D. Gill as a clerk, and after that branched out for himself. His store was small, but the vigor was there, and this fine business home tells how strongly the idea has grown and how much the people have appreciated it.

The original and handsome front of the new building was designed by Mr. E J. Parlett of the firm of Kirkham & Parlett, and is done in rich, low-toned, red fire brick, with cream terra cotta trimmings. It tells its own story of generous lines, floods of daylight and sunshine, and good, modern decoration. What the building is outside, that it is inside, wide, high, hospitable and cheerful. The vestibule of marble and mosaic, with its convenient elevator, is a "glad hand." It welcomes you, you feel it, and are pleased. The corridors are wide, very wide, and it is a wise use of space, for the various stores on the second, third and fourth floors open with generous show windows and broad doorways in these aisles, and display goods as though they were Main street itself. You really feel that you are in a thoroughfare of fine stores.

The Johnson store is charming, uplifting and restful, a joy from end to end. It occupies three floors. The second floor carries the pictures, artists' materials, art brass goods, draftsmen's supplies, a department of Catholic goods, casts and statuary. It is finely lighted, and a place where you linger for the very love of it.

Broad handsome stairs lead to the mezzanine floor in the rear and thence to the main store. The bookkeepers, stenographers, with Mr. Johnson's private office, are located here, and you get a fine view of the street floor below where the books stretch away on endless shelves, counters and tables, with a companionable charm which is irresistible. Stationery, office fixtures and supplies, blank books, post cards, fountain pens, cameras and all the other kindred departments, have ample room.

There are three ways of getting to the big basement; broad stairs at the rear, an easy flight in the center of the store and elevator. If you don't take your children or some other children to the basement you miss the time of your life There are dozens of tables of children's books, toys and novelties. The new circulating library which has come into immediate favor is here, and altogether, with its games of all kinds for adults, favors, crepe paper novelties and decorations, this is a rare place.

The equipment of the store for handling its business is complete. The passenger elevator reaches all floors, there is a Lamson cash carrier of over 40 stations, and a private telephone system with over a dozen stations, its own switchboard and operator A sidewalk freight elevator reaches the stock and shipping rooms in the basement, and a stock lift runs from the basement to the floors above. Adding and billing machines and other modern devices assist the bookkeepers in their work. An abundance of daylight enters from the front, rear and north sides, and through five large skylights. The whole store shows experience and wise planning It meets your needs on many sides and you never fail to find it freshly attractive and useful It is a large and valuable addition to the life of New England.

A little girl was sent by her mother to the grocery store with a jug for a quart of vinegar, says Mother's Magazine. "But, mamma," said the little one, "I can't say the word." "But you must try," said the mother, "for I must have vinegar, and there is no one else to send." So the little girl went with the jug, and as she reached the counter of the store, she pulled the cork out of the jug with a pop, swung the jug on the counter with a thud, and said to the astonished clerk: "There! Smell of that and give me a quart!"

T. F. Harrington & Co. of Springfield, in their advertisement in another column, call the attention of the people of Palmer and vicinity to their credit system. They announce that their weekly or monthly payment system is open to all. They have a fine stock of men's, women's and children's clothes.

Plain Facts About a Remarkable Offering of Women's Tailored Suits at $16.50

Number—about 150 suits. Styles—all made for this season by a maker who knows what's what. Quality—varying, but all much better than the price usually brings and many that usually cost as much or more at wholesale. For instance:

There are a round dozen stunning Broadcloth Suits, in several colors. Wholesale price of these suits is $16.50.

There are twelve stylishly plain, 42-inch Coat Suits of shadow striped worsted, that sell regularly at wholesale at to-morrow's retail price, $16.50.

There are twenty Long Coat Suits of serviceable cheviot, in plain colors, lined with guaranteed satin. Maker's price on these was $12.50

There are perhaps fifty plain tailored Suits of smart Mannish Mixtures, with plaited skirts. Wholesale prices on these were $15 to $18. Among them are several suits with the extra fashionable long roll revers, satin faced.

And there are many more Suits which we cannot describe here—all of this moment's style, and all well tailored and well lined. There should be two claimants for every one of these Women's Suits at $16.50.

The 98c Waist Tables Are Always in the Busy Class

Just what is your present Waist need? Something plain! Here are simple tailored Waists of white madras with neat black figures made with Gibson plaits—or plain white with tailored plaits or a little embroidering on the front. Or black, if you prefer it, of percale with plaited front and white starched collar.

Something more dressy? Look at these three styles in white lawn, with lace and embroidery—here just long enough to get into this news note and gone before the week's end. All at 98c each.

"Ninety-Three"

The Story of a Famous Name and How It Originated.

The foremost dermatologist in France, Dr. Sabourand of Paris, and Professor Unna, Hamburg, Germany, discovered that a microbe caused baldness. To prove their theory, Dr. Sabourand infected a guinea pig with some of these microbes and in a comparatively short time the animal was denuded of every hair that was on its body.

Some eminent histologists and chemists were employed by the United Drug Co., Boston, Mass., to find the means of destroying these microbes and a remedy that would create a new growth of hair where the hair roots had not been entirely destroyed.

After months of study, experimenting and research work, they discovered what they claimed would do what was demanded. To unquestionably prove their theory, 100 leading druggists, located in as many different cities, were requested to each furnish the name of a responsible person suffering from falling hair and baldness. Each of these 100 persons was furnished three bottles of the preparation with a request to give it a thorough trial and report results.

Five of these people failed to report. Two declared they had been bald for years; that their hair follicles had long been closed, and their scalps were smooth and glossy.

Ninety-three of the 100 sent in enthusiastic reports, stated that they were delighted with the hair restoring qualities of the preparation, and expressed sincere thanks for the wonderful benefits brought about by its use. In commemoration of this, the new preparation was named Rexall "93" Hair Tonic.

We sell this remedy with the distinct understanding that it is free of cost to the user in every case where it does not completely remove dandruff, stimulate the hair follicles, revitalize the hair roots, stop the hair from falling out, grow new hair and make the scalp free from irritation.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic comes in two sizes; prices, 50 cents and $1. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Palmer only at our store—The Rexall Store. Lynde & Gould, Palmer.

BRIMFIELD.

Mrs. Grace Tarbell Chase of Brookline, a former resident of Brimfield, was in town a part of the week.

Mrs. Mary Newton entertained over Sunday her three sons, Cheney F. of Mittineague, Will of Springfield and John of Northampton, and daughter, Miss Julia of Chicopee Falls.

Of Wonderful Value, and Free.

Tired bodies, pale and sunken cheeks, haggard eyes, sleepless nights and weak nerves, are ruining our lives and killing our people. No wonder these poor sufferers bless Dr. Greene for his great free offer. He is the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, and the discoverer of that wonderful medicine, Dr. Green's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. He has established a system of letter correspondence at his office, 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., by which all can write him about their complaints, will receive a reply free of charge, giving a complete description of their case and telling just what ails them. He gives most careful attention to every letter, tells just what to do to be cured. And all this costs nothing. No journey to the city, no doctor's fee, the best medical advice and consultation in the world, and nothing to pay. The doctor makes a specialty of treating patients through letter correspondence, and it is successful. Write him at once.

Mrs. Geo H. Taylor, living at 18 Church St., Thorndike, Palmer, Mass., says: "In the fall of 1898 I used Doan's Kidney Pills and was so greatly benefited that I gave a statement for publication in favor of this remedy. I have no reason to change my opinion but on the contrary have even a higher regard for this preparation, as I have learned of several others who have been benefited by its use. When I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills I was in a miserable condition. It was impossible for me to turn in bed without grasping something to assist me, and during the day I was never free from a dull aching through my loins. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me from the very first and I continued using them until they disposed of all signs of kidney trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Aword about Trusses

In our twenty-five years' experience in the treatment of rupture, it is surprising how many cases we have seen that either the truss has been improperly fitted, or else the wrong kind of a truss used. An improperly fitted truss is not only uncomfortable, but absolutely a source of danger.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

HER PHYSICIAN ADVISED

Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Columbus, Ohio.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during change of life. My doctor told me it was good, and since taking it I feel so much better that I can do all my work again. I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fine remedy for all woman's troubles, and I never forget to tell my friends what it has done for me."—Mrs. E. HANSON, 304 East Long St., Columbus, Ohio.

Another Woman Helped.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health and strength, and proved worth mountains of gold to me. For the sake of other suffering women I am willing you should publish my letter."—Mrs. CHARLES BARCLAY, R. F. D., Graniteville, Vt.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Oct. 6, 1909.

Let no voter imagine, from this time on, that this is going to be a dull or quiet campaign. Each party is fully aroused At the Republican state headquarters it is said to-day, with serious emphasis, that not a single thing will be left undone to make the campaign thorough and successful. In Boston careful attention is being paid to naturalization and registration and Herman Hormel, the chairman of the Republican city committee, is guaranteed to be as competent a politician for city work as any who was ever in the service of the party. In every city in the state similar activity has begun. A circular letter has been sent to every Republican town committee stirring them up to see that these necessary preliminaries of the campaign are not neglected, and the party will do everything in its power to rise equal to the occasion. All idea of inactivity was a midsummer pipe-dream.

In way of speakers, the entire state will be covered thoroughly. Arrangements are being completed as fast as possible. It was believed at first that Senator Lodge, on account of the recent death of his son, which was a severe blow to him, would remain at home and leave the campaign to others. But it is said to-day at the Republican headquarters that he will most certainly be a factor in the campaign. It is now expected that he will speak and do what he can to keep the party in line. Gov. Draper is in great demand for the stump So is Lieut.-Gov. Frothingham and ex-Gov. Bates. The ex-governor has recently lost his father and feels somewhat lowered in spirits for that reason, though he did not show it at the Republican state convention. He would prefer not to go upon the stump to any large extent, but he is wanted very much. No speakers outside of the state are expected, but home talent will be drafted in large numbers, according to the present plan.

The Swedes are active and a Swedish rally will be held in Gardner next Tuesday, October 12, under the auspices of the Swedish Republican club, whose headquarters with secretary, are in Worcester and whose president is Carl H. Johnson, with an office in the Tremont building, Boston. He will preside at the Gardner meeting and he one of the principal speakers. Fitchburg Republicans have sent in a request to the state committee for speakers for two rallies, and that shows unusual interest there. Worcester Republicans have not put in their application yet, Palmer was surprisingly early, for its committee sent to the party headquarters a request for speakers for a rally to be held as soon as possible, this week, if the speakers could be sent. But they have not had a date made for them yet. Springfield is hung up with a hall to be had only on one date. Chicopee, Holyoke, Clinton, Whitinsville and Southboro are among the places which have been heard from and the signs show interest in the towns as well as in the cities. This condition is really surprising and the committee is getting sharply at work.

This Republican activity is doubtless provoked by the superior Democratic energy. Business drives the committee and the committee drives its business. Boston is being taken care of with energy. Five or six men have already been sent through the state to spur up the city and town committees to get every possible Democratic voter upon the list. The time for registration in Boston is one week from to-day In the towns it is October 23. This work presses more than that of putting out literature, so the documentary feature of the campaign will not be attended to till after naturalization and registration are put into competent hands. Daniel T. O'Connell, brother of the Congressman, has been put in charge of the speaking assignments. Next week Messrs. Vahey and Foss, with other party leaders, will make a tour of Western Massachusetts, the manner and dates to be determined later. It is expected that this will be followed by another wind-up visit toward the end of the campaign.

But the Republicans are even more forehanded, for they long ago engaged Tremont Temple for the Saturday evening before the election. Faneuil hall has been secured for the usual noonday rally of marketmen just before the election, and they will have a whirlwind automobile tour of Boston during the week before election following the recent example of strenuous service. But Vahey, who has been through the racket, says that it does not pay, that one man begins to help him on with his overcoat almost as soon as some other man has got it off for him to speak, and that it is a rush and a roar which is not half as satisfactory as it is to have time long enough to really say something.

Already it is evident that the Republicans will insist that this is a state campaign and that national issues are not concerned. They will put state business to the front and will try to focus attention upon them. On the other hand, while the Democrats believe that they have in our system of commissions a sufficient basis of criticism of the state administration, yet they realize that they have a lot of party capital in the tariff and they will not hesitate to make the most of it. The party, under Chairman Macleod, is doing finely this fall and if the Boston Democrats are loyal to their cause, they will do much to redeem the party from the stigma of the Springfield convention. There will be a loss of the British American vote by the Republicans to a material extent, according to present indications, and there are reports that many Democrats will not vote for Foss for second place on the ticket. In spite of Vahey's candidacy, which might seem likely to rally only one sort of people around him, the fact is that distinctions of race and religion were never less heard of than they are this year, as if the people had come to recognize that these are small affairs in considering the good of the public.

Gov. Draper's loss by the burning of his house commands general sympathy, as far as has been observed. Among all classes and critics, not a man has been noticed who has other than sympathy for the Governor in his irreparable loss, for though he is rich and there was heavy insurance, yet insurance and money cannot cover some of the losses which he suffers.

Next Saturday the Republican Editorial Association will have its annual public gathering at the American House, and the governor will be the principal speaker. This organization counts for something in the politics of the state, but it includes almost none of the hardworking editors of city papers. It is rather the weekly press which is represented and which rehearses the glories of the grand old party just at this critical juncture. Senator Lodge has been a frequent speaker at these occasions, but it is not expected that he will address them this year.

The Twentieth Century Club has begun its winter season of service to the public, and there is no other organization which occupies its place or renders such public service as it does. Its motto of "a finer public spirit and a better public order" is the watchword of its meetings and it does more to keep live subjects at the front of popular attention than any other organization in the city It is so free in its methods and so young in its traditions that it is not hampered and it is almost a free lance to go in and stir up reforms wherever it pleases To its unbounded credit, its speakers have almost uniformly been those who are on the side of the under dog in the great struggle for social, political and industrial rights and for a better social order. It has been in sympathy with the oppressed people of India, with the Filipinos, with child labor, with the dwellers in city slums and with business men under the heel of the great railroads Last Saturday, it had a graphic story about the awakening in India, Turkey, China and Japan from the lips of Rev. Sherwood Eddy, who has been for 13 years doing Y M C A work in India Edward H. Clement of the Boston Transcript, who is trying to start a new weekly paper to be called The Boston Common, told of the large quantity of first-class news which gets very scant attention from the daily press, but is highly important for the general information of the public He believes that there is a broad field and he drew a fascinating picture of the field and its possibilities. He has sufficient help assured. Now the one essential is sufficient money to start the paper.

Without advertising any particular Boston store, it is to be observed that there is a marked tendency in the city to increase the great establishments which do many kinds of business under one roof. Next week one of the well known houses will make an important change and it is noticed that it is preparing to transact additional kinds of business to what it has had in the past. In the meantime, another of the great houses has added immensely this season to its floor capacity and the establishment, when it is open, will be really enormous. Our streets, narrow and crooked, are severely tried by the additional servitude which is put upon them and it is high time for Boston to expand sidewise, rather than up to the sky and into the bowels of the earth. Yet our builders go skyward and deeper, as if there were not land enough outside, and our subways and tunnels provide for further congestion. So Boston grows. But we must spread more at any rate. LANDON.

WARREN.

C. B. Blair has returned from a visit with Rev. and Mrs. Rufus Dix in Amesbury.

Miss Dorothy DeLand has returned to Wellesley College to resume her studies.

Lorenzo J. Fisher, steward at Camp Rio, is spending a part of the week in Springfield.

Royal G. McIntire has sold the Dickson farm on the Brimfield road to Louis Vimond of Butler, Pa.

Miss Mary S. Hitchcock is spending a few weeks in Sandwich, N. H., as the guest of Mrs George M. Wood.

Mrs. Charles P. Morse has been spending the week in Boston as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Tourtelott.

Mrs. Henriette Drake of Somerville and Mrs. D. L Farrel Holyoke were guests of Mrs. A. K. Sibley of Main street Wednesday.

Frank F. Phinney and John W. Phinney are spending the week at the camp of the Grasse River Outing Club at Childwold, N. Y.

Mr and Mrs. H. P. Johnson and daughter Rachel have returned from a month's visit with his sister, Mrs. C. W. Lincoln at Broken Bow, N. B.

Joseph Massey of West Warren and Miss Eva Normandin were married in North Brookfield Monday morning by Rev. H. J. Wrenn. They will live in West Warren.

Blanche F. Piette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Piette of West Main street, is ill with laryngeal diphtheria. The case has been reported to the board of health.

The first fall meeting of the Men's League was held in the Congregational church Monday evening, when F. H Gillett of Springfield spoke on "Some Men I Have Known in Congress."

The annual meeting of the Woman's Board was held at the Congregational parsonage yesterday afternoon. Mrs Mary Jennings read a paper on "Women and Children of Turkey," and Mrs O W. Phelps one on "The Hospital and Schoolhouse in Turkey."

Among the entries in the superior court this week were the following actions of contract: E. S. Stacy of Springfield against Julia M. Hitchcock of Warren, $5700, alleged to be due on notes; E. S Stacy of Springfield against D. G. Hitchcock of Warren, $4600, alleged to be due on notes.

$3.75 Mother's Oats Fireless Cooker and a complete assortment of MOTHER'S CEREALS - all for $2.84

The Mother's Oats Fireless Cooker actually cooks without fuel. It solves the servant problem, the fuel problem and the delayed dinner problem. It saves 80% of your present coal or gas bills, and 90% of your present kitchen worries. When you own a Mother's Oats Fireless Cooker, you simply place your oatmeal (or anything else that you want to prepare) on the stove, bring it to a boiling point, remove, place in Fireless Cooker, put the pad in position, tug the draw-string, and go to bed. While you're sleeping, the food will keep cooking itself. Nothing can boil over or burn or spoil. During the day you can start soup or joints or vegetables, place them in the Cooker, visit your neighbor, go to the matinee, or shop, without any thought of a hot, stuffy kitchen range.

Now, there is only one way that you can get a Mother's Oats Fireless Cooker, unless you want to go to a store and pay $3.75 for it, and that is by being a user of Mother's Cereals, the best cereals, prepared in the largest mills, and sold everywhere by the best dealers in every town. In every package we place a coupon, and when you have 125 coupons we'll send you the $3.75 Fireless Cooker for nothing. If you want a Fireless Cooker in a hurry, you can either buy ten packages of MOTHER'S OATS or any other Mother's Cereals, and get the Cooker immediately by paying $1.15 in cash or upon the following basis:

50 coupons and $.75 cash
35 coupons and .90 cash
25 coupons and 1.00 cash
15 coupons and 1.10 cash
10 coupons and 1.15 cash

But the best way of all is to go to your grocer ask him to supply you with which contains a complete assortment of different delicious cereals for every palate and for every meal. Not only is it an advantage to buy your staple cereals in sufficient quantity at attractive prices (just as it's cheaper to buy flour by the barrel or butter by the crock) but in every Mother's Kit there is in addition to the saving of quite a considerable sum of money, a special Fireless Cooker Certificate, equal to eighteen coupons, which, when added to the coupons from the packages in the kit, enables you to secure a Cooker by merely adding 89 cents. A Mother's Kit consists of eighteen assorted packages of Mothers Cereals, packed in sanitary sealed packages, in which they are guaranteed to keep in perfect condition indefinitely.

8 packages of Mother's Oats, standard size
2 packages of Mother's Yellow Corn Meal
1 package of Mother's White Corn Meal
1 package of Mother's Wheat Hearts
1 package of Mother's Corn Flakes (Toasted)
1 package of Mother's Old-Fashioned Steel Cut Oatmeal
2 packages of Mother's Granulated Hominy
2 packages of Mother's Coarse Pearl Hominy

This Kit can be purchased at your grocer's by simply paying $1.95 (a little more at distant points). The grocer himself will either redeem your coupons and deliver the $3.75 Fireless Cooker, or, if you so desire, send the coupons and 89c directly to us and we will ship the cooker to you, express collect.

NOTICE TO VOTERS.
REGISTRATION.

Office of the Board of Registrars of Voters.
Palmer, Mass., Oct. 13, 1909.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Registrars of Voters will be in session at Holden's Old Store, Bondsville, Tuesday evening, Oct. 19, from 6.30 to 7.30 p. m.; at Ruggles' Hall, Three Rivers, Wednesday evening, Oct. 20, from 6 to 7 p. m.; at Temperance Hall, Thorndike, Wednesday evening, Oct. 20, from 7.15 to 8.15 p. m.; and at Selectmen's Room, Library Building, Depot Village, Saturday, Oct. 23, from 12 m. to 10 p. m., for the purpose of receiving evidence of the qualification of persons claiming a right to vote at the election to be held on Tuesday, November 2, 1909, and of correcting the list of voters.

See that your name is on the Voting List of your town; if not there, call at the office of the Board of Registrars on the days above mentioned, and be registered, or you cannot vote. Bring with you a certificate from the assessors or a tax bill or a notice from the collector of taxes showing that you have been assessed a poll tax as a resident of the Town of Palmer.

All persons whose names are stricken from the voters' lists for any lawful reason, will, before they can again have their names placed upon said lists, be required to register their names at the time hereinbefore stated in like manner as new voters.

Naturalized Citizens presenting themselves for registration must bring their naturalization papers with them.

If a qualified voter of this town whose name was on the voters' list last year, and who has been assessed for the current year, finds after the close of registration that his name is not placed on the voters' list of the current year, by reason of having been omitted by clerical error or mistake, he may, upon personal application, have his name placed upon the voting list, or, if application be made on the day of election, he may have a certificate to vote.

No name can be added to the voters' list (except to correct omissions made by clerical error or mistake) after ten (10) o'clock of the evening of Saturday, October 23, 1909, at which time registration closes.

The Antalgica

Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Coughs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do you good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle by The Quimby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

FORESTERS CELEBRATE.

Ninth Anniversary of Organization Observed.

BANQUET AT HOTEL BURNS LAST EVE

Court Palmer Members and Invited Guests, With Grand Officers, Have Fine Time.

Court Palmer, No. 180, Foresters of America, celebrated the ninth anniversary of its organization with a banquet at the Hotel Burns last evening. Invited guests and grand officers of the state organization were present, and about 60 were gathered about the tables. Landlord Burns served the following menu:

Soup

Consommé	Duchess
Olives	Gherkins
Rolled Bluefish	Saratoga Chips
Sliced Tomatoes	Horse Shoe Rolls
Vermont Stuffed Turkey
Cranberry Sauce	Roman Punch
Mashed Potatoes	Boiled Potatoes
Squash	Peas
Waldorf Salad	American Cheese
Assorted Cake	Crackers
Tea	Coffee Milk
Frozen Pudding

After the viands had been given due attention J. E Learned, chief ranger of the court, called the assemblage to order and gave a brief history of Court Palmer. He than introduced Past Chief Ranger John P. O'Connor as toastmaster The first speaker was Grand Chief Ranger John R. Feeley of Pittsfield, who spoke on the order as a benevolent organization and gave figures as to the death benefits paid in the past year from the Grand Court funeral fund and the funeral fund of the subordinate courts, the total reaching something over $40,000, this sum being raised by the $7 a year dues from each member of the order.

He was followed by Judge John R. Slattery of Westboro, Supreme Recording Secretary, who spoke on the order in general and particularly on the necessity of members attending meetings regularly in order to make the whole order a success He also stated that in the last supreme convention Massachusetts got her full share of the supreme officers.

Owing to the fact that the high officers had to take an early train to reach their homes the speechmaking was necessarily short, and the party then adjourned to the parlor, where there was music and songs until a late hour.

Court Palmer is in a very prosperous condition, with a large membership and percentage of attendance at the meetings. The annual ball of the court, which is one of the social features of the year, will be held on the evening of October 29.

The court was instituted October 15, 1900, with 24 charter members and John P. O'Connor as chief ranger. At the time of its organization it was the general prophecy that the life of the court would be short, and it was no small task to manage the affairs of a society of the nature of the Foresters at the start, but through the faithful work of Chief Ranger O'Connor and his fellow officers the court was soon put on a sound running basis, and to day holds a place second to no organization in town, both financially and socially. Other chief rangers of the court have been John Maloney, J. A. Hoey, William F. Gaffney, James J Smith, P. M. Shearer Jr., J. J. Donahne, P. J. Rollett and Walter Burford. John E Learned is the present chief ranger. During Mr. Burford's term Quaboag Circle, Companions of the Forest, was instituted.

During the nine years of existence the court has lost five members by death, and two members of the court have lost their wives, making $600 which the court has paid in death benefits. Since its institution the court has taken in about $6500 and of this payments have been made as follows: Sick benefits, including doctor and medicine, $2500; all other expenses, benevolence, rent, heat, lights, janitor, salaries of officers, etc., $2100; death benefits, $600, leaving a balance on hand at the present time of about $1300 The attendance at the meetings is increasing, as is also the interest in the work of the order, and the court has every prospect of a bright future.

BRIMFIELD.

Mrs. John L. Bacon has bought the place recently owned by Mrs. Rufus White and formerly the residence of Silas Parker

Edward S Butterfield of New York has been spending several days at the Sherman home attending to his fruit farming. His partner in the enterprise, Theodore L Cuyler Jr., was also in town a part of last week.

Charles H. White of the Massachusetts Agricultural College gave an interesting talk before the pulpits of the Hitchcock Free Academy Wednesday afternoon concerning the advantages of higher education and the importance of industrial education together with the opportunities that are being offered by the college at Amherst In the evening Mr. White gave an illustrated lecture, descriptive of the college and its work. There was a good attendance and much interest was taken in the subject and the lecture. There was an interesting exhibition indicative of local enterprise arranged by Miss Tarbell, the librarian, at the Academy during the day and at the town hall in the evening. This consisted of 31 varieties of grapes raised by Oscar Stanton on his fruit farm on Haynes Hill. Mr. Stanton is a specialist in the growing of small fruits in addition to his other farming and is becoming an expert in this branch both through thorough study and experiment. Many of his townspeople have not been before aware of what Mr. Stanton is accomplishing.

The adjourned annual meeting of the Brimfield Improvement society was held in the selectmen's room Monday evening. These officers were elected: President, Rev. Samuel Eaton; vice president, Edward B. Brown; treasurer, Fred Bissell; secretary, Miss Anna Tarbell; auditor, Charles S. Tarbell; additional members of executive committee, John H. Noyes and Miss Fannie E. Warren; literary committee, George F. Kenney, Mrs. J H. Noyes, Miss Rebecca M. Lincoln, Miss Anna Tarbell, Rev. Samuel Eaton, Mrs. Martha Streeter, Edward B. Brown; social committee, John H. Noyes, Miss Margaret Dunsmore, Miss Jennie M. Sumner, Mrs. Albert Brown, Mrs. Bertie Garmes, Miss Catherine Gould, Fred Bissell; park committee, William Daniels, Charles S Tarbell, Mrs. Albert Brown, Miss Tarbell, Fred Bissell, Rev. Samuel Eaton; shade trees committee, G. M. Hitchcock, William Daniels, Dr. R. V. Sawin, J. H. Noyes; sidewalks committee, C. S Tarbell, Rev. Samuel Eaton, Dr. R V. Sawin, J. H. Noyes, Miss Tarbell, Miss Dunsmore. The treasurer's report shows a balance in the treasury against a deficit of last year owing to the support of street lighting by the town instead of by the improvement society.

Biggest and Best Fair Ever Held.

ALL ATTENDANCE RECORDS BROKEN.

Exhibits in All Departments Best in History of Society. Big Crowds From All Directions, And Only Words of Praise From All.

When the executive committee of the Palmer Fair started out to make the fair of 1909 the "Biggest and best ever" it had in mind just what those four words call for in the fair line so far as the Palmer Fair is concerned. That they succeeded—almost beyond their own most sanguine expectations—is the verdict of everyone who attended last Friday or Saturday—or both days, for there were many who were there both days It was the "Biggest ever" in point of exhibits and excellence of quality; it was the "Best ever" in point of entertainment for the visitors—entertainment of high quality and something to interest all, from the youngest to the oldest; and it was the "Biggest ever" in point of attendance, which is of course gratifying to the fair officials While the exact figures are not yet available it is known that the paid admissions were over 3000 the first day and over 7200 the second day. Nearly 400 of the 512 reserved seats on the grandstand were sold the first day and every one the second day; fully as many more could have been sold if they had been available; Saturday the bleachers were practically filled—they hold about 1200—and on Friday they were more than half full. These all mean a gratifying increase in the receipts, all of which will be needed, for a large amount of money has been expended in making the grounds safe and convenient for visitors.

Where did they all come from? Everywhere—almost. Take Worcester on the east, Westfield on the west, Willimantic on the south and Millers Falls and Winchendon on the north, and they came from all points and places between. The mills at South Willington and Stafford closed Saturday to allow the crowd to come and see "Asa Wilkes" race; the Heimann & Lichten hat shop in Monson did the same; the Fiskdale mills closed; the North Wilbraham mills closed; and the Ames works in Chicopee Falls shut down because so many of the employes wished to attend the Palmer Fair. Crowds came from Springfield, by train, trolley and auto, and crowds came from every point of the compass. The fame of the Palmer Fair has gone far and wide, and the quality of the show this year was such that it is now more widely and favorably known than ever before. A Worcester man who has attended all the fairs within reach of that city this year remarked to a Palmer friend that the Palmer Fair "has got them all stopped" And that seems to be the report from all who attended.

The society's motto, "Something doing every minute," was fully lived up to, and from the time of opening in the morning until the last heat of the last race in the evening there was a continuous performance. But with it all everything was clean and decent. On the midway, where there is opportunity to rent ground for all kinds of games and shows, there was nothing to which objection could be taken A few of the games, which were started contrary to the specifications on the permits given, were closed by state officers, but not one which was run in accord with the conditions written on the permit issued by the society's officers was interfered with. Particular care has been taken in recent years to keep the midway clean, and this has had its effect in an increased attendance of parents and children the first day. For several years the society has admitted free the first day all school children below the high school grade, distributing tickets for their use. Many of the schools in the surrounding towns close for that day, and last year there were 1774 children's tickets in the boxes; this year schools closed which have never done so before and the record was 2518 children, all of whom found much to enjoy.

The weather was all that could be desired, warm and sunny for both days and the day before. The gates were opened at 7 in the morning and the visitors began to arrive soon after. They found numerous changes and improvements since last year Friday was cattle day, as usual, and there was a large showing of unusual merit. After time had been allowed for inspection of the thoroughbreds, the steers were tested on a cart and the drawing matches for oxen on the boat were held There was much interest in these contests, particularly the latter, and a large crowd watched the efforts of the several yokes until the winner was announced. In the open to all class Samuel Rockwell of Stafford Springs, Ct., objected to the entry of A. M. Baggs of Belchertown because the animals had not been owned by Mr. Baggs for three months, as the rules of the society require; Mr. Baggs at once admitted the fact and withdrew, although there had been a good-natured rivalry between Rockwell and himself for some time and he had come to Palmer practically at Mr. Rockwell's challenge. The society at once arranged a special class and both yoke entered, Mr. Baggs' cattle—weighing 4200 pounds—winning by drawing a load of 7300 pounds

In the poultry tent there were many entries, and lovers of fine birds found much to interest them. Not in the poultry class but on exhibit was a large family of cats and kittens, shown by F W. Merriam of Palmer, consisting of a mother cat and family, with one of her children and family, all making a happy family of a dozen or more. There were also shown cages of rabbits by Mrs Alliengeno of Monson.

Never in the history of the society has the hall show assumed such large proportions or such fine qualities. The fruit and vegetables seemed to belie the dry weather of the summer, and finer specimens were never seen. The fruit exhibit was particularly large and four times the space available could have been used to advantage in displaying it. The state hospital for epileptics filled the rear end of the lower floor with products of its farm, including flowers, potted plants, fruits and vegetables. Three Granges made creditable displays in competition. In the upper hall there was an unusually large and fine showing of flowers, the frosts having spared them longer than usual this season. Among the most striking were several large exhibits of dahlias. Another proof that the Palmer Fair is making a reputation for itself was the large amount of fancy work and domestic manufactures on exhibit, the number and quality being larger and better than ever before.

The entertainment program was started at 10 o'clock Friday morning, Fiske G. Rogers of Monson being superintendent of the track. Mr. Rogers kept "Something doing every minute." The Southbridge band gave a concert which was greatly appreciated for the fine selections rendered, and at 11 came the sports for school children. The events and the winners were:

200-yard dash for boys under 12 years—Won by George LaFerle of Gilbertville; Edward Moriarty, second. Time, 25s.

200 yard dash for boys 12 to 15—Won by Gordon Besser of Gilbertville; Clarence Fenn of Ware, second. Time, 23 1-5s.

Laced shoe race for boys under 12—Won by Thomas Woods of Three Rivers; William Welch of Palmer, second.

50-yard dash for girls under 12—Won by Lily Porter of West Warren; Dorothy Harris of Palmer, second.

50-yard dash for girls 12 to 10—Won by Sarah Ritchie of Three Rivers; Dorothy Harris, second.

Human wheelbarrow race—Won by Donald Besser and Warren Besser of Gilbertville; Frank Moffatt and Robert Swayne of Three Rivers, second.

Three-legged race—Won by Arthur Bond and Thomas Hillard of Monson; Clarence Fenn and Harry White of Ware, second.

Egg and spoon race—Won by Sarah Jacunski; Fay Olds of Ware, second.

Sack race in six heats—Palmer, 26 points; Three Rivers, 18 points; Monson, 17 points.

40-yard dash for girls under 15—Won by Rosanna Fahey of Monson; Dorothy Harris, second.

The ninth grade relay race was won by Ware in 3.39 1-5, with Monson second, Gilbertville third and Palmer fourth. As usual, the high school relay race created a large amount of interest. There were six schools entered, and the race was won by Monson in 3.48; Ware was second, Warren third, Brimfield fourth, Hardwick fifth and Palmer last.

The speed classes were three in number and were hotly contested, none of them being finished until Saturday forenoon. After the second heat of the 2.26 class "Joe M." dropped dead on his way to the barn, and was buried on the grounds The starter was W. F. Piper of Springfield, with Dr. B. Pierce, W. F. Smith and George Sidell as judges, Ralph Clifford, Walter Miller and W. F. Smith timers; clerk, Ralph Clifford.

The free entertainment provided was voted by all the "Best ever" There were no thrillers, but good clever acts of interest to all. The Quintard hippodrome combination, engaged at the last moment, delighted all who saw the acts; there were running Roman standing races, running pairs to bicycle sulkies, high jumpers and educated horses which seemed capable of doing almost everything.

Saturday was a repetition of Friday as far as the weather was concerned. The crowds began to come early and kept coming until late in the afternoon; at 4.30 they were still buying admission tickets. The day's program started with a rush at 9.30 with the judging of horse classes, and there was no lack of interesting features as long as daylight remained. Not so many horses are bred in this section as in years past, though more is being done in this line within three or four years The animals shown made up in quality what was lacking in quantity. Later in the forenoon came the tests for draft horses on wagon and boat.

The speed classes postponed from the day before were called at 10.30, and from then until 5 in the evening there was trotting almost continuously. And the races were among the finest seen this season on any track. It was almost the last race of the year and the drivers were out for the money. In the free-for-all "Asa Wilkes," the local horse, justified the expectations of his friends by easily winning in three straight heats, breaking the track record in the last, making the mile in 2.12½ and winning the $50 extra offered to the horse beating 2.14.

HUNTING BEGAN TO-DAY.

Partridge, Quail and Woodcock May Be Killed.

ALL HUNTERS MUST HAVE LICENSES.

About 10,000 Issued in the State. The Number Given Out For Hampden County Towns.

To-day the law went off the three species of game birds which are especially sought at this time of year—partridge, woodcock and quail—and numerous hunters about town tried their luck. These birds can be shot on week days only up to November 14, inclusive, and there is a penalty of $20 for every bird which is taken in violation of law. The open season for hares and rabbits also began to-day, and will continue to February 28, inclusive, with a penalty of $10 for violation of the law. Between October 15 and December 1, on a man's own land, he may set traps for hares and rabbits, other than snares. Gray squirrels must not be killed at any time, unless doing damage to buildings, nor any insectivorous or song birds, nor any pheasants, nor any deer, unless by a farmer on his own land on account of damage to crops.

No resident of the state can hunt unless he has a license registered with the city or town clerk, at a cost of $1. Non-residents must secure a license from the state fish and game commission at a cost of $10, and unnaturalized foreign-born citizens cannot hunt unless they have a license from the city or town clerk, for which they must pay $15 An unusually large number of the licenses have been issued this fall, it being given out at the office of the commission on fisheries and game that fully 10,000 have been given out. The number issued in the towns and cities in Hampden county is as follows: Agawam, 16; Blandford, 19; Brimfield, 20; Chester, 33; Chicopee, 55; East Longmeadow, 15; Granville, 5; Hampden 4; Holland, 3; Holyoke, 99; Longmeadow, 9; Ludlow, 18; Monson, 35; Montgomery, 9; Palmer, 60; Russell, 5; Southwick, 18; Springfield, 300; Tolland, 1; Wales 10; Westfield, 78; West Springfield, 28; Wilbraham, 8; total, 548. In the town of Ware in Hampshire county 48 were issued and in Belchertown 13

HAMPDEN.

Mrs. A. C. Thompson has a rose that has blossomed continuously since last June and is now loaded with buds. One shoot has grown to a height of six feet and bears over seventy buds at the present time and it is nothing unusual to see buds through an early snow fall. The roses are white, small but double, but as the weather grows cold they show a pink tinge. Another seedling rose has just dropped its last petals, being its third period of blooming, and another that bloomed in June is budding again, a thing it has never done before in the eight years that the owner has had it.

WARE.

Clerk of Court Files Report.

J. G. Lincoln, clerk of the district court of Eastern Hampshire, has completed his report of the criminal cases for the year ending September 30 and filed the same with the board of prisoners. The cases; Drunkenness 61, assault 16, larceny 8, vagrancy 7, violating liquor laws 6, violating fish and game laws 5, disturbing the peace 5, neglect of family 4, practicing medicine (unlicensed) 4, common night walker 2, obstructing an officer 2, abuse of female child 2, illegal use of milk cans 1, disorderly 1, keeping a disorderly house 1, causing a bonfire 1, gaming 1, obtaining goods under false pretenses 1; total, 128, The defendants brought to trial numbered 108, and all were men but one. Of these 71 pleaded guilty and 28 of the remaining 37 were found guilty. Those sentenced numbered 79, the cases ordered filed were 13, and seven defendants were placed on probation. Fines were imposed upon 60 who were sentenced, while 15 were committed to the house of correction and two were sent to the state farm. The probation officer released 11 men who had been arrested for drunkenness Four search warrants for stolen property were issued, and in three cases property was found. Five warrants were issued to search for intoxicating liquors, and under four liquors were seized and later declared forfeited. Only four delinquent children were before the court during the year, and three of the cases were filed. One boy was sent to the Lyman school.

James J. Foley, formerly of the Mansion House, died in St. Vincent's hospital, Worcester, yesterday morning, where he had been receiving treatment. It was not expected that Mr. Foley could recover since his removal to the hospital, but his death causes many regrets. He had lived in Ware only about three years, but had many friends.

The body of Mrs Mary Meany, who died in Hartford, Ct., last week Wednesday, was taken to Ware Saturday morning, where the funeral was held in All Saints' church at 9 o'clock, Rev. J. H. Murphy officiating at a requiem high mass. During the service Miss Anna T. Murray of Springfield sang "There's a Beautiful Land on High." Burial was in St. William's cemetery. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful.

Two weeks of special meetings will start in the Methodist church Sunday. The plan is somewhat on the line of camp meetings only held at home. Sunday morning the pastor, Rev. W. C. Townsend, will preach an appropriate opening sermon, and in the evening at 7 Rev. G. A. Downey of Wilbraham will give the address. Monday evening Rev J. A. Bowler of Warren will give a "chalk talk." For the other evenings of the week the preachers will be: Rev. William Snow of Feeding Hills Tuesday evening; Rev. William A. Crawford of Grace church, Springfield, Wednesday; Rev. J. P. Kennedy of Holyoke, district superintendent, Thursday; Rev. J. M. Gage of Monson Friday.

PALMER NEWS.

MORE MOTION PICTURES.

Opera House to Open This Evening Under New Management. One of a Circuit.

A new bidder for the patronage of the amusement-seeker is the New England Amusement Company, which has leased the opera house and will open it this evening with motion pictures and vaudeville. It will be open every evening, and a two-hours' performance will be given; the prices will be 10 and 15 cents, and the program will include the best in motion pictures, the latest songs, and vaudeville of an exceptionally high grade, according to the manager, Mr. R. J. Moreton. It is the intention of the company to give performances entirely free from every objectionable feature, such as may be visited by women or children at any time. There will be an entire change of program twice a week, on Monday and Thursday evenings. The program this week, in addition to the pictures, will include the Musical Gatchels, a combination of merit, and Campbell and Steele in solos and duets For the first three days of next week the Watts family of singers and dancers will appear, and the last three days Tot Davin, the child actress, and James A. Brazail, the noted comedy singer, will sing illustrated songs. A special feature of the new place will be the Saturday matinees for children, from 3 to 5, when the price for the little ones will be only five cents and there will be something sweet for every child. The Palmer place is one of a circuit being established in this vicinity, and Mr. L. N. Cushman of Springfield is the treasurer of the company.

DEMOCRATS NOMINATE

Leicester Man for Senator in Worcester-Hampden District.

The Democrats of the Worcester-Hampden district held their convention in the Nassowanno House last Saturday forenoon. The delegates were called to order by Eugene D. Marchessault of Spencer, chairman of the district committee; he was made permanent chairman. The secretary was J. K. Egan of Sturbridge and the committee on credentials was Alex E Boyer of Southbridge and John L. Wilder of Palmer. They reported 15 delegates present. The name of Harry E. Sargent of Leicester was presented by Mr. Boyer, and he was nominated by acclamation It was voted that the district committee for the coming year be made up of the chairmen and secretaries of the various town committees and the chairman and secretary of the convention. The chairman of the convention was authorized to fill any vacancies.

Fitch—Call.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Fitch on Central street Tuesday evening, when their daughter, Harriet Newton, was united in marriage to Albert Edwin Call of Springfield. Rev. C. W. Williams, pastor of the Baptist church, performed the ceremony, the ring service being used. The parlor, where the ceremony was performed, was tastefully trimmed with hydrangeas and clematis, the bridal couple standing under a floral horseshoe. The decorations were in charge of Mrs. S. B. Keith and Mrs. H. A. Northrop. The bride was attended by Miss Olive Holden Pope of Bennington, Vt., and Guy Call of Springfield, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were George Newton of Upton and Ronald Stuart of Springfield. Wilfred Fitch, young brother of the bride, was page. Mrs. F. S. Keith played the wedding march from "Lohengrin" as the wedding party entered the room, and after the ceremony Mendelssohn's march. The bride was attired in a white lace gown over white taffeta silk, with a wreath and veil, and carried a bouquet of white lilies of the valley. Her traveling suit was raisin brown panama, with hat to match. The bridesmaid was dressed in an apricot shade silk chiffon, over taffeta silk, and carried a bouquet of roses. A number of out of town guests were present. The display of presents was very fine, consisting of money, cut glass, silver, linen and a china tea set 90 years old. The couple left in an automobile for a wedding trip and on their return will live at 191 High street, Springfield. The bride is a well known young woman in town and a graduate of the Palmer high school. Mr. Call is the junior member of the firm of S. B Call, sporting goods, Springfield.

Paving Begun.

The first brick of the new Main street paving was laid on Monday at the Thorndike street end of the job, and the work has been going steadily on ever since. The work in and around the curves of the street railway tracks at that point has been hard and slow, but now that these have been passed greater speed is expected. The trouble now appears to be with the concreters, who are having hard work to keep ahead of the brick.

The toll is taken each day between 7 in the morning and 9 in the evening, and will not include bicycles or motorcycles. One man is stationed at Auto Inn in North Wilbraham, one in Monson and two at the Cooley Crossing.

Deputy Fish and Game Commissioner Luman was summoned to Brimfield Wednesday to investigate the finding of a deer's head near Holdridge's Corner. He found that it was the head of a buck between one and two years old. It was wrapped in a piece of brown paper and thrown loosely into a bag, being badly decomposed and had probably been there five or six weeks. It was found near a spot where a party of gypsies camped the last of August, and it is thought that the animal was probably killed by them

Albert Gould; "Gee, But There's Class To A Girl Like You," Dennis A. Hogan. Beginning next Monday evening all patrons of the Elite will be given an extra ticket when they get their admission tickets. This ticket is to be kept until the end of the week, when the holder of the lucky number is to be given a $2 50 gold piece. The drawings will take place every Monday evening.

STRIKING NEW GOWNS.

Usefulness and True Beauty Combined in a Rare Degree in This Season's Costumes. Visit to a Fine Store.

A visit to the big Steiger Store in Springfield is always a pleasure, but perhaps it is safe to say with entire sincerity that it never was so much a pleasure as it is to-day. The large addition to the building was opened in March, and this is the first season when entirely new styles for Fall have been displayed using these splendid new rooms. The Spring styles were very fine, but this Fall has produced a change which is greater than anything for years. Both in women's suits and millinery the adaptation of the design to the wearer is far more truly artistic than for a long time. This in itself makes the Steiger display worth going far to see, but beyond this, it is housed in a very beautiful building. The designs of the season have a fine simplicity, which is always the highest and truest art, the colorings being soft and rich. One immediately thinks how beautiful a scene it would be in a room full of women costumed in these exquisite gowns with their long drapings, and the soft glow of their colors The designers have drawn on the fruits of the world this year for their color inspiration. There is the raisin shade, softly suggestive of purple, but lighter and more alive, the raspberry shades, the apricot, and others as equally delicate. The apricot is really indescribable in any accurate terms, being a soft cream with just a suggestion of raspberry tint It is a color which gives wonderful shadows in drapery.

The picture shows the new coat-dress, a princess effect that has not only much attractiveness, but is very practical as well, for the wearer does not need a separate coat, the gown being worn with furs, or other neck wrap Bands and buttons in the same color as the coat are the only trimming. The fabric is a fine chiffon broadcloth in the raisin spoken of above. The hat worn by the model is from the Steiger Millinery Department.

Suit designing is to the writer more interesting this season than for many years. Last season the artists went back to the Directoire period of a century and a half ago. But the high-waisted gowns were destined to be of short-lived popularity. They really did not "fit" the needs of the people of this country and age. This season designers have, however, delved further back in history, and found their hint from the dress uniform of the Cuirassier of the Middle Ages. This is where they have secured the long corselet effect which one sees so finely adapted in the house and street gowns of this year.

It matters little where you begin in making a trip through the Steiger Store, you are attracted on all sides by the ample aisles, the restful soft tints of the furnishings, the floods of daylight which come from all sides of the building, and with the courteous and intelligent employees. The store is certainly very fine, and it is a pleasure to say that the employes seem very much a part of the business

On the upper floor is a cute baby room with which you and your little folks will be delighted. The entire top floor is given over to babies', children's and misses' wear, and the go-carts float directly up on the big elevators. The next floor is given entirely to millinery and 25 expert milliners and saleswomen are busy with the customers. The appointments are very fine. The Steiger Company produces all of its designs, drawing on the great centers for its milliners. The next floor below is given to suits and undermuslins, shirtwaists and corsets, and is 200 feet deep by 80 feet wide. We have already spoken of its attractions in what we have said of the suit designs. The beautiful oak staircase which leads from this floor to the street floor below has been described in these columns, and is something that is worth going to see, even if you are a man and have nothing to buy in a woman's store.

On the street floor the linen department at the rear attracts, not alone because of its fine proportions and stock, but because of the novel and very pleasing manner in which the linens are displayed in cases like those of a modern sectional library. All of the dress goods on this great floor, together with ribbons and trimmings of all kinds, are so placed that at any hour of the day they may be examined by daylight.

It is worth while in closing this article to speak once more of the ample room throughout this store You do not have to shoulder your way through. Each department, even to the least, has generous room and plenty of clerks. The Steiger Store strikes a fine note in the commercial life of Western Massachusetts, and was never more worth a visit than now.

"Science is wonderful," said Carlotta Nilson. "One can never tell what it will do next. I was asking a doctor in a big hospital the other day if he had any interesting cases. "'I should think so,' said he. 'We've got a woman who is so cross-eyed that the tears run down her back.' "'Bless me,' said I. "You can't do anything for her, can you?" "'I should think we can—in fact, we have,' he cried. 'We've treated her for bacteria.'" —Young's Magazine.

Methodist Church Fall Opening.

The second annual fall opening of the Methodist Episcopal church was held Sunday morning, with the reception of the new members. Ten new members were taken into the church. In the evening at 7 Dr. J. P. Kennedy of Holyoke, the district superintendent of the society, preached, with music by the vested choir; this was followed by the quarterly conference. On Monday evening there was the Epworth League entertainment and opening social; there was a piano duet by Miss Manley and Miss Merrick, a recitation by Miss Hazel Moore, a trio by the Misses Mauley, Merrick and Needham, a vocal solo by Albert Hirst and a reading by Miss Olive Morgan. On Tuesday evening Dr. E. R. Thorndike of West Springfield spoke to the Oxford chapter on the "Betterment of Man." On Wednesday evening Miss Hattie May Manley gave an organ recital, assisted by Miss Helen M. Moulton, soprano. Last evening there was an old-fashioned love feast and to-night there will be the church banquet, with toast and addresses. The toasts will be, "When We Were Young," by E. J. Osborne; "The Coming Generation," Miss Olive M. Morgan; "Monson's Wide Awake Church," C. A. Bradway; "What We Owe to the Women," Mrs. Justin P. Carew; "The Oxfords," Henry J. Billings. The main address of the evening will be by Col. C. F. Young of Springfield. The banquet will be given by the Ladies' Benevolent Society. The services will close with the Junior League social to-morrow afternoon from 3.30 to 4.30, which will be a general good time for all.

Taylor—Smith.

The wedding of Miss Bessie May Taylor, formerly of Monson, and Arthur Knowlton Smith of Boston took place in Providence Wednesday, October 6, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Merchant, cousins of the bride. Rev. James E. McConnell, pastor of the Union Congregational church of Providence, performed the ceremony, which was followed by a reception. The bridesmaid was Miss Norma T. Ferguson, and Myron E. Witham of Denver, Col., acted as best man, Miss Jessie T. Anthony and Miss Judy H. Waite acted as ribbon girls. The rooms were prettily decorated with autumn foliage and cut flowers and palms, which formed a setting for the bridal party. The bride's gown was of ivory satin, with trimmings of princesse lace, and she carried bride roses. The bridesmaid was dressed in pink satin and carried pink roses. Guests were from New Haven, Hartford, Worcester, Boston, Fitzwilliams, Monson, Denver, Col., Indianapolis, Wollaston and Fort William, Ont. After a two-weeks' honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Smith will live in Wollaston. The bride has many relatives and friends in town and is a graduate of Monson Academy. She is a niece of Mrs. A. B. Merchant of High street with whom she lived until she went to Providence.

Mrs. John Murphy, who has been visiting relatives in Boston and vicinity, has returned to her home on Park avenue.

The girls of the class of 1910 gave a unique birthday party to their classmate, Miss Gladys Page, on the catrock recently.

Mrs. M. M. Severy, who has been visiting her son, F. E. Severy on Pleasant street, has returned to her home in Springfield.

Miss Hattie Partell has returned to her home on Highland avenue after spending a two-months' vacation in New York and Jersey.

Miss Helen Moulton has gone to Ipswich, to take part in a concert given by Rev. A. B. Gifford, formerly pastor of the Methodist church.

Mrs. John Pendergast and Miss May Pendergast left Wednesday for a trip down the Hudson river and a visit with friends in New York city.

There will be a bridge whist party at the Country Club next Monday evening, in charge of Mr. and Mrs Robert H Cushman and Mrs. Eugene Cook.

George Nobert, who has been home on a 10-days' furlough visiting his parents, Mr and Mrs. Henry Nobert, has returned to the U. S. battleship Lonisiana.

Ralph Needham, who has been home on a leave of absence visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Needham, has returned to the United States battleship Connecticut.

Miss Myrtle Johnson and Miss Lotie Morrison of Northfield seminary spent Sunday with Miss Johnson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Johnson on South Main street.

Mrs. John Grady, 90 years of age, the oldest lady in town, is in a dangerous condition at her home near the depot, having suffered a paralytic shock early Wednesday morning.

Mrs. M. J. Bradway and Mrs. Frederick Bindge left Tuesday for a trip to California. Mrs. Bradway will visit relatives in Los Angeles and Mrs. Bindge will go to Santa Barbara.

Myrtle, the eight-years-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Holdridge, was successfully operated on for enlarged tonsils and adenoids Sunday morning by Dr. E. W. Capeu.

The building owned by E. J. Hughes and occupied by F. S. Cushman is being moved up to the building occupied by E. C. Bradway, and will be a part of the new block soon to be built. The work is being done by J. S. Stewart.

The Teachers' Study Club will meet this evening at Superintendent Wheeler's residence on North Main street. Miss Murphy will read a paper on "Moral Training in the Public Schools;" Miss Drawbridge on "Current Events;" Miss Carpenter on "Charlemagne."

The registrars of voters will be in session in the selectmen's room, town hall, this evening from 7.30 to 9; next Wednesday evening from 7.30 to 9; Saturday, October 23, from 12 noon until 10 p. m. to add names to the voting list and make corrections on same.

Town Clerk C. L. Peck has issued nearly 50 licenses to hunters in the past two weeks. This is an unusually large number. The law on birds went off to-day. Partridges are plentiful this year. There will be a number who will take a vacation to-day and try their luck.

The first regular meeting of the Men's Club of the Congregational church was held in the church parlors Monday evening and was well attended. Rev. Dr. W. W. Weeks of Springfield gave a very interesting lecture on "The Square Man." A collation was served after the lecture.

The King's Daughters will meet with Mrs. George Leonard next Friday evening.

Dr. and Mrs. H. P. Barber of Springfield are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter October 8. Mrs. Barber was formerly Miss Flora Moulton of this town.

John Anderson, who has been quite ill at his home on High street with pneumonia, is improving.

The Green Street Whist Club held its first and business meeting of the year this week at the residence of D. B. Needham, and the following officers were elected: President, D. B. Needham; secretary and treasurer, A. J. Buffington; executive committee, Mrs. A. J. Buffington chairman, Mrs. H. T. Bradway, Mrs. M. R. Lull. The next meeting will be held October 28 with Mrs. M. R. Lull.

A. A. Delphia, who came East to visit a brother and daughter, returned to California Tuesday where he will start again in fruit raising. A few years ago Mr Delphia sold his farm in Monson and went with his son Newell to Diunba, Cal., where they purchased land and cultivated it as a raisin-grape vineyard; the vineyard was a success. A buyer came who tempted the owners with a bag of money which they accepted. Now they are prepared to go into the business more extensively. They intend to settle within a few miles of their former home.

The Dorcas Society of the Congregational church held its annual business meeting Sept. 30th, and transacted business and made plans for the coming winter. It was voted to have four socials during the winter, but there will be no entertainment with the socials. The first social will be held the 22d of this month and the second on November 12. Work has begun for a fair to be held the first week in December. It was also voted to send a box of second-hand clothing to the Montgomery Industrial School, Alabama, of which Miss Alice White has charge. A musical committee was appointed and an effort will be made to have greater interest in the music for the Thursday night meetings.

Academy Notes.

John English, '07, of East Windsor has been visiting friends in town.

Miss Viola Keys of Bridgeport, Ct., is visiting Miss Mary Fuller on Main street.

Edwin Potwin, formerly of the Academy, has been renewing old acquaintances in town.

BRIMFIELD.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Bulfinch of Lynn have been guests at the hotel this week.

Miss Betty Abbe of Smith College was the guest over Sunday of Miss Alice Sawin.

Mrs. Harriette D. Walker of Boston gave a very interesting lecture in the Congregational church Sunday night, after which she organized a W. C. T. U. The following officers were chosen: President, Mrs. Martha E. Streeter; vice president, Mrs. Bertie Garmes; secretary, Mrs. Ruth Bissell; treasurer, Mrs. Samuel Eaton.

Little Willie Twospot was called upon to recite before his class on Friday afternoon. Bravely he mounted the platform. Valiantly he thrust his right hand up in the air as he began: By that rude bridge which arched the flood, their flag to April's breeze unfurled, here the embattled farmers stood and shot the chutes — and then in a spasm of terror he exclaimed: "Oh, gosh, that ain't right?"—Pick-Me-Up.

mile handicap. In the three-mile race D J Connors was scratch, C. W. Chamberlain scratch, David Davis one-fourth mile, William Clark three-fourths mile. The race was won by Clark with Chamberlain second; time, 4.52½. In the five-mile race the positions were the same and the race was won by Connors, the time being 7.48½; Clark was second and Chamberlain third. The fast time—considering the track conditons—and the daring riding of Connors and Chamberlain on the stretches held the interest of every spectator every moment of the contest.

Down on the Midway there was a lively time both days. While there was nothing objectionable there was much to see and do, shows to see and opportunities for a display of skill in hitting the dodger's head, dropping baseballs through a hole in a barrel, or throwing rings over boxes of candy, etc. There were lamp chimneys to break—if the balls hit just right—games with "no blanks," a prize for everybody every time, a tintype tent and a merry-go-round. And of course the "All-nots," sandwiches of various kinds, popcorn, chewing gum and the numerous things for all tastes and palates, for the fair-goer must eat, and eat all the time, or the program isn't complete. There was nowhere any rowdyism or disorder, which is remarkable in a crowd the size of Saturday's. Only two "drunks" were discovered, and one of them was escorted from the grounds. A privilege man who forgot himself and slapped a boy's face was allowed to pack up and go, which he was glad to do.

But the best part of it all—from the viewpoint of the society—is that every body was satisfied. The entertainment was ample, varied and of good quality. The racing was as good as is seen anywhere outside the big circuits, which few of the average fairgoers ever visit. The events were run quickly and there were no tedious waits—instead, there were frequently "several things doing every minute," and within the view of the spectator. Everybody who attended the Palmer Fair this year will certainly want to do so next—and bring his friends—if the managers put up as good a show, and there is no question of their intention along that line.

Mrs Addison Bartlett received news of the death of her oldest brother, Alonzo Bardwell, 72, at Boston Friday. The funeral and burial were in Boston Monday at 2 p. m. Mr. Bardwell was a native of Belchertown, and besides his immediate family in Boston, he leaves a sister and a brother and their families, all of Belchertown

Mrs. Celia Walker has made several gifts to the Historical society rooms, one a milkmaid's yoke made of wood and found on the Jonas Holland place, and another a cattle show report dating back to the fourth annual exhibition of the Belchertown agricultural association. Nearly all of those on the list of judges at that time are dead.

The Holland club held the first meeting of the season Tuesday with Mrs. H. R. Gould. The program of the evening was in charge of Mrs. E. H. Dyer and was an interesting one. The subject of the evening was "Domestic Science," and several interesting papers were read. The next meeting of the club will be with Mrs. Samuel Allen and the program will be in charge of Miss M. E. King.

Tickling in the Throat

"Just a little tickling in the throat!" Is that what troubles you? But it hangs on! Can't get rid of it! Home remedies don't take hold. You need something stronger—a regular medicine, a doctor's medicine. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral contains healing, quieting, and soothing properties of the highest order. Ask your doctor about this. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Constipation positively prevents good health. Then why allow it to continue? An active liver is a great preventive of disease. Ayer's Pills are liver pills. What does your doctor say?

A Great Walker.

On July 12, 1809, the Newmarket bells rang a peal in honor of Captain Barclay's completed walk of a mile in each of 1,000 successive hours. In his first week of it he had averaged less than fifteen minutes for each mile and in the last week more than twenty-one, and his weight had gone down from thirteen stone four pounds to eleven stone. But on July 17 he joined the Walcheren expedition in perfect health as aid-de-camp to the Marquis of Huntly. Captain Barclay, who was a Barclay of Ury and unsuccessfully claimed three Scottish earldoms, had performed wonderful feats before the Newmarket walk. In 1801 he walked 110 miles in nineteen hours in a muddy park. In 1808 he rose one morning at 5, walked thirty miles grouse shooting, dined at 5 p. m., walked sixty miles to his house at Ury in eleven hours, did some business and walked sixteen miles to dance at a ball, walked home by 7 a. m. and spent the day partridge shooting—in all 130 miles without sleep for two nights and three days. At twenty he could lift half a ton.—St. James' Gazette.

Not Afraid.

Personal courage invests its owner with a protection beyond that afforded by outside forces. An illustration of this is recorded by General William F Draper in his "Recollections of a Varied Career," where he gives this incident:

In 1864 Colonel Daniels of the Seventh Rhode Island became unpopular with some of his command, and a rumor spread that he would be shot at the next engagement. He heard of it. It was customary when guns had been loaded for some time to have them discharged into some convenient bank, and Colonel Daniels took advantage of this. Marching his regiment out with loaded rifles, he faced them toward a suitable elevation, and, taking position on the top of it and in front of them as at dress parade, he gave the commands, "Ready!" "Aim!" "Fire!" and the pieces were discharged.

Needless to say, any man could have shot him with little danger of discovery, and, needless to say, also, none of them did. There were no more threats of that kind in his regiment.

Europe's Dirtiest Town.

All travelers should shun Borzslaw, in Galicia—"the back of Europe"—truthfully called the dirtiest place in Europe. It is the oil trade center and is decidedly not beautiful. In the main street all the houses have been built on mine refuse, and most of them have sunk below the level of the street. In fact, there is not a solid brick or stone building in the whole of the town, and many of the houses are in a state of partial or entire collapse. Unrefined petroleum is everywhere. It gets into everything—food and clothing—and the atmosphere reeks of it. Along one side of the main street is a raised wooden pavement, and beneath it is an oily ditch. Borzslaw's main waterway is a narrow, sluggish, oily stream. On its banks the town's refuse is cast, and the market booths are erected alongside, while the local washerwomen—though from external appearances one would judge that laundresses did not exist there at all—do their washing in its oily depths.

Got Too Familiar.

A story told of Justice Brewer concerns a trip he made to his old home in Kansas, accompanied by Mrs Brewer. In Washington a justice of the supreme court is spoken of as "Mr Justice," and that is the title Mrs Brewer always has heard. When they reached Chicago, however, the "Mr." was dropped and the jurist was referred to as "Justice Brewer." At Omaha some old friends called him "David J.," and when they crossed the Kansas line some former neighbors referred to him as "David."

"Let's go home," suggested Mrs. Brewer.

"Why?" asked the justice.

"Because, dear," Mrs. Brewer replied, "I am afraid if we go any farther they will be calling you 'Davie.'" —Cleveland Leader.

The Old Roman Ballot.

The ballot was first introduced into Rome in the second century B. C. This was the real Australian ballot. The voter received a sort of wooden slate covered with wax on which the names of all the candidates were scratched. He made holes in the wax opposite those of his choice and dropped his tablet in the box. After the downfall of the Roman republic popular government took a long sleep, and there was little use for a ballot till quite modern times.

The Doctor's Question

Some Advice Against the Use of Harsh Purgatives and Physics.

A doctor's first question when consulted by a patient is, "Are your bowels regular?" He knows that 98 per cent of illness is attended with inactive bowels and torpid liver. This condition poisons the system with waste matter and causes accumulation of gases which must be removed through the bowels before health can be restored.

Salts, ordinary pills and cathartics may be truly likened to dynamite. Through their harsh, irritating action they force a passage through the bowels, causing pain and damage to the delicate intestinal structure which weakens the whole system, and at best only produces temporary relief. The repeated use of such treatments causes chronic irritation of the stomach and bowels, dries and hardens their tissues, deadens their nerves, stiffens their muscles and generally brings about an injurious habit which sometimes has almost if not fatal results.

We have a pleasant and safe remedy for constipation and bowel disorders in general. We are so certain of its great curative value that we promise to return the purchaser's money in every case where it fails to produce entire satisfaction. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies. We urge you to try them at our entire risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy, they act quietly and have a soothing, strengthening, healing, regulative influence on the entire intestinal tract. They do not purge, gripe, cause nausea, flatulence, excessive looseness, diarrhœa or other annoying effects, and they may be taken at any time without inconvenience.

Rexall Orderlies overcome the drugging habit and safely remedy constipation and associate ailments, whether acute or chronic, except in surgical cases. They are especially good for children, weak persons or old folks. Price, 36 tablets 25 cents, and 12 tablets 10 cents. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Palmer only at our store,—The Rexall Store. Lynde & Gould, Palmer.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Facts For Sick Women

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or secured so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Almost every woman you meet has either been benefited by it, or knows some one who has.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing over one million one hundred thousand letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved many women from surgical operations.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made exclusively from roots and herbs, and is perfectly harmless.

The reason why it is so successful is because it contains ingredients which act directly upon the female organism, restoring it to healthy and normal activity.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials such as the following prove the efficiency of this simple remedy.

Minneapolis, Minn.:—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women, I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. Within three months I was a perfectly well woman.

"I want this letter made public to show the benefits to be derived from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. John G. Moldan, 2115 Second St. North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

She doesn't Worry about Cooking

The Mother's Oats Free Fireless Cooker is doing her work. And much better than she could do it.

Suppose she falls asleep. When her husband comes home and wakens her, all she will have to do is to go to the Fireless Cooker and take out the perfectly cooked and steaming hot dinner that will be all ready. Nothing that's put in the Mother's Oats Fireless Cooker can burn or boil over. It cooks everything and several things at once.

It's especially planned to prepare that ideal food—which are not like "others'" oats. They're not only rolled (to make easy cooking) but are crushed (to make easy digestion). Easy work for the cook and easy work for the stomach.

If you are a user of MOTHER'S CEREALS: Mother's Oats, Mother's Corn Meal (white or yellow), Mother's Wheat Hearts (the cream of the wheat), Mother's Hominy Grits, Mother's Corn Flakes (toasted), Mother's Coarse Pearl Hominy, Mother's Old Fashioned Steel Cut Oatmeal, Mother's Old Fashioned Graham Flour, you can get a Mother's Oats Fireless Cooker free with coupons. NOTICE TO VOTERS.
REGISTRATION.

Office of the Board of Registrars of Voters.
Palmer, Mass., Oct. 13, 1909.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Registrars of Voters will be in session at Holden's Old Store, Bondsville, Tuesday evening, Oct. 19, from 6.30 to 7.30 p. m.; at Ruggles' Hall, Three Rivers, Wednesday evening, Oct. 20, from 6 to 7 p. m.; at Temperance Hall, Thorndike, Wednesday evening, Oct. 20, from 7.15 to 8.15 p. m.; and at Selectmen's Room, Library Building, Depot Village, Saturday, Oct. 23, from 12 m to 10 p. m, for the purpose of receiving evidence of the qualification of persons claiming a right to vote at the election to be held on Tuesday, November 2, 1909, and of correcting the list of voters.

See that your name is on the Voting List of your town; if not there, call at the office of the Board of Registrars on the days above mentioned, and be registered, or you cannot vote. Bring with you a certificate from the assessors or a tax bill or a notice from the collector of taxes showing that you have been assessed a poll tax as a resident of the Town of Palmer.

All persons whose names are stricken from the voters' lists for any lawful reason, will, before they can again have their names placed upon said lists, be required to register their names at the time hereinbefore stated in like manner as new voters

Naturalized Citizens presenting themselves for registration must bring their naturalization papers with them.

If a qualified voter of this town whose name was on the voters' list last year, and who has been assessed for the current year, finds after the close of registration that his name is not placed on the voters' list of the current year, by reason of having been omitted by clerical error or mistake, he may, upon personal application, have his name placed upon the voting list, or, if application be made on the day of election, he may have a certificate to vote.

No name can be added to the voters' list (except to correct omissions made by clerical error or mistake) after ten (10) o'clock of the evening of Saturday, October 23, 1909, at which time registration closes.

By order of the Board of Registrars of Voters.

The Antalgica

Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Coughs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do you good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1 00 per bottle by The Quinsby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerre Burlingame Hold Open House and Are Visited by Many Friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerre Burlingame, with many of their friends, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage Monday afternoon and evening at their pleasant home on Baptist Hill in Palmer. A large number of friends were present during the day, and all were royally entertained. The rooms were prettily decorated with autumn leaves and flowers under the direction of Mrs. H. A. Talmadge of Springfield, the scheme being white and yellow. Roses and cut flowers presented by friends were in great abundance. Mrs J. F. Holbrook of Palmer was mistress of ceremonies, and much of the success of the occasion was due to her management; she was assisted by Mrs. Talmadge, Miss Lottie Moore and Mrs. Nora Thayer. Numerous gifts were left the couple as reminders of the happy occasion, among them being gold, silver and paper money, cut class, crockery, linen, etc. Refreshments were served, and there was singing by Mrs Ursulia Stowe of Palmer 90 years old, who with Mrs Susan Hitchcock of East Longmeadow, 84, a former resident of Baptist Hill, were the two oldest persons present. Mr. Burlingame also sang several of his favorite songs Letters of congratulation and tokens of love were received from California, Seattle, Boston, Fulton, Rochester and other places in New York state, Springfield, Wilbraham, Merrick, Ware, Southampton and Worcester, Mass, Togus, Me, and Providence, R. I.

Mr. Burlingame was born in Wilbraham June 30, 1832 the son of Lowrey and Almira Cleveland Burlingame. Mrs Burlingame was born in Three Rivers April 2, 1841, the daughter of Levi and Mary Calkins Shaw. They were married October 18, 1859, by Rev. E. Hayden Watrous. The couple have a daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Strickland, living in Rochester, N Y.; also a son, Fred, of Springfield. They have many grandchildren and one great-grandchild, Lawrence Dean Burlingame Jr. of Springfield. Mr. Burlingame has owned and occupied the farm on which they now live for 54 years. The couple are well preserved for people of their age, and enjoyed to the full the gathering on Monday.

Officers Make Raid in Holland.

Officers from the town of Holland made a surprise call Sunday at a house on the Fiskdale road about a mile and a half from the center of the town, and arrested two men and three women found there. The raid was in charge of Officers Blodgett and Howlett, and was made on information furnished them some time before. Before the officers left the place a number of visitors arrived and by their statements left no question of the character of the place. The five were arraigned in the district court in Palmer Monday morning. Peter Lavene was fined $50 for keeping a common nuisance, and George S. Gearin, Alice M. Abbott, Mary A. Murphy and Sadie Demars were fined $20 each for being idle and disorderly persons. All paid.

EAST BRIMFIELD.

Lottie Roper of Holland is staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Bump.

Miss M. S. Dunham is able to be out of doors after having been ill since February.

Mrs. G. A. Stanger and daughter Olga returned home Wednesday after a four-weeks' vacation in Hartford, Ct.

Hunting season is on and quite a number have secured their licenses. There are more birds this year than last.

BELCHERTOWN.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Towne celebrated the 55th anniversary of their wedding Sunday. Only the home circle were present.

The Belchertown creamery company have voted to pay 38 cents a pound for September butter fat. This is the highest price ever paid.

The total number of vehicles from the 10th to the 16th over the state road was 2460. Over 1100 were recorded the day of the fair, one out of 10 being automobiles.

The board of selectmen were notified Saturday of a suspected case of diphtheria in South Belchertown, but upon investigation found only a bad case of sore throat. The premises were fumigated, however, and every precaution taken.

The town authorities have been digging a well on the school house grounds at the Center school, which fills a long-felt need. For years the pupils have had to go to neighboring pumps for a supply, and the water question was becoming a serious one.

At the annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society these officers were chosen: President, Mrs. H. M. Jepson; vice president, Mrs. D. F. Shumway; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. A. L. Kendall; directors, Mrs. Abbie Walker, Mrs. A. C. Cutting, Mrs. H. M. Fishburn, Mrs. Lou Bridgman, Mrs. Jefferson Clough.

Mrs. Charles L. Walker was tendered a reception Monday evening by the Woman's Relief Corps at their fair in the Baptist church. There was a large attendance of the members of the Grand Army, honorary members and their wives and members of the Relief Corps Remarks were made by N. W. Farrar and Deacon Nelson Randall. A handsome handkerchief case filled with handkerchiefs was presented to Mrs. Walker. Refreshments were served during the evening.

FOUND DEAD IN BED.

John E. Ferrell Dies From Natural Causes During the Night.

John Erwin Ferrell, 58, well known in Palmer, was found dead in his bed at his home in Blanchardville Monday morning, it being evident that he had been dead some time. Mr. Ferrell was ill Sunday with indigestion, but the attack was not considered serious and he was no worse when he retired for the night. In the morning, when the family arose, it was found that he had died during the night from the effects of an apoplectic shock. Mr. Ferrell was a native of Brimfield where he was born May 8, 1851, his parents being Theodore and Eliza Shaw Ferrell; his entire life had been spent in this immediate vicinity, the greater part of it on the old Ferrell farm near West Brimfield. Besides a widow he leaves one daughter, Mildred. The funeral was held this afternoon, with burial in the Brimfield cemetery.

WARE.

Spencer—Person.

The marriage of Miss Effie Martha, oldest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. G. F. A. Spencer, and Flynn Russell Person of Ware, son of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin F. Person of Leominster, took place in the chapel of the East Congregational church Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the presence of nearly 300 friends and relatives. The chapel and the parlors in the rear, where the reception was held, were prettily decorated by friends of the bride. The bridal party entered from a rear room of the chapel by one of the west doors to the strains of the "Lohengrin" wedding march played by Miss Florence Naylor. The ushers were Earl R. Person of Leominster, a brother of the groom, and Bernard W. Southworth of Ware. The bridesmaids, who were next in line, were Miss Agnes Daua of Providence, R I., a classmate of the bride at Wellesley, and Miss Grace M. Spencer, a sister of the bride. They wore gowns of white point d'esprit over silk and carried large pink chrysanthemums. The maid of honor was another sister, Miss Bertha M. Spencer, whose gown was pale green silk. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and asparagus ferns. The bride, who entered with her father, wore a gown of white crepe de chine, made in princess style, and trimmed with old lace. She wore a veil and carried a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley. The bride was met at the platform by the groom, attended by the best man, J. Whitman Vining of Brockton. Rev. George B. Hatch performed the ceremony, the double ring service being used. After the marriage the bridal party, with the parents of the bride and groom, received the guests. Guests were present from Boston, Worcester, Springfield, Northampton, Pittsfield, Greenfield, Barre, Maynard, Wellesley, Hadley, Leominster, Philadelphia, Pa., Warren, O, New Lebanon, N. Y., and Woodstock, Vt. The catering was done by Hughes of Springfield. After the reception the younger of the guests enjoyed dancing until 12 o'clock in Odd Fellows' Hall, with music furnished by an orchestra. Mr. and Mrs Person left late in the evening for a wedding trip of about 10 days. Upon their return they will live on Prospect street. Mr. Person is a druggist, who had been in the store in Springfield of John D. Smith for some time before buying two years ago last April the store of Mr. Smith in Ware. He is the worthy patron of Star of Eden chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, treasurer of the Ware Golf Club and active in the social life of the town. The bride is a popular young lady in town. She graduated from the high school in 1904 and from Wellesley College in 1908. Last year she taught in Hopkins Academy in Hadley.

Death of George E. Winslow.

George E. Winslow, 88, died Sunday morning at 8 at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William H. Gibbs, on the Palmer road. He had been in failing health for some time, death being due to old age. Mr. Winslow was born in Barnard, Vt., December 9, 1820, and went to Ware to live when about 14. He carried on a wheelwright's shop on West street for a long time, but left Ware 30 years ago and until within six years had been away from the town most of the time, staying in Springfield, Ill., for a while. The last six years he had lived with his daughter and two years ago Mr. Gibbs moved from his farm near Gibbs crossing to a house nearer Palmer, which stands partly in each town. Mr. Winslow's wife died some years ago and he leaves two sons, George H of Washington, D. C., and Joseph W. of Lyon, besides his daughter. The funeral was held at the home Tuesday morning and was private. Rev. W. C. Townsend officiated and burial was in Aspen Grove cemetery.

Mrs. Thomas Cavanaugh of Hartford, Ct., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Joseph P. Callahan on the Gilbertville road.

Mrs Susan Ross has sold her home on West Main street to John W. Lambert. Mrs. Ross is staying for the present in Worcester, but will return to Ware later.

Star of Eden chapter Eastern Star met in Masonic hall Monday evening, several candidates being initiated. The chapters in Palmer, Enfield and Belchertown had been invited and there was a large attendance. District Deputy Grand Matron Addie M. Ezekiel of Palmer, with suite, made an official visit. Lunch was served in Grand Army hall at the close of the meeting.

Probate Court Business.

At a session of the probate court in Springfield Wednesday the following local business was among that transacted:

Administration granted in the estate of—Jennie A. Whitaker, late of Hampden, Freelon Q. Ball of Monson executor.

Accounts allowed in the estates of—Ora B. Skinner of Monson; James Smith, late of Monson.

DWELLING RANSACKED.

Thoroughly Searched While the Owner Was Absent.

DRAWERS, TRUNKS, BOXES EMPTIED

But Nothing Missing So Far as Known. Roomer Loses Revolver. Work of Tramp, Probably.

The home of Mrs. Mary D. Deland on the Warren road, known as the "Munger" place, was ransacked by burglars during her absence from home some time last week. Mrs. Deland had been away and on returning found that every portion of the house had been ransacked. Drawers, boxes, trunks, every receptacle which might possibly hold an article of value, had been emptied of its contents but nothing was missing. From the room of George B. Roby, who rooms in the house, a revolver was taken, but a gold watch and other valuables were left. The work is thought to have been that of tramps, as two strange men were seen about the place during the day and late in the afternoon.

GUILTY OF LARCENY.

Ware Man Arrested For Stealing Cloth From Gilbert's Mill.

Four search warrants were served by the police Wednesday night under the direction of Chief Maurice Fitzgerald, and a quantity of cloth supposed to have been taken from the mills of the George H. Gilbert Manufacturing Company was recovered. Three of the warrants were served at the same time in different parts of the town, and from information secured by the officers at one of the places the fourth warrant was procured for a search of the house occupied by Arthur S Moulson on South street, near the mill. As a result Moulson was arrested, a piece of cloth seven yards long being found at his house, which he admitted was taken from the Gilbert mills; Moulson worked in the dye-house for some time. It was stated at the house of Albert Trela on Clifford avenue that Moulson had been selling cloth at 50 cents a yard, and at another place searched by the police on Vernon street it was stated that Moulson had been giving away goods which had been made into garments. Seven or eight garments, made out of the mill cloth, were taken from the house of B. Milos and one short piece of brown cloth was found at the house of John Izyk on Water street, which the occupants said they had bought in the counting room of the office. Moulson did not secure bail, and was arraigned in the court yesterday morning on a charge of larceny. He pleaded guilty. Attorney George D. Storrs appeared for the Commonwealth and asked that the case be continued until to-day for sentence, pending an investigation of the police. Antoni Alszayca was arrested in Springfield late yesterday afternoon on a warrant charging him with receiving stolen property. The complaint was sworn out yesterday morning following the arraignment of Arthur G. Moulson, and it is claimed by the police that the man under arrest has been buying the cloth which Moulson admits taking from the George N Gilbert Manufacturing Company.

Golden Wedding Anniversary.

Deacon and Mrs. Nelson Randall observed the 50th anniversary of their marriage last Saturday evening, when they were given a surprise visit by about 100 of their friends. A purse of gold was presented by Selectman E. E Sargent, to which both Mr. and Mrs. Randall responded. Rev. Mr. Eno offered a brief prayer, after which refreshments were served. The Belchertown orchestra of 20 pieces furnished music during the evening. Mr. Randall is the son of Chester Randall, and was born in Belchertown 82 years ago, having spent most of his life there. For 50 years he has been an active member of the Baptist church, contributing largely to its support, and with his wife, also a member, a large factor in the social life of the church. For 20 years he was almost continuously chairman of the board of selectmen. Mrs. Randall, who was Miss Julia Tabor, was born in Chicopee Falls, the daughter of Solomon Tabor, and is 77 years old. She was married to Deacon Randall by Rev. Mr. Fay, 50 years ago pastor of the Baptist church. There were three sons, one of whom died in the West a short time ago, Albert, who with his wife resides in West Springfield, and Eugene, who with his family lives on the Randall farm in the south part of Belchertown.

Miss Poland, superintendent of schools, has been appointed general superintendent, with Miss Titcomb assistant. At present the work will be divided into two classes, manual training, which will be in charge of Mr. Thayer of Springfield, and a sewing class, to which Mrs. J. M. Perry has offered her services. Later on it is expected that a class in physical culture will be started.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Oct. 20, 1909.

It looks very much as if the contest in the coming session of the Legislature in support of the pending taxation amendment to the constitution were under way at the present hour. That, at least, is the plausible interpretation of the session, in the state house, this afternoon, of the special commission on taxation, consisting of ex-Gov. Bates, Tax Commissioner Trefry and Bank Commissioner Chapin. Some of the leading combatants in this chronic fight were on hand and the side of those who would put the screws on to the utmost extent was represented by the familiar Major Henry Winn, who formerly lived in Buckland and as a senator from Franklin county, and then moved east and rose to be mayor of Malden and has always been a foremost champion of the double doomage system of taxation. The leading figure on the other side, the side which favors the amendment, was Prof. Charles J. Bullock of Harvard. He was the leading member of the special taxation commission of 1907, and is a tax expert probably equal in ability and education to any in the state. He asked questions of witnesses and it looked as if the principal speakers had been brought there to-day by him.

First on the list was Lawson Purdy, the president of the board of assessors of New York city. What he said was strongly against our system of taxation, whereby we are obliged to tax all property at a uniform rate under the constitution. He regarded our law as badly at fault and said that if he were a citizen of Massachusetts he should exert himself to secure a change in the constitution. Perhaps as significant testimony as any which he gave was that relating to Ohio, where since 1846, they have had one of the most drastic laws it is possible to put on the books. Out there it is a criminal offense for a property owner not to make a voluntary return of his property subject to taxation, and a person can be imprisoned for failure to do it. At times they have spurts of enforcing the law, but they failed and the effect of the law has been to reduce steadily the proportion of personal property which pays taxes and the law has fallen into disuse. He told of an Ohio woman school teacher who saved $1000 and asked advice how to invest it. Acting upon apparently good advice, she invested in a public bond of $1000, paying 5 per cent. When the blank for return of taxable property was put before her to fill out, she made out a return of the bond of $1000. When her tax bill came, it was for $55. She protested that there must be some mistake, but, no, the rate was 5 and ½ per cent. So she said: "I'll blow in that $1000," and she did, spending it for a trip to Europe, for she could not afford to pay all her income and $5 a year over for the privilege of holding the bonds.

The testimony of Mr. Purdy was strongly in favor of such an amendment as is proposed for Massachusetts, permitting the classification of property for taxation. It is done in New York. No shares of any corporation, whether domestic or foreign are taxed in that state, except bank stock. No corporation property can be taxed in the state unless it is situated in the state. This system works very well. Another speaker was Judge Oscar Leser, of the court of appeals in Baltimore. The tax system of Maryland was mentioned by Mr. Purdy, as it has been mentioned previously in this contest, as exceedingly favorable to getting taxes out of personal property, for it is the so-called three mill tax and the people do not dodge it as they dodge our stringent laws for the discovery of taxable personal property. A very strong case was made out at the hearing for the pending amendment.

This week the political grapple has become firmly established by the leaders of the political parties. With the advent of the Republican speakers, the situation has changed, and there is so much oratory that there is no longer any apathy, as far as the outlook is visible from the party headquarters. Republicans tell about their great meeting in Worcester Monday night and their hallfull in New Bedford last night and are congratulating themselves on the publication of the Foss request to Gov. Draper to veto the eight hour bill. This is offset by the reports which the Democrats bring in from their trip in the western part of the state. Pittsfield, they admit, gave the party a frost, but saving that, they are well satisfied, and they tell here to-day of the open air rally in Ware yesterday noon and at West Brookfield in the afternoon, when Vahey and Foss talked to crowds, and then, in last night's rallies where the halls were full, especially in Marlboro. One of the incidents of the week has been the speech of Editor Langtry of the Springfield Union, at the dinner of the Republican editorial association Monday afternoon, trying to arouse the Republicans to the danger of the election of Vahey. The dinner was given by the Republican state committee to the editors and Gov. Draper and Secretary Groves were there to hear the alarms of the Springfield editor. As he related the matter afterward, he made a mathematical demonstration of the probability that Vahey will win, but, as he said, he cannot really bring himself to believe his own figures, for his inner consciousness refuses to believe that Draper can be defeated. At the same time he believes that the labor vote against the Governor will be large and that there are Republican scoreheads who will do what they can to defeat him.

There has been a visitor at the state house to-day with the information that there are many voters of Vahey's own class in race and religion who will not vote for him. What the evidence is for such a statement, which is quite improbable on its face, is not disclosed.

On Monday evening there was held a meeting, the continued part of which will go on this evening. It is by the independent Republicans' British American Association and aims to promote the election of Vahey and Foss. At the meeting both Catholics and Protestants were present, so that there is no division on religious lines, as there has been in former British American movements. The issue of reciprocity with Canada has much to do with the case, and it comes from the inside of the movement that there will be many thousand votes influenced. It is expected that a public address will be issued this week. The chairman of the organization is James B. Stark, one of the foremost men of that class in the state, and the secretary is William G J. Perry of Malden.

The colored brethren have recovered from their disaffection of last year over Taft and the Brownsville affair, and are loyally supporting the Republican ticket. They will have a demonstration of their own soon.

French Canadian voters are standing by the Republicans this year. The latter part of this week John B. Dufault, the secretary of the French Canadian Republican

PALMER NEWS.

WATER IS VERY LOW.

Supply in Water Company's Reservoir Falling Fast; Very Little on Hand.

Report was made to Chief Summers last evening by individuals who had made an investigation, of a scarcity of water in the reservoirs of the Palmer Water Company. The report was so alarming, and the conditions so serious, if true, that Mr. Summers and the members of the prudential committee of the fire district visited the reservoirs this forenoon. The conditions were fonnd to be fully as bad as represented. Not only is there no water (practically) in the large or storage reservoir, but that in the lower or service reservoir is at least two feet below the mark at which it is kept when there is a plentiful supply on hand. A man who has taken pains to keep tabs states that the level of the lower reservoir has fallen two feet since Tuesday night, (abont 36 hours) and that the level in the large reservoir has dropped about 16 inches in the same time. The amount in this reservoir is not enough to take into serions account, for it is a very small quantity in the angle at the lower end, barely sufficient to cover the pipe through which the lower reservoir is snpplied. In the opinion of Chief Snmmers and the prndential committee, should there be a serions fire—one which would demand as many streams as could be brought to bear for an hour or more—there would not be water enongh to fill the pipes at the end of that time.

The Palmer Water Company, on being questioned, states that the railroads were notified a week ago to begin pumping water to their tanks, usually supplied by the water company. The C. V. road began last evening; the B. and A. has been working on its pump but has not yet started it; when it will be set at work is not known. In the meantime the big new tank east of the village has been shnt off, and the road has notified its engineers not to take water at Palmer nnless absolutely necessary.

The condition is a serious one. With the water falling at the rate given above, and a stream only an inch deep and three feet wide rnnning in from the brook which fnrnishes the greater part of the snppiy, a water famine is apparently near at hand unless copions rains come soon.

BIG FAIR PROFITS.

Agricultural Society Nets More Money Than Ever Before in Its History.

A meeting of the directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society was held in the Converse House Tuesday afternoon to listen to reports from committees concerning the recent fair. The reports were most flattering, showing that the fair this year had cleared a larger sum than for many years before; in fact, it is likely that the profits this year are the largest in the history of the society, although the snm cannot be definitely figured ont until all the bills are paid. The gate attendance and gross receipts were the "largest ever," but the society has spent a large snm in permanent improvements. It was voted to pay all bills at once, and the preminms as soon as they can be drawn off. Checks for both bills and preminms will be sent out by the treasurer in a very short time. Any persons who have bills against the society which have not been presented are requested to hand them at once to the secretary, L. E. Chandler. The entire matter of the finances of the society was left with the executive committee.

HIGHWAY CENSUS AGAIN.

More Teams and Less Automobiles Traveling Than Two Months Ago.

Another highway census was taken last week at the same points as the one Aug. 30—Sept. 4, at the Cooley Crossing on the Warren road, where count was made on both the Warren and the Brimfield roads, at the creamery on the Monson road and on the Springfield road just west of North Wilbraham. Only vehicles and autos were counted. The results of both are given below and a comparison is interesting.

	First count.		Last count.
	Teams.	Autos.	Teams.	Autos
Palmer,	396	1018	459	1125
Brimfield,	175	111	314	91
Monson,	457	201	374	254
No. Wilbraham,	364	1439	390	1048
	1392	2769	1537	2518

By the above showing the nnmber of teams increased not quite 200, and the nnmber of antos dropped off about 250. Evidently the farmer has been drawing his crops to market and the weather has proved too cool for the antoists. The two totals are only 106 apart.

Foresters' Annual Ball.

The ninth annnal concert and ball of Court Palmer, Foresters of America, will be held in the opera honse next Friday evening, and the reputation of the organization for providing a pleasant time for its patrons insnres a generous patronage. The mnsic will be by the famons Flanagan singing orchestra of Marlboro, which has been heard here several times, always with the best of satisfaction. There will be a concert from 8 nntil 9, followed by a dancing program of twenty nnmbers. Special electric cars will run to Monson and the villages after the ball. The floor director will be John E. Learned, assisted by Walter G. St. John, Daniel Ahearn and William F. Gaffney; reception committee, C. H. Burns, T. A. Roche, J. P. Manning, D. P. Dnnn, J. P. O'Connor, M. E. Murphy; committee of arrangements, J. E. Learned, T. A. Roche, Walter St. John, Albert Ayres, D. W. Harrington, Oscar Bressette. The concert program is as follows:

Bondsville Man Dies in Lockup.

Xavier Belisle, 60, of Bondsville was fonnd dead in the locknp abont 7 o'clock this morning by the janitor, James Knox Belisle was before the district conrt some time ago for drunkenness and was placed on probation; yesterday afternoon Probation Officer Cnmmings locked him np for violation of the terms of his probation. Night Officer Crimmins visited him at intervals dnring the night, and on the last call—about 4 o'clock this morning—he lay on the cot asleep. When the janitor went to the locknp about 7 he was dead. It is snpposed that he died dnring a fit, to which he was snbject at times. Medical Examiner Schneider held autopsy late this afternoon.

Electric Cars Bump — No Great Damage.

A rear-end collision between two cars on the trolley line early Tnesday evening was responsible for slight injuries to one man, a motorman of the road. The trolley express car was standing on B switch when the passenger car from Three Rivers came along and collided with it in the rear. The front vestibule of the passenger car was badly smashed and the motorman, Joseph Fornier, got a cnt on the forehead and a bruised leg, neither injnry being serious. No other person was injnred.

The little danghter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Jones was successfnlly operated on yesterday for throat tronble by Dr. H. C. Cheney, assisted by Dr. Capen of Monson.

Insignificant Blaze.

An alarm from box 63 on South Main street called the fire department ont about 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon for a blaze in a small shed adjoining a barn on the H. P. Holden estate on Fox street. Before the arrival of the apparatus the fire had been put out with chemical extinguishers, and the damage is estimated at not more than $25. The cause of the blaze is not definitely known, but is supposed to have been a combination of small boy and matches.

Nash—Bennett.

Stanley E. Bennett and Florence E., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Nash, were married last evening at the home of the bride's parents in Silver Street by Rev. Frank S. Brewer of the Congregational church. Miss Iva Wiggin was bridesmaid and Herbert Nash, a brother of the bride, was best man. The groom is an employe of the Cutler Company of North Wilbraham, and a member of the Palmer Grange.

Brown—Gallup.

The marriage of Miss Nellie Fero Brown and George H. Gallnp Jr. took place at the Universalist parsonage Wednesday morning at 9, Rev. F. W. Gibbs pforming the ceremony. The only attendants were the parents of the groom. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Gallnp started on a two-weeks' trip. Mr. Gallup is head farmer at the Mass. State Hospital for Epileptics, and Miss Brown has been a nnrse in the institntion.

The Chauffeur's Rebuke.

An elderly colonel in a New York club is very inquisitive, and there is no question he hesitates to ask. The other day he saw drawn up before a hotel a fine motor car, and at the wheel of the car sat a chauffeur who had formerly been in his own employ. The colonel stopped and asked the chauffeur who his master was, how he liked his job and what wages he drew. The chauffeur answered these questions politely. There was a cold glitter in his eye, though. He was waiting for an opening. It came when the inquisitive old clubman said:

"Er—Gaston, what—er—how much did your employer pay for this car?"

"The fact is, sir," the chauffeur answered promptly, "I never had the impudence to ask him."

So Easy.

Pull Out a Hair

The Way to Tell Whether or Not Your Hair is Diseased.

Even if you have a luxuriant head of hair you may want to know whether it is in a healthy condition or not. Ninety-eight per cent of the people need a hair tonic. You can make a test yourself that you can see and understand, which will tell you whether your hair is healthy or not. Pnll a hair ont of your head; if the bnlb at the end of the root is white and shrnnken, it proves that the hair is diseased and requires prompt treatment if its loss wonld be avoided. If the bnlb is pink and full, the hair is healthy.

We want every one whose hair requires treatment to try our Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We promise that it will not cost anything if it does not give satisfactory results. Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is designed to overcome dandrnff, relieve scalp irritation, stimulate the hair roots, tighten the hair already in the head, grow hair and eradicate baldness.

Out of 100 cases where it was given a thorough, conscientious test, it grew hair on 93 heads, which should be sufficient proof that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic contains extraordinary remedial and hair-growing qualities. It is because of our knowledge of this preparation and our sincere faith in its goodness that we want you to try it at our risk.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is a clean, clear preparation which does not grease, gum or thicken the hair, and it has a very pleasant odor. We have it in two sizes, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Palmer only at our store. Lynde & Gould Palmer.

Engine and Two Cars Derailed.

The switching engine No. 316, with two cars loaded with brick and granite, was derailed on the quarry track just off the main line of the Central Vermont railroad late last Friday afternoon. The accident was caused by the spreading of the rails. The train was in charge of Conductor John Robarge, and was backing up to the quarry when the cars left the track, the tender of the engine going over the embankment. The engineer was thrown from the engine but fortunately struck in the sand, his only injury being a cut knee. A brakeman was standing on the tender and went over the embankment with it, but escaped with a cut leg and bruised knee. The wrecker arrived Saturday night and cleared the track, putting the tender and cars on the track again

Auto Meets With Mishap.

An automobile going down Factory hill, West Main street, Sunday evening about 6, met with a mishap and serious results were narrowly averted. The car, a Franklin runabout, under the registration from the Norcross-Cameron garage, Springfield, ran into the ditch and narrowly escaped colliding with a stone wall and telegraph pole. The parties refused to give their names, and it was stated at the Norcross-Cameron garage that the car had recently been sold and that the name of the buyer could not be given. The man who was driving the machine was thrown heavily against the steering wheel and had two teeth knocked out, and it required three stitches to close a cut on the chin. The automobile passed two teams, and in turning to the right of the road landed in a deep gutter bordered by a high stone wall. He was able to shut off the power in time to save his machine, but in so doing was unable to save himself. The car was not injured in any way.

Pleasant Surprise.

Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Hess were pleasantly surprised in the parlors of the Methodist church last Friday evening. They were presented with a purse containing $20 in gold. Mr. Hess went to West Warren in October, 1908, being at that time a student at Boston university, from which he graduated last June, and was recently ordained. He is a member of Eastern Minnesota conference. The entertainment consisted of a "speculation" party and there was a piano duet by Miss Mabel Moore and Miss Ruby Schott, and a violin solo by David L. McFarland. Refreshments were served by a committee composed of Mrs. Andrew W. Schott, Mrs. William H Snow, Mrs. Charles A. Dufresne and Mrs. John L. Tougue.

Death of Miss Catherine Mullen.

Catherine Agnes Mullen, 19, died Saturday evening at the home of her mother, Mrs. Delia Mullen of Reed street, after a year's illness with consumption. She was the daughter of the late Martin Mullen, and was born in Warren September 30, 1890. She leaves, beside her mother, three brothers, John of Warren, Joseph of Pittsfield and James of New York, and three sisters, Misses Mary, Helen and Alice Mullen, all of whom live at home. The funeral was held in St. Paul's church Tuesday morning at 9.

Death of Mrs. Charles W. Crouch.

Mrs. Annie L. Cronch, 65, wife of Charles W. Cronch, died last Friday morning after a long illness with neurasthenia and Renand's disease. Mrs. Cronch was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Fuller of Thorndike, but had lived in West Warren many years. She leaves, besides her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Mabel Cronch of West Warren and Mrs. Joseph F. Davis of Thorndike, and one son, Leon W. of Boston; also one brother, Edward Fuller of Thorndike.

Death of Mrs. Ellen Christenson.

Mrs. Ellen Christenson, 49, died late Tuesday night at her home on Maple street after a three months' illness with acute tuberculosis. Mrs. Christenson was born in Sweden and had lived in Warren less than two years. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Viola Lexall and Miss Siegrid Christensen. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon and the body was taken to Maynard this morning for burial.

R. H. Gay of Boston is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Tirrell of Liberty street.

Mrs. Mercy D. Bliss and Mrs. Hattie A. Joyce have been visiting relatives in Brookline.

Stanley W. Crosby of Amherst college spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. Ella E. Crosby.

Mrs. Elbridge Gilbert of Marietta, O., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Bliss of Washington, D. C.

Dr. Robert W. Hastings of Brookline spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. Mary L. Hastings of Maple street.

Miss Priscilla Shumway and Harry Scott of Holyoke spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sibley of Main street.

William Runyan of Williams college spent the first of the week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Gleason of Brimfield road.

Joseph Farrant, while hunting in the south part of the town yesterday, caught his left ankle while getting through a barbed wire fence and made a cut four inches long.

George F. Moore fell about 10 feet Wednesday morning while picking apples. He was badly bruised, but escaped any broken bones. His ladder slipped, throwing him to the ground.

On account of a break in the water pipe in the boiler room of the Sayles & Jenks Manufacturing company's plant Monday morning, it was necessary to delay starting the mill for three hours.

William Monahan, formerly of Warren and a brother of S. P. Monahan of West Springfield, has returned from Bellingham, Wash., after a four-weeks' stay. He also visited Boston and Lynn. Mr. Monahan went West with his family 25 years ago and settled in Bellingham, where his brother, Martin Monahan, then lived, and took up farming until a few ago, since when he has been dealing in real estate.

Edward Biddle, a lineman employed by the Telephone Company, fell from a 20-foot pole near the home of Louis Vimond Wednesday afternoon. He was using a hand-ax and it caught on the limb of a tree, the force of the blow striking his left hand and causing him to lose his balance. The middle finger of the left hand was badly crushed and was dressed by Dr John E. Dalton, but otherwise he escaped with only a bad shaking up.

The annual fair and supper of the auxiliary to the Warren Grange was held in Brigham's hall Wednesday afternoon and evening. There was a large display of vegetables, and there was a sale of candy, fancy articles, fruit, etc. A musical entertainment coincided with a farce entitled "Hunting for Hapgood." The committee in charge was Mrs Myron L Southwick, Mrs. Herbert N. Shepard, Mrs Albert B. Patrick, Mrs. George Elder, Mrs. Ralph R. Jones and Mrs. John Sarty.

The following committee has been appointed by the executive committee of the Men's League of the Congregational church to carry on the work of the League for the season: Entertainment, George E. Tarbell, William Robertson, Frank E. Gleason, Herbert P. Johnson and Frank Curtis; music, Frank W. Bliss, William H. Hitchcock and Oscar W. Rice; Sunday night, Charles H. Walker, W. E. Nims and William F. Taylor; committee of speakers, Rev. Thomas C. Richards, Charles B. Blair and Arthur S. Tucker; membership, James E Miller, Fred C. Barlow, Edwin S. Kneeland, Charles D. Perkins and Frank M. Gilbert.

IS GENIUS DEVISABLE?

By HARRIET COWLEY.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Whoever is born with superior mental powers must pay a penalty. Such persons are not satisfied to work in a common field. They struggle for a higher one to which admittance is denied them until their fitness for it is recognized. And how many a "mute inglorious Milton" has lived and died without any such recognition while his untalented brother has won a high position! The same is often true of one who loves madly. The very intensity of his person robs him of his coolness. He frets and fumes while a rival unmoved by sentiment lays siege to the maiden and wins her by regular approaches.

When John Gregory went to college he expected to lead his fellow students as he had led his schoolmates and afterward to lead the world as he had led his university associates. The only other being he loved except himself was Bertha Avery, and he loved her far better than himself. It was Bertha who was accountable for her lover's self admiration. She recognized his superior endowments and called his attention to them. Therefore he, believing that through them he would win and hold her love, came to set great store by them.

John was graduated at the head of his class. Not only this, but he was the college literary light of his time, editor of the university magazine and winner of all the prizes given for essays. Indeed, so marked was his success as a college scribbler that he determined to enter the field of literature. He was never quite sure that Bertha loved him—indeed, she had never told him that she did—and he did not expect to make the conquest of her heart till he could lay a laurel wreath at her feet.

John entered his chosen field encouraged by all. There was no doubt that he had very superior literary faculties. He entered the editorial service of a magazine for an income, proposing to write out of office hours. He soon concluded that to win the success he coveted he must furnish something in an original vein. To swim in the great ocean of the commonplace did not please him. The first important story he wrote was a satire on certain fads of the day. He had resolved not to embarrass his employers by offering them any of his work, so he sent his satire to another magazine. It was returned with the indorsement that it was too good for the class of readers of that particular magazine.

Meanwhile as editor he was accepting stories of one Jefferson Spangler. They were not to be considered as within the realms of literature, but they seemed to please people who had little or no literary taste. Spangler was a connection of Bertha Avery's, and she had introduced him to John, asking him to help one of whose literary ability she had a poor opinion, but who was a very "amiable, deserving fellow." John published some of the young man's productions partly to favor Bertha and partly because they helped to widen the circle of the magazine. At least so thought the editor in chief and owner.

While John was experimenting with different novelties to attract the attention of the public to his work he maintained a sort of indefinite understanding with Miss Avery. He would not ask for her till he had met the coveted success. He always had something under way or finished which he hoped would make the expected hit. Bertha encouraged him to push on and he would eventually reap the reward of his perseverance. But, though many of his works were recognized by a few as scintillations of genius, only those of which he himself had an independent opinion found their way into print. One or two stories of marked originality were published and attracted some favorable comment, but not enough to fix the attention of the public on the writer.

Meanwhile Jefferson Spangler was plowing in the field of mediocrity. In time he published a novel which met with a moderate success. John Gregory, surprised, read it, or all of it he could force himself to read, and wondered. But what was his chagrin when the owners of the magazine with which he was connected told him that the next issue would contain a likeness and notice of the "new literary light" and that they had decided to "boom" him.

While Gregory had been trying to dash in upon the public by a brilliant stroke, humble Spangler had been slowly crawling up upon it. He possessed a homely faculty of portraying the common events entering into the lives of ordinary people. Having reached a point where capital concluded that it could make his work profitable, he had nothing more to do but wield his pen. Capital did the rest. Within a few years publishers were competing for his next novel and offering him fancy royalties for it.

The next chapter in John Gregory's life was the receipt of a letter from the girl he adored announcing her engagement to Spangler. Since John had never made a formal proposal for her hand, there was no occasion for her entering into any explanation or apology. She did say, however, that she was not to marry her ideal, but people never did that.

John Gregory is getting old and is a bachelor. He is second assistant editor of the magazine that "hoomed" his rival, without prospect of ever attaining any greater prosperity. Different opinions are given as to the cause or causes of his not having succeeded, the most common of which is that "he flew too high."

After reading the public statement of this fellow sufferer given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which cured years ago, which has kept the kidneys in good health since, can be relied upon to perform the same work in other cases. Read this:

Mrs. D. H. Barnes, Main street, Monson, Mass., says: "While living in Springfield some years ago I gave a public statement recommending Doan's Kidney Pills and to-day I am pleased to confirm everything I said about them. When this remedy first came to my notice I was a sufferer from backache. I was restless at night and arose in the morning feeling tired and unrefreshed. I was so much impressed by what I read regarding Doan's Kidney Pills that I procured a box and they gave me the best of results. The lameness in my back disappeared and I felt better in every way.

A PROPOSAL IN THREE LANGUAGES.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

On Lake Como, in northern Italy, is a little cluster of hotels and shops called Bellagio. The place is near the boundary line between two countries, in one of which French is spoken and in the other Italian. English Americans, French, Italians and Germans all meet here, and the lingual condition is similar to that at the famous tower of Babel. The hotel and shop keepers, boatmen and others are obliged to continually express themselves in one of three or four languages. French is the prevailing tongue, with English second and German third.

After having finished my education I decided upon a year's travel in Europe before beginning the practice of my profession, and that summer at the height of the Italian lake season I found myself at Bellagio. The hotel at which I stopped was on the very verge of Lake Como, the water plashing against its stone and marble porch. On the evening of my arrival I dined at one of the tables on this porch. The lake—or rather this portion of it—is surrounded by mountain peaks, which stand out in bold silhouette against the twilight. On the other shore, a couple of miles away, the lights of Cadenabbia were beginning to glimmer on the line between the mountain base and the lake.

At a table on my left sat a party some of the members of which were speaking Italian, others French. Among them was a beautiful Italian girl. They were drinking champagne and chatting merrily, while I sat alone, wishing that I might even understand what they said. One of the men addressed a remark to me in broken English. I met him more than halfway and was invited to join the party.

That night I dreamed of the Italian girl, Signorina Alicia Jaconti. I had carried on a spirited dialogue with her at the table, our language being one-tenth Italian, one-tenth French, one-tenth English and seven-tenths pantomime. Every one who knows anything about love knows that as a donkey feeds on thistles so love thrives on difficulties. A man may make love to any girl who speaks the same tongue as himself and go to sleep at the same time. There's no incentive in it. But when a fellow and a girl have but a few dozen words in common and must "scratch gravel" to make themselves understood the little god empties his quiver before them.

Well, the next morning I hired one of those delightful little boats with which Lake Como abounds, each furnished with a canopy and soft cushions, to say nothing of a boatman to do the work, and the signorina and I went for a "promenade," as they call it there, on the water. Perhaps you think there was nothing for the boatman to do but to row. Not much. He spoke French, Italian and English, the illiterate chump, while I, a college bred American, knew but one language. The signorina spoke French and Italian. So, you see, there were three tongues in the party. Before starting I slipped 4 lire into the boatman's palm. He thought it was to induce him to row fast. Not a bit. I had in view a different use for him. Besides, I didn't propose that he should make me and the girl ridiculous by telling people what it was. I wanted him for an interpreter.

As soon as we were off the signorina and I, leaning back on the cushions, renewed the struggle to communicate of the evening before. It ran like this:

"Eet is ver' beellisimo" (beautiful). "Vous n'avez pas" (you have not) "aucun" (anything) "so beellissimo in Amerique."

"Not a woman in the country so beautiful as you," I replied in four languages and a superfluity of pantomime.

"Ah, m'sieur!" (Clasped hands, smiles, eyes turned upward.)

It wasn't long before I had found her hand (under a fold of her dress where the boatman couldn't see) and a current of language common to all people, felt, not spoken, ran between us with all the sprightliness of a bubbling brook. So for awhile we sat without speaking. The boatman jogged along over the smooth waters which splashed softly against the boat. The reflection of the mountains and the heavens trembling in the lake started me again.

"Votre yeux" (your eyes), I said. "Boatman, what's the French for reflect?"

"'Reflechit,' monsieur."

"Votre yeux reflechit les— What's the French for heaven?"

"'Ciel,' monsieur."

"Billy." Then to the girl, "Votre yeux reflechit les ciel."

"Ah, m'sieur!" The eyes went up and the hands were clasped.

Fortunately that all important word is much the same in several languages, all derived from the Latin. It is amor (love), amo (I love).

"Boatman," I began and stopped. I couldn't even bear to ask for a word at such a time. "Boatman," I began again, "what's that directly behind you?"

He turned, and I whispered with my lips close to hers:

"J'amo vol" (I love you).

And so with one letter of French, one word of Latin and one of Italian I did the trick.

The signorina is now my wife and since she lives in America has been obliged to learn English. She considers it a harsh language and entirely unfitted for lovemaking.

Early Prejudice Against Potatoes.

The way of the potato was said to have been barred by the prejudice that it was never mentioned in the Bible. In the Lothians it came in about 1740, the year of the famine, from Ireland, but was confined to gardens till about 1754, when it was planted in fields about Aberlady. By the close of the century it was a general article of diet. Ramsay says that George Henderson went about 1750 for a bag of potatoes to Kilsyth, where the Irish method of field culture had lately been tried, and introduced the potato into Mentieth, where a few had been known, but only in kale yards. The old folks, however, did not take kindly to the new food. Old George Bachop, one of the Ochtertyre tenants, when told by his wife that she had potatoes for supper said: "Tattles! Tattles! I never supped on them a' my days and winna the nicht. Gie them to the herd and get me sowens." It is significant that Burns, who sings the praises of kale and porridge and haggis, should have nothing to say of the potato.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Miss Ora Parent returned to her school duties in Framingham Sunday night after a few days' visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O A. Parent.

Mrs. Thomas Waterhouse Jr. and daughter Violet are visiting her mother, Mrs. Foxall, and other relatives in New London, Ct., this week.

Mrs. Ada Brown, who has been spending several weeks in the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Billings, returned to her home in Portland, Me., Friday.

Mr. Hayes of Springfield has accepted a position with T D Potter and will move his family to this place as soon as a suitable tenement can be procured.

Jerry Shea, who has been running a fruit store in the building erected by him a year ago, has closed his business and rented the building to a Polish barber.

The Ladies' Aid Society met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Charles Banister. Seventeen were present. The next meeting will be in two weeks with Mrs. A. M. Billings.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Holden went Wednesday to Bridgeport, Ct., for the rest of the week. They will visit Mr. Holden's sister, Mrs. Alonzo Woods of that place, and will also go to New York.

The Ladies' Aid society served a chicken-pie supper in the vestry of the M. E. church Tuesday evening. Nearly a hundred attended. The ladies netted over $20 as the result of their labor.

Some much-needed repairs were made on the M. E. church property last Saturday, when a new platform and steps were placed at the entrance. The lumber was furnished by T. D. Potter gratis, and also enough for a china closet for the Ladies' Aid Society.

O. F. Parent, who has been associated with his father in the grocery business for a number of years, has accepted a position in F. A. Towne's general store in Ludlow. Mr. Parent has been working for Michael Sullivan since he bought the business of O. A. Parent a few months ago, but commenced work in Ludlow Monday morning. He will have charge of the dry goods department for the present.

Miss Annie Carmody, the milliner, has moved from the rooms occupied by her during the summer to the little building adjoining which has been thoroughly remodeled by the Boston Duck Co., for a millinery store. Large windows have been put in front and a new one cut at the side which adds much to the appearance outside and inside. Miss Carmody has put in a new winter stock of hats and trimmings and also a good line of underwear, hosiery, skirts, etc., and is now ready to serve her customers in her new rooms.

Evangelistic services are being held at the M. E. church this week. Wednesday evening Rev. Geo. Damon conducted the services; Thursday evening, Rev. J. W Harding, and this evening the speaker will be Rev. C. C. P. Hiller of Springfield. Willard Hayes sang at the services Wednesday evening, and Miss Blanche Upham of Three Rivers sang last evening, and will sing again this evening. The services for the coming week will have the following speakers: Tuesday, Rev. J. M Gage of Monson; Wednesday, Rev. J. G Grace of Blandford; Thursday, announced later; Friday, Dr. J P. Kennedy of Holyoke, district superintendent.

Word was received recently by Mrs. William Taylor of the death of her mother, Mrs. A. L Doolittle, which occurred in San Diego, California, the last of September. Mrs Doolittle was formerly Mrs. George Allen, who, with her first husband, was a resident of Bondsville for many years, but had been in California a number of years. She had been in failing health for about a year and was 92 years old. She leaves, besides her husband, six children, Mrs William Taylor of Bondsville, Mrs. C H. May of Chicopee, Mrs. Emma Blaisdale of Springfield, Mrs Kedie Dickinson of Akron, Ohio, Dexter Allen of Springfield and Clarence Allen of Providence, R. I.

BOSTON LETTER.
